As a result he was considering reducing counselling sessions to one every month in view of the expense involved.

"As a government agency we're supposed to provide a service. But we're not supposed to provide a service which is non-productive," he said.

County welfare director Reginald Tucker suggested the value of the service provided by Manpower may be debatable. Discussing with counsellors puts unemployed persons in contact in the near future.

Mr. Karn said he couldn't not known how many persons were motivated to find work as a result of such sessions. But people regularly come off the welfare rolls because they have found jobs themselves.

Committee chairman Reginald Leader also believed the service should continue.

Bancroft businessman Ken Willcock said since 60 per cent of the unemployed in the county was in the northern area, it should seem much in need of job counselling.

He noted that some Bancroft residents commuted as far as Oshawa to work. The area had been designated for recreational purposes and this posed a problem in creating jobs.

It was Mr. Willcock's suggestion that no request be made to change present counselling arrangements but that service could be arranged with community representatives in the area.

Candidates' Calendar

Following is a summary of the activities of candidates in the October 30 federal election. The conventions of which The Intelligencer has been informed.

FRIDAY

Hastings - Lennox Liberal candidate Frank Follwell will be making a meeting in Belleville — particularly at the shopping centres — through the day until he goes to a Liberal rally at the Canadian Legion branch slated for 8 p.m.

The PC candidate Jack Ellis will be making door - to - door calls in Belleville before going to Bayside School at 3 p.m. In the evening he will attend a coffee party at 7:30 p.m. at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Arthurs. Later from there to an 8:30 p.m. gathering at the Legion hall in Deseronto.

NDP standard-bearer, Eldridge Brenham, will be spending the entire day visiting with voters in Dungannon Twp.

George Cunningham for the Liberals in Prince Edward - Hastings will campaign in Ravelon Twp. during the morning before making a 2 p.m. visit to Wingfield Farm Nursing Home. From there to 5 p.m. he will be canvassing door-to-door in Stirling and meeting residents of Riverview Nursing Home.

At 7 p.m. he will greet Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau as he arrives at CFB Trenton. With the Prime Minister, Cunningham will proceed by motorcade to downtown Trenton for main street-ing. Later, Cunningham will attend the official opening of Bayside Secondary School.

Conservative George Hees will attend a supporters' rally at Picton, canvassing rural Prince Edward during the afternoon hours, before going to CFB Trenton for a 7:30 p.m. meeting with Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield.

Richard Hall of the New Democrats will campaign in Wellington from 10 a.m. before going on to Campbellford for the rest of the day where he plans to mainstreet.

CN Pensioners Not Impressed

Belleville's 100-member Canadian National Pensioners' Union is cautious of a proposal made at a luncheon yesterday, asking them to amalgamate with other clubs in Eastern Canada.

The delegation from the Toronto club gave an address to the luncheon to the Club Canara, saying better representation would result if an executive position was present to preside over all clubs in the region.

The region covers eastern Ontario and Quebec, involving more than 3,000 members.

The Belleville members aren't too excited about the possibilities," said a spokesman for the club today.

It isn't so much the loss of some autonomy but the cost that would result from the amalgamation, said the spokesman.

We would be expected to pay for the amalgamation with the other clubs. When meetings were held we would have to send representatives and that costs money that we don't have," he said.

The spokesman the reason we don't particularly like the idea," said Bill Michaud. a retired railroader.

A group of Belleville members will travel to Toronto Nov. 7 for further discussion of the proposal to hear all the possibilities and advantages, said Mr. Michaud.

The Belleville group is represented in relations with the CNR, he said.

She estimates "is a very short time" she'll have about 15 completed applications on her desk.

Among projects already being prospected or involved:

—A scheme to aid young riters with learning disabilities that would see some 40 people, professionals and para-professionals working at schools;

Planned parenthood information service in rural areas.

"I'd like to see as many people as possible apply," says Susan, "from all kinds of time. Although, naturally it's best to get applications in early for processing.

LIP is as accessible to an individual as a community group or an official body, like a municipality.

"I think there is a tendency for people to be afraid that they can never get a grant. But sure they could," says Susan.

"Individuals in the community can apply if they have a proposal. It doesn't have to be an organized community group," she emphasized.

For a group of people who are unemployed can get together to create employment for themselves and do something for their community."

Much of Susan's job is given to helping applicants ensure they have properly documented their submissions.

But "the individual does have to be willing to put time and effort into making an application — and it might not get approved. He does have to be willing to sacrifice this initial time."

Minister Will Open School System's Pride

Hastings county's newest — and possibly coolest" — secondary school, the Lansdowne Public Bayside Secondary School midway between Belleville and Trenton, will be officially opened on Friday evening of this week.

Guest speaker for the official opening will be Hon. Robert Welch, Minister of Energy, Development for the province of Ontario.

Also, it is expected that Quinte riding member, Health Minister Hon. Richard A. Potter, as well as other local dignitaries will be on hand for the ceremonies.

School principal Linton Read said that the general public is cordially invited to attend the official opening and to inspect the new secondary school education facility which went into service with the opening of the fall school term.

Farmers' Union Endorsed

PICTON (Staff) — Members of local 333 of the National Farmers' Union have been advised locally by the New Democratic Party that it has accepted the Liberal government's stand to "seriously look" at legislation which would give the NFU full bargaining power for all Canadian farmers if the union had the backing of 51 per cent of the farm community. The party's policy view was revealed recently by agriculture minister H. A. Olsen.

Kenneth Marriott, president of local 333 said the NDP has said it will accept certification of the proposal with a figure of 50 per cent plus one member.

Although the campaign headquarters of the Progressive Conservative Party in the Prince Edward-Hastings riding was contacted by local 333 of the NFU, no reply has been issue dto date.

Stanfield

base only minutes before Trudeau arrives.

Stanfield will land at the base about 6:05 p.m. for a 15 to 20 minute press conference with local media representatives. On hand at the base here will be candidates George Hees and Jack Ellis, both riding mates of later Dr. R. T. Potter and the province's education minister Robert Welch.

Stanfield will leave by helicopter for Kingston after his CFB Trenton visit.

Theologian Questions Inevitability of Death

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

An eminent Roman Catholic scholar yesterday deemed death unnatural and looked to a "foreseeable future" that would be confronted with human immortality through medical technology.

Not only that, Rev. Arthur Gibson declared every religious leader should support with enthusiasm any medical research that may aid the conquest of death.

Even a different priest, before a different audience, such statements might have emerged as startling.

But Father Gibson, author, theologian and professor at University of Toronto's St. Michael's School of Graduate Studies — whose academic involvements embrace a diversity of interests from church history to science fiction — is widely renowned for refreshing attitudes.

And his audience, concerned professionals and lay people, were participant in a symposium seriously involved with a sensitive issue: reflections on death and dying.

The symposium, at the Four Seasons Hotel was a key event of the annual meeting of the Ontario Medical Association's Belleville district. And the theme aroused the concern of doctors, lawyers and clergy with a contemporary dilemma: Definitions of death in a time when life-prolonging technology and techniques have cast doubts on the validity of traditional clinical concepts.

The association organized the gathering of necessary clinical and out of town professionals and involved lay people to discuss with Father Gibson, Belleville surgeon R. F. Morgan, called "the most difficult problem."

But with his scholastic stature and reputation, it was Father Gibson who evoked much of the accuracy.

For the Christian Christ's resurrection was symbolic of the conquest of death, he said.

He supported a theological view that belief in Christ's death and resurrection meant that the event "cancels death finally — although "it does not remove the sting of death — for the moment."

In an interview later, Father Gibson restated his belief that human immortality was likely since "it's incalculable what could happen in 20 to 30 years because science is speeding up all the time."

He noted only about two major killer diseases were still unchecked — cancer and cardio - vascular diseases, and already strides toward their elimination were being made. If the problem of cell degeneration could be solved, he saw "no reason why" immortality could not be achieved.

But, for the present, he said the symposium, despite what might be believed of it, was what theologians may write of the afterlife, for most people facing death, "it takes all of the courage of which a human being is capable."

Other aspects mentioned by Father Gibson:

Misguided comfort — Too often religious persons attempting to relate to a dying person cringly attempt encouragement by comparing death to a culminating event. "And I long for some dying person to say: 'Wonderful! Then you change places with me!'"

Over - zealous support — There's a tendency for the healthy person to imagine they owe a dying person certain support. Care must be taken not to reduce dignity by doing more than needed.

Atheists — Whatever his religious belief may be, it means a leap into the unknown. I can only bow my head in genuine respect . . . before the person facing who does, and must face death with dignity, believing it the end of everything."

Capital Punishment — Doctors should examine the morality of this "very, very carefully" as a healing profession. The death cell must be the "most ghastly" of all approaches to death. States cannot be excused from "putting a human being deliberately into a situation which we deplore when God puts him into it."

JACK EVANS

Jack Evans Will Run For Council

PICTON (Staff) — Jack Evans, news editor of the Picton Gazette, today announced his decision to stand for office as town councillor in the December elections here.

He stated he is primarily interested in serving the community and would like to see business in Picton run as efficiently and fairly as possible and working toward as much progress as the town can handle."

Born in Belleville Mr. Evans is a graduate of BCVI and before entering the newspaper world received three years' experience in banking.

Mr. Evans later became a news reporter and worked with papers in Lindsay and Stratford. He is married to Prince Edward bureau chief for the Kingston Whig-Standard in Picton in 1963 and has resided in the county since that time.

He was named news editor of the Picton Gazette approximately three years ago.

Mr. Evans has a wide background of community service and affiliations with service groups.

He acted as secretary-treasurer of the Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce for three years and was chairman of its industrial promotion committee.

Mr. Evans is secretary of the Quinte's Isle swimming pool committee. He is a former member of the Picton Kinsman Club. He is married and has four children.

Milk Production Increases

Steps taken by the Canadian Dairy Council and the Ontario Milk Marketing board to increase national milk production have paid off.

This is the report of W. K. Wright, of the Prince Edward County Milk Committee, who in his October newsletter says that Canadian milk production increased by 2.2 per cent in the first six months of 1972 with Ontario making up most of the all-Canada increase.

Prince Edward County producers in the same six-month period produced 8.3 per cent more milk than last year.

But the trend in milk production continues toward fewer operators as is indicated by the figures which show the number of producers marketing milk through the Ontario Milk Marketing Board has decreased since April 1970, by 2,871 producers from 22,- 000 to 19,129. There are now 8,311 producers marketing Grade A milk and 10,347 marketing Group II milk.

From January of this year to the end of August there have been 407 producers convert from cans to bulk shipping and 91 cream producers changed to milk production.

In the same period, 772 producers left the industry with 173 new producers commencing operations.

Mr. Wright says that the changes in milk production levels indicate that Ontario producers will produce industrial milk if they receive reasonable returns for their efforts.

Canada ranks eighth in world milk production, ranking behind the USSR, USA, France, West Germany, Poland, the United Kingdom and Italy, with The Netherlands, Australia and New Zealand following closely behind.

Last year, milk production in the USSR totalled 182.763 million pounds, with Canada's total being 17,177 million pounds.

PUC Predicted for Sidney

WALLBRIDGE (Staff) — Sidney councillor Glenn Meyers speculated last night that provincial authorities will require further subdivisions in the township to be serviced by sanitary sewers.

He also believes Sidney will be compelled to get into the public utilities business within the next year.

Council Tuesday engaged in a wide-ranging discussion of sewerage matters and established a consensus before a closed-door meeting of the Quinte area service board meets on Thursday.

Reeve Jack Bush stated policy decisions may result from this private meeting that would affect the future of Sidney for the next 25 years.

Sidney is taking the position it wants to buy water from Belleville and Trenton utilities commissions and draw up agreements by which these commissions service water lines in the township.

Reg McCurdy, a councillor, said "this should be done until we can afford to do otherwise."

However, discussions are now proceeding on the possibility of building a new water filtration plant for Batawa-Glen Miller.

If this goes ahead, it is likely Sidney would maintain the system at its own fledgling Public Utilities COmmission Consideration may follow on the question of having this staff maintain all water lines in the township.

There was no ready answer given the question of connecting Sidney water system to the Belleville-Trenton system.

On the matter of sanitary sewers, it is expected subdivisions and industries between Belleville and Trenton south of Highway 401 will feed effluent to expanded sewage treatment plants in Belleville and Trenton. The Trenton plant would also serve Glen Miller and Batawa.

The possibility of a Lake Ontario water pipeline appears remote, with Trenton in strong opposition to it. This has been brought Sidney to the conclusion services will likely have to flow from expansion of existing facilities until Sidney can establish its own independent water system.

Craftsmen At Loyalist

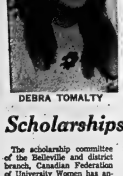
The conference, from 1 to 10 p.m. Saturday and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday, is sponsored by the Eastern Ontario Craft Council.

The Council's purpose is to bring together craftsmen to promote good design and techniques and to explore and expand the development of crafts.



At this weekend's conference, eight craftsmen will demonstrate their skills in rug hooking, ceramics, leather craft, spinning and weaving, wood carving, jewelry making, painting and drawing and chair caning.

So that everyone can watch each demonstration, each craftsman will give four one-hour demonstrations each day.

Theme of the sessions is marketing and design for the craftsman and a panel discussion will feature several experts. They are Charles Morgan, marketing service division of the ministry of industry and tourism, Al Venn, his assistant, Mrs. Elizabeth Cera, marketing supervisor of the Ontario Craft Foundation and Bernard Bedore, regional director of the Ontario craft foundation.

The Eastern Ontario Crafts Council covers the area from Belleville to the Quebec border and all territory north of this line. Members of the public interested in crafts are welcome at the conference.

The fee for the two days is $6, including a Saturday buffet dinner and Sunday luncheon at the college. The fee for one day including the meal is $3, and those wishing to view the exhibits and demonstrations can attend for $1.50. Those attending for the complete one or two-day sessions are asked to make reservations by telephoning regional vice-president Norm Cabsey at 962-9534 or the Belleville Recreation Department at 968-6754.

NDP Tack

In these closing days of the election New Democratic Party leader David Lewis continues to hammer hard at his "corporate welfare bum" theme' to the exclusion of virtually any other issue or any indication of what course his party would take in the unlikely event of it being in a position to form a government.

In a recent interview Mr. Lewis was asked about communities heavily dependent on branch plants — Barrie for example, which has 30 such plants, most of them American — and he replied: "There is no question where industry exists now, that is the basis for jobs, and it doesn't matter to the fellow working whether the industry is foreign-owned or Canadian-owned."

But there was a note of warning in the NDP leader's remarks, for later in the interview, while acknowledging that Barrie "gets its work from mostly foreign-owned companies," he expressed "regret that we allowed it to happen — that 10, 20, 30, years ago we had not been ready to take steps to produce more Canadian-controlled manufacturing."

Well, we may agree with this hypothesis, but where would Barrie and other communities like it, including Belleville, be today were it not for the establishment of plants with parent companies in the United States? Isn't it unrealistic to suppose that Canada, which even today has a population of only 20 million or so, could have reached any degree of prosperity without foreign capital and industrial know-how?

Today moreover, Canadians still go on vacation in aircraft of U.S. or British manufacture and drive cars from plants that are offshoots of U.S. interests. Yes we are heavily dependent on others for much of our progress in the world today. Mr. Lewis seems to agree, indeed he has no alternative. He is not, he insists, talking of throwing foreign-owned firms out of Canada. . . "what we are saying is that steps must be taken to lessen the degree of foreign control of the resource industries which are almost entirely in foreign hands — mining and gas and oil."

The NDP leader does not say how he would go about this, but we can see that an element of control — and this is implicit in any socialist doctrine — is what he has in mind. But he carefully avoids any mention of specifics where NDP policy is concerned, but it is inevitable it would involve control of one kind or another over private and corporate activities, and it would mean nationalization of industries. It is these areas — those of which Mr. Lewis makes no mention — that makes us suspicious of NDP motives.

The Globe and Mail touched on this recently. The newspaper acknowledged that Mr. Lewis was an effective campaigner but it went on to warn that one of his effects had been "to take the spotlight off the broad issues of socialism."

"It is one thing," said The Globe, "to vote for a party because of agreement with its position about a particular industry; it is quite another to vote for a party that would change the whole nature of nationalisation, labor policy and income distribution. . ."

Where Did It Start?

A while back we were asking if anyone knew the precise origin of the term Little Spain as applied to Prince Edward County. Sure it sticks into Lake Ontario as Spain does in relation to the Mediterranean, but there, really, the comparison ends. In any event we seem to have drawn a blank. No one has hazarded an opinion or claimed to have a precise explanation. We have even run into a dead end while questioning Prince Edward farmers attending Rotary's annual rural-urban meetings. Now then, who did start it all? Does anyone know?

Winter Chore

Snow shovelling? For the young and those adults who are in good health, this is good exercise. As the years advance though and the heart functions less effectively, it can be a killer.

Recognizing this, City Council in Toronto is initiating a program whereby people over 65 can have snow shovelled from sidewalks in front of their homes without charge.

Example of Expo and Munich

Montreal Olympics Could Cost Taxpayer A Pretty Penny

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — A few concerned taxpayers are trying to pin down Prime Minister Trudeau on what commitments the federal government might be making to the Montreal Olympics.

With long memories, they pursue Finance Minister Marcel Mazzolan Drapeau promised that it would cost Ottawa and the federal taxpayers a mere $20 million to stage Expo 67.

Nobody seems to worry, for sure, even now, but how much it did cost — and if they do, they are not telling — but some hint of the total price-tag was dropped two years ago in Parliament when the government disclosed Ottawa had paid $140 million of the Expo bill.

That is seven times the $20 million Mayor Drapeau had promised would be the limit.

Difficult though it may be to believe, it is a fact that a final accounting of Expo still has to be made.

Even before the books are closed on that one great extravagance, Mayor Drapeau is planning another orgy of spending for other people — including your money.

When he bagged the Summer Olympics of 1976 for Montreal, the expansive Mayor, whose "can-do" attitude was built by the rest of Canada to accommodate Expo, gave the same old promises.

It would cost Canadians gigantic practically nothing — only a few million — for Montreal and Quebec would foot the bill.

The pledge looks good on paper — as long as that paper is not part of a government ledger — because neither Montreal nor Quebec has any money.

And the Montreal Olympics are going to cost hundreds of millions.

The Winter Olympics in Tokyo cost $700 million and last summer's games in Munich $900 million with all the bills still to come in.

So, apparently bearing some of these facts and figures in mind some of the taxpayers on Toronto City Hall election shows in Western Canada have been confronted by the Prime Minister with questions about "how much" this time for Montreal.

Catch is that Mayor Drapeau keeps changing his tune and so the Prime Minister is put always able to sing the same soothing song.

Only five months ago — too short a time for him to really forget — Mayor Prime Minister coolly committed $500 million in what he called "public works" to his Olympics.

Trouble is he did not say whose $500 million.

Ottawa, while there could be no "special" federal funds for Montreal, related the Prime Minister, Mayor Drapeau would be able to secure some Ottawa financing through what he called "established programs."

He is on record with this: "Mayor Drapeau is asking the federal shared-cost programs which apply across the country will be used in some way towards the games — and to this we have no objection."

Mayor Drapeau mentions $500 million in "public works" and the Prime Minister talks of "established programs".

Well, there will be the Olympic Village housing 15,000 and costing $120 million of which, under "shared-cost programs," the federal and Quebec provincial governments would provide 75 percent under existing housing legislation.

The Village would qualify, the government has explained, because after the games it can be converted under the name of "urban renewal" into low-cost public housing.

Then there is the $100 million five-mile extension to the Transcanada Highway in downtown Montreal eligible for federal funds.

Include the 18-mile, $200 million extension of Montreal's subway system, to serve the Olympic Village, and remember Ottawa's commitment to aid in urban rapid transit development.

Not to forget, either, the press - radio - Tv - cinema centre for 4,000 information people, each one of them to have a private room with radio, closed circuit TV and a six-door transport — the whole complex with its own clinic, theatre, pool, sauna, gym, lounges, dining rooms, and bars to be "architecturally landscaped in a garden."

Count into the bill $60 million for an 80,000-seat stadium — $35 million for a swimming pool complex seating 10,000 in the stands . . . a bike track with 5,000 seats . . . archery and rifle ranges and all the rest that goes with summer sport.

While there is still time — and four years is not too much for the taxpayers, in their own financial self-defence should continue hearing down hard on the Prime Minister for a fire, no ifs or buts, pledge on the size of the federal contribution to the games. Mayor Drapeau's changing figures just are not good enough.

Contemporary Movie Scene Reflects Changing Times

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst

How is the man-in-the-street, the average citizen forced to change his values and attitudes under the influence of great events? This is the meat of the social historian and critic, the kind of guy a less-sophisticated era called a keyhole watcher.

Today, the most effective social historians—telling us fascinating things about ourselves under the pressure of the Second World War, Iko bomb, the pill and a swift technological change—are the movie writers and producers.

A case in point is the fascinating and also funny film, "Summer of '42." About how teenage boys in America's wartime summer and how one of them found out about sex in a poignant, and to some, offensive way.

The girl, a rather absorbing and pretty young woman, is the newest of war widows, a brief honeymoon for her in that wartime year was all the time she would have with her soldier-husband, killed in the far-off Pacific. The three boys are on the verge of becoming men and soldiers some day soon, if not veterans of Guadalcanal in 1942, certainly of the invasion of Nazi Germany in 1945.

Curiously, the film is not so much nostalgia as a tale told about ourselves in those years a far-off time to the young. Even more curiously, it is the young who so often are the best social critics of an earlier decade they either didn't know or remember or vaguely from pushing their toys around the living room floor.

Another movie, this time the Canadian—or more exactly French-Canadian—"Mon Oncle Antoine," is a masterpiece of film writing about a small company-dominated town in Quebec, probably of the late 1930s before The Quiet Revolution and the age of identifying Anglophone villains.

But again throughout this subtle, award-winning piece, there are hints of the external factors, changing religious and social values brought about by great external forces which are influencing the Catholic and puritanical ways of the people of old-back Quebec.

"The Last Picture Show" is another in this genre, revealing with mixed nostalgia and social comment, the bleak somnolence, authoritarian 1950s when the young and the elderly revolted and were mainly content to grow up "straight," get a proper education, fit into a matrimonial and family pattern prescribed by their "straight" parents.

But there were hints of the coming storm, the intense rebelliousness of the late James Dean on the screen, Marlon Brando's first hit film about the aimless and the anti-social motorcycle gangs.

Social comment has accelerated so much that our own decade, the 1970s, gets analyzed and dissected almost before the event itself—for example the Vietnam War—has run its course.

Marshall McLuhan, overheard at a Toronto party some years' ago was commenting about the date of social criticism and the effects on it of sociology about our two past wars.

"If there is the third and nuclear event," mused McLuhan, "it will be over in less than 24 hours which means for World War III we must find sociology in advance!"

Nevertheless looking at great events through the lives of anonymous men and women, recreating their hopes, fears and frustrations through the camera or the paperback, is the present and inevitable relief from the heroic view of history—the curse of so many Anglo Saxon historians.

Winston Churchill had his moments. So did Field Marshal Montgomery, the man of self-confessed 20/20 vision about military decisions. Franklin Roosevelt had a success but Pierre Mackenzie King spoke to his dead mother. The real stuff of history.

Politics and Electioneering Fun for Davis

QUEEN'S PARK
By DON O'HEARN

One man who probably will be genuinely sorry to see the end of the federal election campaign, no matter what the result, will be Premier Davis.

For his campaign has peaked too, as you may have noticed, has Mr. Davis.

He has been much more on the hustings than ever was expected of him.

One reason for this undoubtedly has been that he is a strong party man.

He has evidently wanted the PC's to win.

But another reason, and one perhaps not so well known, is that he loves politics. The hurly-burly, campaigning, hand-shaking and other bits and pieces that go to make up grass-roots politics.

Other leaders tend to look on campaigns as a necessary chore.

Here in Ontario both our last two men, John Robarts and Leslie Frost, and particularly Robarts were in this category.

Campaigning to them was hard work.

To Davis it is play, good fun.

And, incidentally, through this one can draw a relevant lesson that though all leaders' attitudes in common is almost all cases they have distinct differences.

The desire may be based on many different motivations.

There have been men who have been very largely motivated by the craving for personal prestige.

There have been some at the other end of the scale who have had an almost evangelical dedication to help their fellow men.

But whatever the end, power is the means, and the desire for it is to be found in all leaders and leadership aspirants.

However when you get beyond the deep driving principle of leadership and into secondary motives and purposes there are strong personal differences.

Thus with our three men being discussed Leslie Frost loved the tradition of politics and he also had a keen feeling for its strategics.

Robarts developed a strong liking for parliament.

He revelled in the debate, the contest of it.

And Bill Davis likes the politics.

He grew up with politicking as others grow up with hockey or baseball—he was on the hustings at 14.

And in this campaign, rather than making sacrifices, as some have suggested, he would have been having the time of his life.

U.S. Approves Anti-Pollution Funds

WASHINGTON (CP) — While Congress and the president traded expressions of pious concern Wednesday, with an eye on the election campaign, a United States commitment to Dan Canada to clean up Great Lakes pollution was virtually assured of funds.

The battle over a water-pollution control bill pitted the democratic-led Senate and House of Representatives to be generous in financing environmental measures against President Nixon's equally strong commitment to reduce federal spending.

Congress won, and by a massive thrust that eventually forced the president to think twice about tying the whole legislation in his campaign for re-election.

The bill, which authorizes an astonishing $24.6 billion over three years for water clean-up in the United States, was originally passed by large majorities in both Senate and House.

After pondering the situation until the last possible minute, Nixon decided to veto the bill, calling it "appropriately to budget-wrecking." He had originally proposed spending $5 billion a year for three years.

Both houses of Congress voted overwhelmingly Wednesday to override the presidential veto and the bill will become law. The vote in the Senate was 52 to 12 and in the House 347 to 23.

Nixon had threatened in his veto message that even if Congress "rammed" the bill through, he would not "default" on his responsibility; he would use all the powers of the presidency to restrict the amount of money actually spent.

He also warned that he would campaign against Congress' spendthrift ways. But the fact that most of his fellow Republicans in both Senate and House voted to override the veto may indicate the amount of political capital Nixon can safely make.

Whatever the outcome had been in the battle between White House and Congress, observers felt that money to back up the Great Lakes program, a part of the over-all bill, would be available.

When President Nixon and Prime Minister Trudeau signed the agreement in April in Ottawa, it was estimated the program would cost the U.S. some $2 billion, mainly for sewage treatment plants and for removal of such detergent nutrients as phosphorus from water discharged into the Great Lakes.

The familiar Swastika that the Nazis display as an emblem of the German people, does not belong to Hitler or even exclusively to the "Aryans". The present level of the water in the local harbor is exactly two inches higher than the highest recorded mark of summer level, a condition caused by old time residents of the water front. The lowest mark ever recorded was three years ago when it was five inches higher, which is three inches lowest it has ever been. The waters in the Bay of Quinte and the harbor reach the highest level in the past four years. All this was revealed by marks left on the piers in front of Jack Roblin's boat house.

Work in the construction of the moving picture theatre which C. C. McCarthy is having built here is progressing satisfactorily and it is expected will be open for business early next year.

The "Made in Belleville Exhibition" under the auspices of the Belleville Industrial Bureau of which Mr. J. Owen Herity is the manager, is now in full swing at the armouries. The exhibition was formally opened by Col. Cockburn, the Lieut.-Governor of the Province. There is a great array of exhibits here in Belleville and the exhibits are attracting the attention of large crowds of citizens and visitors from other places.

Parcost May Save Public $10 Million

TORONTO (CP) — An Ontario health ministry official said Wednesday the province's Parcost drug program may save the public $10 million next year by reducing drug prices.

Dr. Allan E. Dyer, chief of drugs and therapeutics, told the Ontario Hospital Association convention that trends toward drug substitution have produced economic benefits. He said strict standards assure that interchangeable drugs are of equivalent effectiveness.

Dr. Dyer said competition fostered among drug manufacturers by the program has resulted in price reductions in 39 products between April and the present time.

The reductions, averaging 26 per cent, were in high volume drugs such as antibiotics, oral anti-diabetic drugs and a drug used for arthritis.

Thirty-four products have gone up in price in the same period, he said, and "have been distinctly related to non-competitive categories and, with the exception of oral contraceptives, are in low-volume products."

The Parcost competitive price index issued in April and another issued in October show oral contraceptives have increased by one to 21 cents for a month's supply.

Dr. Dyer said oral contraceptives are not interchangeable partly because of differences in packaging and the lack of competition.

He said "it appears we may have to review our position here to increase competition" because Parcost is concerned about the price increases.

WATER CRISIS

PRINCE GEORGE, B.C. (CP) — "The community of Parkridge, near here in north-central British Columbia, will undergo a serious water shortage this winter, says Steve Pitwinski, acting chairman of the Parkridge Heights Improvement District. Pitwinski said residents are conserving water, but still will be faced with a crisis because the improvement district is unable to make repairs to the only well.

Bilingual Service Goal Is Criticized

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government's goal of a functionally bilingual public service by 1975 was criticized Wednesday by Douglas Fullerton, chairman of the National Capital Commission.

"I don't think the target date is manageable at all," Mr. Fullerton told about 100 high school students from across Canada attending a symposium here.

"I don't think it should even have been brought out."

Mr. Fullerton was replying to questions from French-and English-speaking students during the opening session of the four-day conference.

Building a national capital which will become a symbol of Canada is a "fuzzy goal," said the man entrusted with much of the responsibility for such a job.

"A tougher goal," he said, is the expansion of the role of French-Canada in the capital.

Mr. Fullerton said the French-English tensions in the capital—both in terms of language and the region's physical and political development—were the base of most of the criticism aimed at the NCC.

Montreal Consumers Seek Datsun Ban

MONTREAL (CP) — A Montreal-based consumer group said Wednesday it has launched legal proceedings against Nissan Datsun, requesting that the company be forced to recall immediately all 1971-73 Datsun 240-Zs now on the road in Quebec.

The Automobile Protection Association (APA) released at a news conference a copy of an application for an interlocutory injunction which the association said was made in Quebec Superior Court Wednesday.

Ann Landers

A Letter for Drug-Users

by Alice Bumble

Dear Ann Landers: If I had prayed to a God I didn't believe in, I would have died. I was about to the end of my rope. I couldn't read the letter I am about to write a year ago I would have drugs were off. I went as high as 1000 milligrams of Seconal a day and as low as a person can go and still pray that every person who is and still come back. Now my problems, but at least I desperately to hang on to life. I lems were overwhelming me and I wasn't sure of anything.

Please don't worry about me, Ann. I'm getting professional help and crawling back, an inch at a time. I'm going to make it, but it's a slow process. I just know my letter connects with some cat who is where I was a year ago. If such a person is reading this now, please don't say, "You're a nut. It won't get me. I can handle it. It's all in your head." What do you have but your head, man? Your head is a masterpiece of electrochemical engineering. Don't mess it up with drugs like I did.

—Peace In The Pacific Northwest

Dear Friend: I can well nothing except my thanks for a moving report from someone who's been there. God bless and write again.

Dear Ann Landers: Last week my boss dismissed a fellow worker. Now I am doing her work as well as mine. He made a big deal out of the raise I'd be getting. Today my cheque came. The raise is $3 a week. What do you think?—Morristown Lackey

Dear Morris: If you are able to handle your work as well as the work of a colleague, you didn't have enough to do—or the recently departed co-worker wasn't doing much, which may be why she is no longer there.

Your letter reminds me of some interesting statistics. The United States department of labor announced that 90 million people in that country are employed. It didn't say how many were working.

The afternoon session was opened by Emmanuel UCW of Foxboro, who also collected and dedicated the offering.

Holloway St. UCW conducted a very interesting "Hot Line" program entitled "The Church at Work with Youth". This led to breaking up into discussion groups for questions pertaining to the church's role in today's problems such as: generation gap and fostering revolutions.

An invitation was accepted from King St., Trenton, UCW to hold the annual meeting in their church in October 1973.

The closing devotional was in charge of Frankford UCW.

The Rev. John Morrison, minister at Camilton, expressed his appreciation to the women for using his church for their rally and closed all proceedings with his benediction.

MADOC—Mrs. Olive Hook, Corpse look home the $1,000 cash prize from the Land O'Lakes Lions Club's Millionaire Night recently. The event was held in the Tweed-Hungerford Community Centre in Tweed, where a bounteous smorgasbord was prepared by women of the Land O'Lakes area.

Throughout the evening, games, raffles and a social time was thoroughly enjoyed by all those attending.

Roy Holtzhauer, president of the Land O'Lakes Lions' Club was well pleased with the success of this third annual event. The proceeds from the evening go toward eye sight preservation and other local causes.

This is the second time for the Millionaire Night to be held in Tweed, the initial one having taken place in Flinton.

Golden 50th Celebrated in Tweed

TWEED — Over 175 friends and relatives of Mr. and Mrs. Albert McTaggart attended the reception in the basement of St. John's United Church, October 3, to offer congratulations and best wishes on the occasion of their golden wedding anniversary.

Cards and congratulatory messages were received from friends and relatives. Among those received was a plaque from the provincial government, presented by Clarke T. Rollins; congratulations from the Right Honorable Robert Stanfield, Leader of the Opposition, W. R. (Bill) MacDonald, Lieutenant Governor representing Her Gracious Majesty, The Queen, and Lee Grills.

Mr. and Mrs. McTaggart are active members of St. John's Church, Tweed. Mr. McTaggart is an elder of the church. He is a life member of the Loyal Orange Lodge No. 292, Elliott's, and a past-county Master of Centre Hastings.

Mrs. McTaggart is a faithful institute member and a devoted United ChurchWomen's worker.

Both are active members of the Senior Citizens' Club, No. 209, and Mr. McTaggart is a past president of the Tweed Club.

The honored couple was married at the home of the bride's parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Martin on Oct. 3, 1922, by the Reverend George Grant, of Thomasburg.

Mr. Albert Martin, brother of the bride, and the late Mrs. J. R. Forester, sister of the bridegroom were witnesses.

Mr. Martin was present at the anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. McTaggart have two children, Mrs. Elvin Holland (Marjorie) of RR3, Madoc, and Milton of Tweed. They have four grandchildren.

Club Activities

Hastings Manor Auxiliary

The October meeting and birthday party of Hastings Manor Auxiliary was held at Hastings Manor with the president Mrs. Bertrand, welcoming visitors and members.

All reports were given and it was decided seven flower bowls were sent to manor patients in Belleville General Hospital during the month and 22 visits were made.

Birthday cards for the month of November will be sent to the residents by the auxiliary members and the Foxboro United Church Women.

A bingo will be held in the manor auditorium, on November 7.

Mrs. Yates, craftroom supervisor, announced that a party in the form of a county fair will be held for the residents.

A memorial service will be held on November 10 at 2 p.m.

A request for donations of old stockings, egg cartons and any old jewelry and birthday cards was made. Mr. York expressed his appreciation for the assistance of the auxiliary members at the anniversary tea and bazaar held at the manor recently.

At the closing of the business, the members met with the residents celebrating birthdays in October, in the auditorium for the customary birthday party. The eldest guests present were Mrs. Amy Wardle, 92, and Mr. Charles London, 91.

Lunch served by the auxiliary was under the convenorship of Mrs. J. Kilburn, with Mrs. Christie and Mrs. Hayton pouring tea.

Is Discrimination Learned?

By DORIS CLARK

Would you say that racial tolerance is a character value? I think it is.

Discrimination between races and colors is something which a youngster is not born with. he learns. This is evident from the way little ones are not even conscious of the differences between them and their playmates—even though an adult may see decidedly oriental features or Negroid skin tones. Or a definitely Native Indian lad.

With the world shrinking the way it is, it behooves us to project ourselves into the feelings and points of view of people who, on first glance, are different from us. We have much to learn from our Indian brothers, from the Europeans who have paid us the compliment of moving to our abundantly rich country; and from learning how to like anyone who is human.

We cannot do away with violence by being violent. We cannot build One World by allowing prejudices to grow. And it is the duty of every right thinking parent to help our young ones to see this now, early in life, while there is still time to keep us all from beating each other's brains out.

Dear Doris: Has the medical profession in the last few years come up with a cause for stuttering? Is there any cure for it?

It used to be thought to be entirely due to nerves. Is this true? — My Son Stutters

Dear Stutters. Nervous tension is still to blame, especially in the case of a young child. Between two and five he may try to say something, get stuck, try over again. Your job is to find out what is making him tense.

Ignore the stuttering, relax and help him to relax. Listen patiently.

Fatigue may be one cause; the hammering child needs more rest than other children. An emotional shock may mean you must calm his fears, feeling him pour out all his anxiety, and ignoring it if he stutters.

If he has been forcibly stopped from thumb sucking or nail biting, or from using his right hand when he is a left-handed child, these things may start him stuttering.

Work towards peace, serenity in the home. Keep excitement down; and avoid household wrangling, and quarrelling.

I am attaching a list of literature available which may help; but if the stuttering is severe you may need the help of a speech therapist.

Confidential to Dolls and Goblets: I can't go into the antique business,' says the Antique Collector says, the doll's head and other antiques may really be worth something.

The logical thing is to take the lot to a reputable antique store and get the advice of the proprietor. He will have many catalogues showing current prices of assorted antiques and where yours may be welcomed.

Caouette Attacks Aid to Gay Group

MONTREAL (CP) — Real Caouette, Social Credit leader, attacked Criminal Code sections on homosexuality Wednesday as he took his campaign into Drummond riding, home of Industry Minister Jean-Luc Pepin.

Mr. Caouette told a rally that there are not three or 10 sexes of mortals, but only God's "And it's He Who decides if good or evil will come to the world."

Mr. Caouette said he was annoyed that a group of Toronto homosexuals was given a federal grant.

He said he could not accept taxing taxpayers' money "to maintain homosexuality."

Criminal Code amendments made by then Justice Minister Pierre Trudeau in 1967 allowed homosexual practices, previously illegal, amongst consenting adults in private.

Thinks Drowned Man Slain

CALT, Ont. (CP) — Assistant Crown Attorney Kenneth R a c said Wednesday he has a strong suspicion that a man found dead in a pool of water last August was murdered.

Mr. Rae told a coroner's jury investigating the death of David William Mattice, 41, that he had suspicions about who murdered the man, "but no bad drowned, "at the hand of a Whither Canada?

TORONTO (CP) — "Where is Canada heading, and what can I as an individual Canadian do to play a positive, effective role?"

This is the question that person or persons unknown" and recommended that the location be cleaned up.

The area is at the rear of an abandoned factory and is overgrown with brush. Nearby is a pond four feet deep at the foot of a small waterfall. It is a short distance from a liquor store.

Prime Minister Trudeau, campaigning for Monday's federal election, wishes he had been asked on open-line radio and television shows.

Mr. Trudeau says it is a query "that I have been repeatedly urging Canadians to ask themselves."

"What kind of a Canada do they want?

He made the comments in a bylined article in The Globe and Mail. Mr. Trudeau, Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield, and David Lewis, New Democratic Party leader, were asked to submit articles on questions they wished they had been asked on open-line shows.

The Globe and Mail says that all three accepted, but Mr. Stanfield and Mr. Davis later withdrew.

In his article, the prime minister says that 'the more I talk with Canadians, the more I am confirmed in my feeling that the great majority of them do indeed care about the land as a whole.

"They care not just about their own future, but about the direction our whole society is moving."

Pollution Controls Shut Down Furnaces

WELLAND, Ont. (CP) — Three of seven ferro-alloy furnaces at the Union Carbide Ltd. plant will be shut down at midnight Tuesday, in accordance with an emission abatement schedule for the plant.

A company spokesman said Wednesday the 30-year-old furnaces are obsolete and could not practically be equipped with pollution controls required. The furnace closing will affect 70 employees of the labor force of 1,000.

Under the Ontario air management branch abatement schedule, the other four furnaces will be closed by December, 1974.

In the new line of Panasonic black and white TVs, you'll find some that give you a lot more than you'd expect. You'll find them with a cassette recorder added, with an FM/AM radio, with a digital clock. And you'll find them without...great-looking TVs in a wide choice of models.

Would you believe a TV set that pops up out of an FM/AM portable radio? The 5" diagonal screen gives a crisp and clear picture. A sunshield is included so you can watch while you're out-of-doors. Slide-lever controls add a touch of big-set luxury. You carry it like a brief-case; it has a die-cast handle, and the circuitry is all solid-state. Battery and AC adaptor/charger are built-in. You can take it with you if it's The Pomona TR-475C.

Now that you've decided on Panasonic TV, how do you want it? With, or without?

One neat luxurious black and white TV. 20" of top quality picture in a beautiful walnut grain cabinet you'll be proud to put on your new credenza. It's got Set-and-Forget tuning to eliminate fine tuning when you switch channels. Speed-O-Vision gives you an instant picture; slide lever controls help you make the settings you want, fast. See the beautiful Lanny AN-239DC.

Here's a TV set that stands on its own three feet. Turns on them too. It's all solid-state, inside a space-gray carpeak. 6" diagonal screen. Speed-O-Vision—lighted channel indicator. The electro-tuner won't ever suffer from contact wear, because it doesn't have any contacts. A TV set that'll do you many a good turn. The Orbitel TR-005C.

A black and white TV that comes in three colors—antique white, harvest gold, avocado green. With a 12" diagonal screen, it's easy to move from one room to another, slim because of its 110° tube, and exceptionally good-looking. It's got Speed-O-Vision, built-in antennas, recessed handle, and a detachable tinted screen. You'll find it easy to fit onto a shelf or cabinet top because all the controls are up front. Yes, a TV set can be a decor feature. The Lantana AN-142C.

It's got Continental good looks—and an all-solid-state chassis. A 12" diagonal set that you'll enjoy looking at even when it's off. Detachable dark tint screen. With Speed-O-Vision and a unique electronic feather-touch power-switch, for a fast picture. The Milano TR-542C.

One of Accused Robbers Identified

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — One of five men being tried in connection with last December's $1.2-million bank robbery here was identified by a bank employee Wednesday as being involved in the robbery.

John Fennell identified Donald Dermi, 36, of Toronto, as a gunman who appeared in a doorway between the bank's two counting rooms on the Saturday morning the robbery took place.

Mr. Fennell, who was supervising the counting of Windsor Raceway receipts, was the first witness to describe the actual robbery to the county court jury.

He told the jury he had been at the bank for about an hour when a man carrying a 26-calibre snub-nosed revolver appeared in the doorway.

Three other masked persons Fennell said, but he was not later appeared in the bank. Mr. able to identify them.

Taxes, Inflation, Jobs Top Issues

OTTAWA (CP) — Taxes, inflation and unemployment are pegs on which all parties hang political promises in th eelection campaign that comes to an end with voting Monday.

They ranged from promises of $100-a-month government cheques for all adults, pledged by Social Credit Leader Real Caouette, to a stand-pat statement by Prime Minister Trudeau that the Liberals do not foresee major tax reductions if re-elected.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield said the personal income tax rate should retain the present temporary three-per-cent reduction, due to expire at the end of this year, and grant a further four-per-cent reduction as well.

And George Hees, his colleague and former trade minister, said the tax cut should be at least 10 per cent.

New Democratic Party Leader David Lewis said there should be a general tax cut of six to eight per cent, and a shifting of the tax burden from individuals onto the big corporations.

All of the opposition parties said a three-per-cent tax cut made last year and due to expire Dec. 31 should be continued. But Finance Minister John Turner said he couldn't do so unless assured of enough revenue from other sources.

Adjusting taxes is the way the opposition parties believe they could deal with price inflation running 3.3 per cent ahead of a year ago and an unemployment trend rate of 7.1 per cent. The Liberal view is that major tax cuts would only make the situation worse.

Mr. Stanfield, Mr. Hees and Mr. Lewis say that tax cuts would be an incentive to growth and counter the high cost of living. Mr. Trudeau and Mr. Turner have said the economy already is expanding as much as it can, and further incentives would over-heat the economy, push prices higher and cause a loss of competitive export markets, thus causing more unemployment.

Papers Run as Service

FREDERICTON (CP) — Irving morning papers in Moncton and Saint John, N.B., are losing money but are kept going as a public service, Saint John publisher Ralph Costello said Wednesday.

"Both the Saint John Telegraph-Journal and the Moncton Times have sustained heavy financial losses . . . but have continued to publish," he told the newspaper combines trial in New Brunswick Supreme Court.

However, when questioned by Prosecutor William Hoyt, he said the New Brunswick Publishing Co. Ltd., which publishes The Telegraph-Journal and The Evening Times-Globe, showed a profit of $261,000 last year.

Mr. Costello told of losses in other publishing ventures of the Irving family. He said the Maritime Farmer, a semi-monthly farm paper, loses up to $35,000 a year.

The monthly Atlantic Advocate, associated with the Irving-owned Fredericton Gleaner, lost up to $40,000 annually and a commercial printing plant at Fredericton went into red ink by a similar amount.

He said it was "not financially impossible" to start another daily newspaper in New Brunswick but "it would be a precarious undertaking" that no one had tried for many years.

K. C. Irving Ltd. and three of the kinds of plants on earth are green.

Mr. Costello gave the total circulation of the five papers involved as 108,000 in a province of about 600,000 population. The Telegraph-Journal sold about 30,000 copies, The Times-Globe 28,000, The Moncton Times and Transcript 35,000 together and The Gleander 17,000.

9 Former Ministers Are Running for PCs

OTTAWA (CP) — Should Robert Stanfield be in a position to form a government after Monday's general election, the Conservative leader would have a long list of former cabinet ministers from which to choose.

He also would be in the unique position of having a former prime minister prominent on that list of possible cabinet colleagues.

Although 77, former prime minister John Diefenbaker remains strongly active and is generally considered the man to beat in Prince Albert, the Saskatchewan riding he has represented without break since 1953. He was first elected to Parliament in 1940 in the Saskatchewan riding of Lake Centre.

Mr. Diefenbaker is one of nine former cabinet ministers running for the Conservatives in the Oct. 30 general election.

With one exception, Paul Hellyer, all were members of Diefenbaker administration.

Alvin Hamilton and Michael Starr were candidates along with Mr. Diefenbaker in the 1968 Conservative leadership campaign won by Mr. Stanfield.

George Hees, again the Conservative candidate in Prince Edward-Hastings constituency, records among his achievements as trade minister a drive for

Constant Alertness Hemophiliacs' Lot

By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

Life for a person suffering from hemophilia, as well as his family, is one of constant alertness.

Known most commonly as the Royal Disease, because of the spread of hemophilia through the royal houses of the world in the past hundred years, this relatively rare disease of the blood prevents clotting necessary to slow both external and internal bleeding.

Young hemophiliacs such as 16-year-old Bill Prowse and three-year-old Christopher Waller, of RR 3, and RR 7, Belleville, respectively, are typical of the more than 400 sufferers in Ontario.

Chris is luckier than the teen-aged Prowse boy. He was born shortly after the discovery of cryoprecipitate, a blood concentrate that when injected into the vein, provides the necessary clotting factor. His life is nonetheless painful when a crisis occurs, but relief is more readily available.

Before the discovery of cryo, and in many cases still today, direct transfusion of blood plasma was the only relief to the hemophiliac.

Bill's mother, Mrs. Audrey Prowse, explains: "The main problem is internal hemorrhages. These are really serious if they occur in the joints. The pressure on the nerves can destroy cartilage by costing the joints and damages tissue, making it spongy," she explained.

She said over a period of time, repeated crisis hemorrhages have caused painful crippling. Many sufferers spending their remaining years tied down to wheelchairs, crutches or sick beds.

Cryoprecipitate was not brought to Belleville, until 1968, although discovered four years earlier. During those pre - cryo days, Mrs. Prowse says, delivery of plasma from Toronto was very slow and not until facilities were well established at Belleville General Hospital did the family experience any sense of security.

Even today, many hemophiliacs keep a list of blood donors readily at hand in case they need an emergency transfusion.

Because the disease remains a mystery to so many people, Mrs. Prowse says the hemophiliac often has a hard time explaining his affliction to hospitals, schools and government.

There was an attempt several years ago to institute a system of supplementary teaching for the bedridden hemophiliac child. Because youngsters like Bill lose approximately 50 per cent of their school years due to recurring crisis periods, parents and spokesmen are constantly appealing for shut-in teachers.

While improvements have been felt in the Belleville area Mrs. Waller says it was not until about two years ago that home teaching came up to reasonable standards.

Both mothers agree lack of education of the public is one of their worst problems, that is a particular strain on the development of a child along normal paths.

Most parents tend to become over-protective of their afflicted child, often resulting in the young hemophiliac feeling trapped and restricted.

Billy himself admits to the problems of growing up. He says the hemophiliac can lead a fairly normal life if not overly restricted, but "sooner or later he finds out he can't do things like jump on a motorcycle and ride downhill.

"But he must find out by experience," he says, acutely aware he would discover any guidance in his younger days and get involved in rough-sports than he should have.

"I agree I didn't understand then."

Both Janice Waller and Audrey Prowse agree it's extremely difficult not to fall in to the over-protective trap. "You're obviously super," by seeing your kid hurting" Mrs. Waller pointed out during the interview.

"There's a fine line between being overprotective and not protective enough. If you don't take care when they are young, they can be crippled. It's a hard decision to make at times."

But with the development of cryo, the hemophiliac child can enter a whole new world, taking part in many of the normal childhood activities previously forbidden.

Previous to the 1950s, approximately 80 per cent of the world's hemophiliacs died in infancy. The figure is now reversed.

However, shortages do occur. This week, supplies at Belleville General Hospital have become low because of a slowdown in blood donors. The result is an illustration of how closely bonded the hemophilia society becomes.

All the Belleville hemophiliacs know about his problem and all are following his progress, keeping their cryo card readings to essential minimums.

One of the many worries facing the hemophiliac is the future job market. Because hemorrhaging can be brought in by anything from a paper cuts, bumps or bruises to simple nervous tension, regular hours are difficult to keep.

The solution for many hemophiliacs lies in the world of self-employment, where several hours, even days off, won't be critical to a livelihood. Jobs of this nature are also limited. Because long periods of standing, handling of tools and the like are virtually taboo, the hemophiliac is usually restricted to the service type job.

But unlike many countries, relatively normal lives for the hemophiliac in Canada are possible. The prohibitive price of cryo — $2.50 per unit, for anything up to 10 units per transfusion every two days or so, and not counting crisis periods . . . often leads to near - poverty for most families in countries such as the U.S.

In Canada, the Ontario Hospital Insurance Plan pays for almost all the bills. However, they will not pay for such items as syringes, butterfly needles or transfer packs if home-administered.

This makes it necessary for the majority of the hemophiliacs to become regular visitors to hospitals, where the transfusions can be made. Many doctors insist on caring for their patients first - hand, but a growing number have taught the so-called "bleeder" patients to mix their own cryo and saline solutions and make the transfusions themselves in the hospital.

For both the Prowse and the Waller family, the future in Belleville is brighter. While Billy grew up in happier times than young Chris will, both boys have a better chance with the present medical breakthroughs.

To this end, and for the betterment of children like them, their mothers, as members of the Belleville-Kingston chapter of the Canadian Hemophilia Society, this week are distributing literature in the Quinte area, in an effort to educate those who know little or nothing about the afflictions. The city has also designated this week official Hemophilia Week.

Follwell Adds Platform Planks

In short, Follwell is saying special efforts should be directed toward the welfare of three groups, the senior citizens, the young and the farmers.

He said, in a statement released this morning, in view of the fact a recent senior citizens' survey in Belleville showed that 67 percent of the elderly cannot afford to pay for prescriptions and medical bills, a case should be made to Ottawa for increased assistance to the pensioner.

Follwell said he will tell the government, if elected, there is an immediate need to increase the old age pension by at least $20 a month.

"I want to be on the government side and tell the government to help these people now," he stated.

In another plank of his platform, he says the basic Opportunities for Youth and Local Initiatives Programs have been effective, citing examples of the OFY-funded Belleville furniture exchange and the LIP Hastings Trail scheme.

Follwell says he wants to see that these "essentially sound programs" are improved and ensure that they are implemented locally at every opportunity.

"I intend to give my full support to all groups and agencies in the riding that are contemplating making applications for assistance under these programs . . . we must take full benefit of OFY and LIP. Sure they can be changed — I want them improved too — but we want them to work for Hastings. That is what counts," he says.

Last, the Liberal candidate says he will expend efforts to represent the interests of riding farmers in Ottawa.

"More federal help is essential (and) I want to see that, as new policies are developed for rural Canada, the particular problems of Hastings are not neglected."

Follwell says "I am not a farmer but I am concerned about the rapid decline of agriculture in this area. We have the markets, we have the people but we need more help."

In conclusion, he pledges to assist farmers who are trying to help themselves by supporting their just bids for assistance from federal programs.

Earlier, the candidate had announced he would try to secure federal assistance to have railway tracks through Belleville relocated through a new $200-million assistance scheme that was laughed earlier this month, as well as the application to have bayshore Hastings included in the new Trent National Park.

In addition to setting these goals," the candidate adds, "I want to continue the individual service to constituents that the former MP Lee Grills was so good at. However, new effort must be made to make federal government aware of all areas of this large riding . . . it is only through individual service along this line that the people will be fully satisfied with their government."

Sidney Council OKs Subdivision

WALLBRIDGE (Staff) — Sidney township council without the next week will sign a subdivision agreement with Maurice Rollins Construction Ltd., giving the go-ahead for the building of 180 more new homes in the Montrose Road area.

Tentative agreement was reached at a council meeting here Tuesday night with Rollins representative, Bob Marcotte, outlined plans for the development to be known as Montrose farms.

The new residential district will be north of Highway 2, just west of Montrose Rd.

Marcotte told Sidney councillors a pillared entrance would be built to the single-family housing area and that names of streets (like Greenfield Trail) would reflect a rural, country living theme.

He said Rollins will be willing to work with the Quinte Planning Board in the preparation of zoning schedules for the district around Montrose Rd.

Committee OKs Trail Project

Belleville and District Employment Committee yesterday endorsed the application of the Prince Edward-Hastings trail project for a $5,000 Local Initiatives Program grant.

But that doesn't mean other LIP projects won't receive similar support.

Alderman Arnold Orr said the committee should limit endorsation to one LIP application.

He said he hoped to have a list of city projects for the committee's November meeting.

If Elected, Ellis To Disclose Holdings

MADOC (Staff).— Jack Ellis, Progressive Conservative candidate for East Hastings, last night said here he would voluntarily plunge on public record a list of any business holdings if he is elected.

Highlight the remarks during a speech to a party rally at the Kiwanis Centre that drew hundreds local Conservative politicians to speak on his behalf.

Ellis said he would take such steps because he felt they would be required of an elected politician.

Mr. Ellis said he would divest himself of any undeveloped land in which he had any interest not, less than two months after the election.

Small private businesses in which he is involved already are being placed in a holding company, he said. The majority of the company is in the name of his wife and family and the balance in trust.

"Since there is no requirement for this and no method set out. I will of my own accord, file with the county court judge a complete list of my holdings. In this way I can be completely free to do a vote my attention entirely to the riding.

"I'm convinced that I could be fair to all parts of the riding without going through all this, but by doing so there can be no doubt in anyone's mind."

One way he hopes to help the riding is in seeing contacts in industry to provide more employment, he said.

Mr. Ellis recalled he was the founder of the Belleville Industrial Commission in its present form.

"During that time the foundation of the present industrial growth in Belleville was laid. Plans for servicing of industrial parks were formed and are still being carried out.

"Most of this type of growth is a team effort, but I can honestly support the fact that one major addition to Belleville's industrial family was accomplished by my personal efforts," he said.

A number of other new industries were brought into the city during the provincial government's Ontario Development Corporation.

Former MP Lee Grills criticized the Liberal government for what he called multi-million-dollar handouts as "death-bed repentance" to buy votes at the last moment.

Cryo Solution Prepared

'Royal Disease' Once A Crippler

In 1964, a Stanford, California, woman researcher discovered a simple way to produce a concentrate of essential blood clotting material that has spelled a new life for most of the world's hemophiliacs.

Hemophilia . . . the word itself spells out fear as an old wive's tale of royal blood disease and uncontrolled bleeding, is not a common affliction. In fact, there are probably more than 400 hemophiliacs in Ontario, seven to eight in the Belleville area alone.

While the numbers are few, so are the treatment facilities available, to the hemophiliac, who often must spend weeks in hospital and often requires immediate medical attention.

Hemophilia is an inherited disease of the blood in which a vital clotting factor is missing. The most common form is transmitted through the female to male offspring, the affliction usually is apparent soon after birth.

Over the years, research reports have indicated there are two other deficiencies that produce symptoms similar to the more well-known factor of hemophilia. One of these conditions can be discovered in female children, thereby eliminating the concept that the disease is male-determined.

There is no cure for this disease, which can be traced back to ancient Hebrew writings.

In an attempt to educate Canadians to the true picture of hemophilia, the Kingston-Belleville branch of the Canadian Hemophilia Society is conducting a massive information distribution program in the Quinte area this week. Schools will be visited and books set up at the Quinte Mall.

One of the myths organizers hope to dispel is that of the "bleeders". This common colloquial reference to hemophiliacs, while not entirely untrue, is very much exaggerated.

It is true that minor cuts, even bruises, cause the hemophiliac to bleed, but the more common problem is serious internal bleeding.

The small child shows frequent evidence of his affliction when he begins to crawl. Bumps, bruises and pressure on the knees often cause internal bleeding. Tongue and lip bites are particularly troublesome because they are difficult to control.

In the past, most hemophiliacs suffered crippling joint deformities as the result of unchecked bleeding into the delicate and confined joint space.

At times bleeding can start without the person injuring himself. The pain is excruciating. Over the years, the repetitive swelling makes joints stiff. Until recently a life consisting of wheelchairs, crutches and beds, was all most hemophiliacs could expect.

Because of the danger of internal bleeding and external eruptions, the life of a hemophiliac is a guarded one. As a child, he is usually restricted from engaging in the rough and tumble play of a normal child. In more severe cases, the child is often virtually a prisoner of his affliction, unable to partake in anything beyond rudimentary activities.

This leads to frequent re-bellion and frustrations. Many boys openly challenge their condition in an attempt to lead a normal life, leading to painful recovery periods in hospitals.

Until the introduction of the clotting factor, known as cryoprecipitate, the only major breakthrough for the hemophiliac was translation of the whole blood or plasma. This was and still is, a most expensive method of treatment, unfortunately the most readily available. Cryoprecipitate is not easy to come by when available, thereby making it necessary for constant supplies of whole blood and plasma, in case of an eruption.

In Canada, treatment is heralded as the best in the free world. In many remote articles written on the subject, Canada is recognized as the one country in which hemophiliacs can live with any hope of a normal life. Medical insurance and government grants pay for almost all treatment expense.

The U.S. ranks as one of the worst. As Frank Schabel, president of the Canadian Hemophilia Society stated in a recent magazine article: "If I were a large number of hemophiliac, then Canada is one of the very best countries to live in and the U.S., one of the worst. Here the blood is donated free by the donors to the Red Cross. In most parts of the U.S., you've either got to get your own donors — and you can imagine the difficulties of finding that year — or pay for the blood. Cost of the cryo and its administration for a crisis can run above $100."

Another, and serious problem, is the attitude of medical centres. Although a growing number of hospitals are prepared for emergency treatment of a hemophiliac, case histories are full of reports of indifference and occasionally refusal of immediate treatment.

The numbers of sufferers attest to this. Because they are few in number, many doctors have not come in contact with hemophiliacs. Hospitals often don't realize the time factor involved with a crisis. The longer a hemophiliac waits for transfusion, the greater the pain, swelling and recovery time.

A few hours waiting for treatment, can often result in weeks of hospital recovery, and the threat of permanent damage.

Carefully prepared literature is available from local chapter members and from their national headquarters at 190 St. George Street, Toronto, for treatment and counselling for parents who must bear the burden of watching over afflicted children, is offered.

Counsellors Find Unhappy Homes Root of Problems

Secondary school guidance counsellors find their biggest problem is the large number of students with emotional disturbances caused by unhappy homes.

Members of the Belleville and District Branch of the Canadian Federation of University Women learned guidance at a recent meeting, when Larry Richardson, head of counselling services at Moira Secondary, Tyendinaga Institute, addressed them.

Students from unhappy homes are insecure and don't know their place, Richardson said. They are often trouble-makers, because personal happiness and security have a great bearing on educational achievement. "The pressure of a high standard of living and poor preparation for parenthood are largely responsible for students' emotional problems, said the counsellor.

The role of the guidance departments in schools has changed from that of advising on courses and vocations to dealing with individual students' academic and personal problems.

Because there are about 35,000 different kinds of positions it is difficult to help a student who has no idea of what he wants to be.

A guidance counsellor is sometimes an arbiter, a peacemaker and a walking encyclopedia. He is also a public relations man, acting as a communication link between staff, students, administrators, officials and parents.

Mr. Richardson finds young people willing to help others and the students at PCIU are encouraged to participate in community activities, to help learners, and to visit nursing homes and shut-ins.

Potter Sits In

The closed session at the Four Seasons Hotel also involved representatives from the OMA and College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario in discussions with local doctors.

Gilbert Breaks Rangers Loose

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The fact that New York Rangers aren't tearing the National Hockey League's East Division standings apart can't be blamed on winger Rod Gilbert.

The Rangers, expected to

ROD GILBERT

supplant Boston Bruins atop the East after escaping almost unscathed from the rival World Hockey Association's raid, finally showed signs of emerging Wednesday night with a 6-1 rout of Philadelphia Flyers.

It gave the Rangers their fifth win in nine games but with a tie they are still in fourth place behind the NHL's only undefeated teams—Buffalo Sabres, Montreal Canadiens and Detroit Red Wings.

Gilbert, the 31-year-old veteran of 11 Ranger seasons, hasn't been idle. The Montreal native collected two goals, his sixth and seventh of the season, for a career total of 251.

He became only the third Ranger ever to reach the 250-goal mark and still trails Andy Bathgate's 272 and Camille Henry, with 256.

Elsewhere Wednesday, Buffalo continued unbeaten with two second period goals to salvage a 2-2 tie with Boston, Toronto Maple Leafs blew a 3-1 lead but escaped with a 4-3 win over Minnesota North Stars and Atlanta Flames edged California Golden Seals 4-3.

Tonight the Canadiens try to reclaim first place at home against St. Louis Blues while Chicago Black Hawks, co-leaders with Pittsburgh Penguins in the West, visit Boston. Detroit tries to stretch its six-game win streak at Philadelphia and Atlanta is at Los Angeles Kings.

Gilbert, who also picked up an assist on linemate Vic Hadfield's second period score, is ahead of his early-season pace a year ago when he wound up with his best ever year — 43 goals 54 assists and 97 points.

The Rangers contained the Flyers for such a degree, New York goaltender Gilles Villemure faced only 19 shots, including Gary Dornhoefer's shot that escaped him early in the third period and Bill Flett's shutout.

Flyers' goalie, Bob Taylor, was on the receiving end of 49 Ranger shots including 17 in each of the first two periods.

Tim Sullivan, who pulled into a first-place tie with Montreal on the strength of their split-end-of-the-season, trailed 2-0 after the first period and lost veteran goalie Roger Crozier between periods with an injured back.

But Buffalo's Flying Frenchmen, Gil Perreault, Rick Martin and Rene Robert, continued their hot streak when Robert scored his fifth of the season. It gave the line 20 of Buffalo's 32 goals and stretched Perreault's point string to eight games.

Perreault leads the NHL scoring race with 20 points and Martin is goals with nine. But it was veteran captain Gerry Meehan's first goal of the year with assists after Robert's score that produced the tie and Dave Dryden, replacing Crozier, held Boston scoreless.

Pierre Jarry and Dave Keon scored third-period goals at Minneapolis to produce the Toronto victory and send the Leafs into a sixth-place tie in the East with Boston and Vancouver Canucks.

The North Stars get all three goals against rookie goaltender Ron Low, who replaced Jacques Plante when the 43-year-old veteran injured his glove hand slopping a shot early in the second period with the Leafs up 1-0. Plante apparently has broken little finger.

Defenceman Brain Glennie, who got Toronto's first goal, set out the third period. He is believed to have a torn rib cartilage.

Perreault Paces NHL Pack

Gil Perreault of Buffalo Sabres has moved alone into first place in the National Hockey League scoring parade.

Perreault has a total of 20 points, four points more than team-mate Rick Martin who has 5 goals and 11 assists. The Sabres' line of Rick Martin, Perreault, and Robert have a combined total of 48 points, on 20 goals and 28 assists.

Wills Waivered

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Shortstop Maury Wills, who stole more than any player for league baseball player in history, was placed on waivers Wednesday by Los Angeles Dodgers, who also offered him an instructor's job.

Wills, recently turned 40, has been little used this season. 10 years after he broke Ty Cobb's mark by stealing a record 104 bases.

A Dodger spokesman said Wills had been offered an instructor's post to work with players on fielding, batting and base running at the club's spring training and also with its six minor league farm clubs.

Wills, who batted .220 in 71 games with the club last season, has a career total of 586 stolen bases. Under the waiver rule, major league clubs have until Monday to put in a claim, after which he would be a free agent able to negotiate his own contract.

Popein Picks Up Providence

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Providence Reds, under first-year coach Larry Popein, have faced many problems this American Hockey League season, but have a remarkable record considering they have played nine consecutive games on the road.

The Reds, who finished fourth and lost out to Boston Braves in the first round of the playoffs last spring, raised their record to 6-2-1 Wednesday night when they thumped New Haven Nighawks 9-4 and widened their lead in the Eastern Division to three points over the idle Nova Scotia Voyageurs.

Blazers Still Stone Cold

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Derek Sanderson, John McKenzie and Bernie Parent should be enough potential for any fledgling World Hockey Association team to make a success of its inaugural season.

Apparently it isn't.

McKenzie, Philadelphia Blazers' player-coach, has been sidelined with injuries suffered in a pre-season game; Sanderson has been conspicuous by his absence anywhere but the penalty column, and Parent has been the victim of an anemic offence.

Gorman Leads Jr. 'A' Scoring

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Dave Gorman of St. Catharines Black Hawks has moved into the scoring lead in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series.

League statistics issued Wednesday show Gorman with two goals and three assists in the last week and he now leads with 18 goals and nine assists for 27 points in 11 games.

Doug Gibson of Peterborough Petes has moved into second spot with 13 goals and 12 assists, tied with Wayne Dillon of Toronto Marlboros, last week's leader, who has 10 goals and 15 assists.

The leaders:

Gorman, St. Cath	18	9	27
Gibson, Peterb	13	12	25
Dillon, T	10	15	25
Goldup, Tor	8	15	23
Mark Howe, Tor	10	12	22

Kidoff, Sarn	10	9	19
Aeduono, St. Cath	7	12	19
Dunlop, Ott	5	14	19

The Blesers had it all together for one period Wednesday night before Parent was removed with an ankle injury and the rookie Cleveland Crusaders jumped on veteran Marcel Paille en route to an 8-2 victory.

the second of hist hree goals started the blitz at 6:56 and was followed by Gerry Johnson, Paul Andrea and Gerry Pinder.

Two former Toronto Maple Leafs — Wayne Carleton and Guy Trottier—constributed two goals each to Ottawa's fourth consecutive victory. It shot the Nationals into a tie for third place with Les Nordiques of Quebec, who were idle.

Can Quintes Sting Hornets?

Belleville Quintes will be looking to take some of the sting out of the most potent lineup in the OHA Senior A hockey league when they face the Galt Hornets Friday night.

The defending league champions are currently tied for first place in the standings with a 4-2 record, while the Quintes are deadlocked for fifth with the Brantford Foresters.

One factor in the Quintes' favor however, will be their perfect 3-0 at home. They have beaten Kingston, Owen Sound and Brantford on home ice while losing return matches to the same three teams.

Three New Faces

Three new faces have joined the ranks of the BMBA. Jim Crouchman (on left) assumed the responsibilities of president Monday, while Mike Bradshaw (sitting on right) was elected vice-president. Scott Lawson, the young man holding the bat, this year played his first games for Cabievue in the Tadpole division.

Carr Leads Cavaliers

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Philadelphia 76ers wanted to break their six-game losing streak, but Cleveland Cavaliers, with a seven-game losing streak of their own, had other ideas.

Cleveland, in last place in the National Basketball Association Central Division, had to stave off a comeback by the 76ers for a 113-108 victory, their first of the season.

The 76ers, in last place in the Atlantic Division, fought back from a 101-88 score to pull within three points at 109-106, but Austin Carr, who finished the game with 35 points, scored the Cavaliers' last four to beat winless Philadelphia.

Fred Carter led the 76ers with 30 points while Lenny Wilkens had 25 for the Cavaliers.

In other NBA games, Milwaukee Bucks beat Buffalo Braves 109-97, Baltimore Bullets whipped Detroit Pistons 115-109, Los Angeles Lakers topped Houston Rockets 112-107 and Atlanta Falcons edged Seattle SuperSonics 118-115.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Mickey Davis led a Milwaukee comeback. The Bucks had led by 14 points at the half but trailed 74-73 in the third quarter. Jabbar scored a total of 22 points in the game while Davis hit six in the crucial surge. Rookie Bob McAdoo hit 16 for Buffalo.

AL FERGUSON

The Quintes will be hoping that right winger Al Ferguson continues his early season scoring efforts in Friday's meeting with Galt. "Fergy," a 30 goal scorer last season, has counted five times in the Quintes' first six outings.

One new face at the Belleville practices was that of goalie Ed Janowicz who attended a pro hockey camp this fall before failing to catch a spot with the Kingston Aces.

Game time Friday night is 9 p.m.

Curling Commences

The Quinte Curling Club began play in the Opening Mixed Bonspiel Monday, in which 136 rinks are entered. Finals in four divisions will be held Saturday, with the "A" division fighting for the Charles Lovett Trophy.

Expos Show Interest In Minor Baseball

By AL ZARAS
Staff Sportswriter

The Montreal Expo's, Canada's only member of the National league, have shown interest in young ball players of the Belleville Minor Baseball Association, according to Leo Bradley, Montreal's representative for eastern Ontario. Bradley stated at a general meeting of the BMBA Monday that Mel Didier, Director of Scouting and Player Personnel and his assistant Rodger Bruiotte, have conveyed the desire to meet with the newly elected BMBA executive.

The Expo's, aware of the gold mine of baseball potential living in Belleville have stated that they will hold and scout a day-long spring clinic, in order to determine the extent to which they would consider forming a farm club organization in the Belleville area. The Expo's will also scout the Golden Bat Tournament.

Pittsburg Pirates, of the majors, have already expressed their interest in ball players here, having held and scouted spring clinics for the past three years. This year, the Pirates were so impressed that of the six Ontario players invited late in August to their Niagara Falls New York Tryout Camp, four were from the Belleville area.

As an inducement to young players to join Canada's only major league team, Bradley said the Expos' guarantee that "any player the Expo's signed will play ball in their farm system."

Bradley further said, "they won't sit on the bench to have their ball playing skills become rusty." There is a possibility, however, that the Expo's will become discouraged by the lack of juvenile and junior teams in Belleville, and instead look to Kingston or Peterborough which have fully developed systems.

Jim Croughman, originally hailing from Windsor, Ontario, and Mike Bradshaw, a Belleville youth with many years of minor ball under his belt, are the only two new faces on the BMBA executive elected Monday.

Croughman, the new president taking over from George Mills, has been involved in minor ball since his arrival in Belleville in 1957, last year helping to coach the BMBA Midget All-stars.

Last year's officers returned to the executive this year are: John Emerson as first vice-president, Jean Reid as third vice, Cy Bockrek as secretary, Charles Bartlett as equipment manager, and Ron Lupenette as director of tournaments. The umpire-in-chief is yet to be named by executive.

Coville Confirms Threat

KINGSTON (Special) — Orley Coville confirmed his position as a triple threat to harness drivers at Frontenac Downs Wednesday.

Coville reined home three winners last night to repeat his previous week's performance. The Brockville native recorded wins with Al Freda Adios, MacDuff K Magic and Steve Granton.

In the featured ninth race, John's Prince turned the mile in 2:09.4 to take the win from Minado, driven by Fred Jarrell. Earlylark's John, the other pre-race favorite was a late scratch.

Larry Zobedes guided Flying John to a 2:12.6 win in the tenth race of the night, while fellow Belleville driver Gerry Walsh had captured the third by sending Lady Violet direct over the mile in 2:15.

Other Wednesday winners included: Rose Argentoli (first), Bill Rose (sixth), Peter McNab (seventh) and Rennips (eighth).

Berger Reported Selling Alouettes

MONTREAL (CP) — The Montreal Alouettes today joined La Presse in speculating that Sam Berger is about to unload the floundering Montreal Alouettes franchise to U.S. interests.

But the Montreal owner spent much of Wednesday denying the reports as "speculation only" and added that "no one has had made me an offer, concrete or otherwise."

La Presse reported Wednesday that Berger, who purchased the Canadian Football League franchise for a reported $1.2 million in December, 1969, was ready to sell the team to someone already involved in professional hockey and basketball.

The newspaper speculated that Robert E. Schmertz, a New York millionaire involved in the ownership of Boston Celtics of the National Basketball Association and New England Whalers of the World Hockey Association, could fill these qualifications.

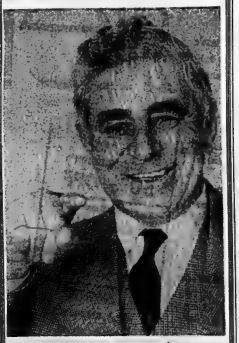
The Gazette, however, specu-

Sam Denies Report

MONTREAL (CP) — Sam Berger, owner of Montreal Alouettes, Wednesday denied published reports the Canadian Football League club will be sold.

Berger, in a telephone interview from New York where he is attending a meeting of the North American Soccer League, said reports of the imminent sale of the club are "sheer speculation."

The reports said Robert Schmertz of New York, already involved in professional basketball and hockey, would be the buyer. Berger purchased the Eastern Football Conference franchise in December, 1969, for a reported $1.2 million.



Schmertz, an industrialist and sports investor, said he has not made a move to buy the Alouettes. He is sole owner of Boston Celtics of the National Basketball Association and majority shareholder of New England Whalers of the World Hockey Association.

CFL commissioner Jake Gaudaur said in Toronto he knows of no pending application.

Gaudaur said no club has the right to sell its franchise without applying to the league for transfer of shares.

"No such application has been made," he added.

BENFICA — Portugal, twice champions and three-time losing finalists, face the prospect of elimination from the European Cup after crashing to a 3-0 defeat against England's Derby County Wednesday in the first leg of their second-round match in Derby.

A crowd of 38,500 saw Derby virtually clinch a quarter-final place with a three-goal burst in the first 39 minutes by Roy McFarland, Kevin Hector and John McGovern.

The match was a personal triumph for England centre-half McFarland, who not only scored Derby's opening goal but blotted out Benfica's goal-scoring ace, Eusebio.

Glasgow Celtic, champions in 1967, recovered from a first-half deficit to beat Hungary's Ujpest Dozsa in their first-leg encounter. Celtic trailed to a goal from veteran international Ferenc Puskas before Kenny Dalglish had the 55,000 fans cheering with two second-half goals.

British clubs won all their home matches. Wrexham, the Welch club which plays in the Third Division of the English League, stole the honors with an unexpected 3-1 victory over Yugoslavia's Hajduk Split in the European Cup of Cup Winners.

Real Madrid was beaten 3-1 by unrated Pitesti Arges of Romania in the first leg of their European Cup second - round match. But the Spaniards, six times champions, could clinch a quarter-final place by making good the deficit in the return clash in Madrid Nov. 9.

U.S. Launches Olympic Protest

NEW YORK (AP) — United States Olympic officials are assembling a massive protest against Russia's controversial basketball victory at the Munich Games, but admit chances are slim of overturning the gold medal result.

"History is against us," Arthur Lentz, executive-director of the U.S. Olympic Committee, said today. "But we hope to prove a point for the good of future competition."

The protest is to be ruled upon by the International Olympic Committee's executive committee.

The Russians got a disputed extra chance to score in the closing seconds of the basketball final at Munich and scored at the final buzzer for a 51-50 victory.

AC Milan of Italy virtually assured itself a place in the last eight of the Cup Winners' Cup by holding Legia Warsaw to a 1-1 draw in Warsaw.

Leeds United was well placed in its bid to become the third English club in four years to win the Cup Winners Cup after forcing a goal-less draw in their away match against East Germany's Carl Zeiss Jena.

Career in Opera In Edie's Future?

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — What started as a lark might turn into an opera career for Edie Adams, more widely known as a portrayer of sexy dames and seller of cigars.

Earlier this month, the blonde actress completed four performances in the lead role of Offenbach's La Perichole in a production by the Seattle Opera Company. She astonished audiences and critics alike with her full, rich soprano.

Back at her home in the Beverly Hills, Calif., Miss Adams seemed pleased with the experience—and with the offers that are beginning to come for appearances with symphony orchestras across the U.S.

"Are they ready for me?" she mused. "I know that I am ready, musically.

"But it might be too much of a shock for people to hear an operatic voice coming out of my face."

The Seattle engagement happened by accident, she said. Two years ago, she appeared on a television talk show in Seattle with Glynn Ross, "an amazing man who runs opera in Seattle and makes it pay off; the company has no deficit."

Edie mentioned that she sang opera as well as popular songs. Ross heard her sing at a Gay 90s night at the Hollywood Bowl and signed her for La Perichole.

As a youngster in New York, she had studied classical singing at the Juilliard School of Music and took private lessons from such divas as Helen Jepson, Dorothea Glanzinal and Maria Kurenko. But a Broadway role as the sister Eileen in "Wonderful Town started her career of playing "sexy, dumb-cast blondes."

"Crazy Lenny thinks I can do anything," she said. "He wrote Candide for me," he said.

But at the same time I was offered the role of Daisy Mae in Li'l Abner. My mentor, George Abbott, decided it would be best for me to take Li'l Abner."

Edie Adams has continued to do dumb-smart blondes, as well as touring with her night-club act, playing summer theatres and selling cigars on television commercials. Now she hopes to add serious singing to her repertoire.

League Is Wary Of Instant Replay

Get him a free ticket, trundle him off to the stadium and the first thing he'll say after a big play is "something's not right here." There's no instant replay.

The fan should blame his unease on Ampex Corp., whose replay recorder has revolutionized television coverage of sports in less than five years.

Many sports fans think of "instant replay" as simply a videotape clowed to a snail's pace. Wrong. The Ampex version is a polished metal disc which records up to 30 seconds of action; the action then is played back at variable speeds or just "frozen" momentarily.

First television use of the disc came in 1967, when ABC broadcast The World of Skiing. Now all three networks use it for sports or to create optical effects on shows such as Laugh-In.

Ampex officials say about 120 of their replay machines are used around the country by networks and local television stations.

Sales volume has permitted a $35,000 markdown from the original per-unit price of $110,000.

The National Football League is keeping a wary eye on instant replay, not because of possibly wrong calls by referees we may see at home, but worried about the close calls in the stadium.

There is talk of installing giant replay screens in football stadiums—one already is in use at Kansas City.

The NFL is evaluating the possible restricting stadium replays to halftime and after the game. One reason is that the league doesn't want the replay used as a coaching aid during play.

But its primary concern is what an NFL spokesman called "stadium reaction." This is the possibility the fans may tear the joint apart over a close call.

Spirits Search

CRANBROOK, England (CP) — Kent magistrates gave a 16th-century pub a 2 a.m. drinks extension on Halloween so that the pub regulars will be able to go ghost-hunting. Legend has it that the ghost only appears at midnight on Halloween and the locals hope to catch a glimpse of it this year. Landlord David Keighley said: "I don't know whether the ghost will accept the new slot but we'll have plenty of other spirits to help us pass the time."

Be Warned

PLUCKLEY, England (CP) — Biffer the bull looked on inoffensive that walkers and holiday-makers in this Kent community have stopped unaware that his field and suffered a rude awakening. So Biffer's owner, Joe Willis, hit on the device of painting a notice on Biffer's side. He warned, I am a bull," the notice reads.

What the Stars Say

By JEANE DIXON

THURSDAY, OCT. 26

Aries (March 21-April 19): The day's patterns only begin to settle in the afternoon as your steady effort finally prevails.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): You're about to encounter a change requiring more expense, perhaps a compromise. There's no scapegoat handy; face the issues on your own.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Impulse may lead you into places you hadn't intended going, but weren't invited.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): For once you're apt to lack perspective on the outcome of speculation. Later hours bring the question, "What am I doing here?" —with no answer available.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): There is no short cut to prosperity despite some of the promises available.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Putting off personal investments is only one of the perceptions indicated. Concentrating on business at hand to bring in prompt conclusions is another important item.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be patient all morning, then go directly to a point, deal with those who can do something for you.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Money and its uses take up time. Under peaceful home life.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be accurate in your figures, cautious in estimates, firm in stating your case. Arbitration of differences c o m e s naturally later in the day.

To Your Good Health

Faulty Occlusion Causes Jaw Lock

By G.C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: At times when my granddaughter yawns her jaws lock. Last week it was an hour before she got relief. Her family doctor doesn't know what to do for her.—Mrs. B.M.S.

The first step should be to see the dentist. About 25 per cent of problems of locking or clicking of the jaws are due to faulty occlusion or "bite"—the teeth don't come together properly, and the jaw gets out of alignment to compensate for it. Result: the jaw joint can give trouble. Dentists can correct the biting surfaces to get rid of this trouble.

In other cases there can be a weakness of the jaw muscles on one side. Exercises—moving the jaw, and biting against resistance—frequently help.

Finally, an X-ray of the jaw joint is in order, to make sure there is no deformity.

The situation should be checked soon, since recurring dislocation of the jaw can cause a stretching of the joint capsule of the jaw and lead to frequent discomfort as time goes on.

In older folks (which I assume your granddaughter is not) arthritic changes can be a factor in jaw problems.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My eyes water all the time and at times swell up, get itchy and crust. I've been to an eye specialist once and he told me it was the weather, but this occurs all year round. Hot towels three times a day ease it but don't cure it.

It used to start up when I drank orange juice or used yarn for knitting. Now it's all the time. It can't put on make-up because that seems to irritate my eyes.

What do you think it could be and how can I cure it.—D.McA.

Orange juice? Wool yarn? Cosmetics? It has all the earmarks (or is it "eyemarks") of allergy—probably allergy to several different things, which is quite common among people with hypersensitivities. It may be nail polish.

If they were my itchy eyes, I'd go to an allergist for tests.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have a happy, healthy three-year-old who still takes a pacifier to bed. I have tried everything to break her of the habit but nothing has worked. Bed time is the only time she wants anything to do with it. Is there anything you can suggest?—M.M.

Ignore it. Many youngsters like to take a dull, shawl, teddy bear or something to bed. In this case it's a pacifier. Since it's only at bedtime, I'd just wait for her to outgrow the habit.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I read in your column that high blood pressure can affect your eyes. I have high blood pressure and what the doctor called "border-line glaucoma." Any comments?—Mrs. D.R.

Not exactly. Glaucoma involves increased pressure inside the eyeball but this is not caused by high blood pressure. However, high blood pressure can cause harmful changes in the arteries of the inner eye.

"Borderline glaucoma" would indicate that the doctor found that the pressure was elevated, so have it checked every four to six months, to see if it's or if pressure becomes necessary.

Start getting your blood pressure under control -not because of glaucoma, but because of the harm elevated pressure can do in many parts of the body.

Opening lead—ten of hearts.

When Sylvia first joined the club, she made it a point to always play in the expert game. Sylvia was extremely anxious to improve her game as quickly as possible, and she considered this the best way to do this was to play with and against the best players in the club.

The inevitable result was that her partners were under constant strain trying to cope with her many eccentricities, and indeed they were actually faced with a hopeless task, for the individualism of Sylvia's mind were impossible to fathom. It did not matter what rules her harried partners expostulated as a guide for the future — eventually they came to realize that their wishes or strictures were largely wasted.

It was not that Sylvia was unwilling to learn — on the contrary, she had hoped to apply all the advice she received gratis from her distinguished partners. The difficulty was that Sylvia either misunderstood or misapplied what she was told, and then of course she was subject to still more reproof.

Sylvia's one saving grace was that sometimes, when she mistakenly tried to apply a principle that had been dinned into her, she would serendipitously achieve a dramatic success as a result of her misapplication of the principle. Thus, in today's hand where West led the ten of hearts, dummy and East following with the nine, Sylvia played low. Her refusal to win the trick was undoubtedly based on what she had been told so often about the great advantage of the hold-up play in notrump.

In this extraordinary effect of this play was that, although Sylvia could no longer make a heart trick, she could not now be stopped from making nine tricks. But had she won the heart, she would have gone down either one, two or three tricks, depending on how she subsequently played the hand.

Tomorrow: Bidding quiz.

Drop in University Enrolment May Be Bad News for Profs

By DEREK HODGSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The education boom of the 1960s appears but an inaudible murmur in the 70s as university enrolment figures across Canada level off.

In most areas, a student of the basic qualifications and the money is assured of getting into a university.

A Cross-Canada Survey by the Canadian Press showed that most universities appeared to be maintaining enrolment levels and the campus scene almost everywhere appeared cool as autumn weather.

The only militancy of note was sounded by teachers.

The Canadian Association of University Teachers expects some teachers will not get their contracts renewed because some schools did not meet projected enrolment figures and won't be getting the revenue budgeted for.

Dr. Donald Savage, executive director of the association, said he anticipates only a marginal alignment of staff but added it may become a trend unless the government moves to make university education available to children of the poor and older students.

With an eye to the future, the association has issued a series of guidelines to universities facing staff cuts.

"Any cutback policy should be carried out in a reasonable constitutional way and not on a personal basis," said Dr. Savage.

He also said any universities that suggest cutting staff as an economic measure should have to justify their entire budget.

"When schools are empty there is a tendency to fire the teachers; why not fire the administrators? That could be the problem."

Several major universities indicated final registration figures would not be available until December.

In Newfoundland, Memorial University is crowded with a total undergraduate enrolment of 8,429, a three-per-cent increase over last year.

At Dalhousie University in Nova Scotia enrolment showed an increase of almost 10 per cent to 7,402. At Acadia University at Wolfville spokesmen said no qualified students would be turned down. St. Frances Xavier expected enrolment to reach 3,000 students and registrar Merchant Bauer said "there is lots of room."

Mount Allison University at Sackville, N.B., expected about 1,300 students this year and a number of applicants were rejected because of the school's "controlled enrolment" policy.

However at the bigger University of New Brunswick, Henry Llambias, associate registrar, said he expects a slight increase over last year's record enrolment of 5,537 and all qualified applicants could find a spot although not always in the faculty of their choice.

Enrolment at the University of Prince Edward Island dropped by about 150 students this year to 1,605 and university spokesmen said staff cuts may be necessary next year.

At McGill University in Montreal, officials expected about 15,000 students will be accepted. Laval University reported 13,695 registered, down slightly from the previous year.

Both the University of Montreal and the University of Quebec showed increased enrolment. Montreal jumped six per cent to about 20,000 students and at Quebec enrolment increased by more than 1,000 to 11,800.

Total enrolment at Sir George Williams University, Montreal, is down due to the dropping of a junior college program. It fell to 15,550 this year from 17,441.

At Ontario there have been some preliminary rumblings of student discontent because of a fee increase. The Ontario Students Association has suggested a fee boycott in January.

The University of Toronto, Canada's biggest, expects about 40,000 students this year but spokesmen for the office of statistics and records said the final figure won't be known for some weeks.

Deputy Registrar William Nediger said community colleges appeared to be taking some of the load off the science and technical faculties.

Queen's University at Kingston will have about 9,000 students. Queen's is another university operating on a "controlled enrolment" basis.

Registrar George Leech said admissions are being controlled so that the university will grow to about 10,000 students by 1975.

Carleton University at Ottawa expects about 900 fewer full-time students than projected earlier and news stories predicted the university would be facing a $1.5-million deficit. Final registration at Carleton is expected to be about 10,500.

At the University of Ottawa enrolment is up about three per cent to 5,875.

Preliminary figures put University of Manitoba enrolment for 1972-73 at 13,737 full-time students, compared with 14,084 in 1971-72. University of Winnipeg has 2,346 full-time students enrolled for 1972-73, a five-per-cent increase from the previous academic year. Brandon University has 1,041 full-time students enrolled for 1972-73, down from 1,243 last year.

S. G. Mann, business manager at the University of Saskatchewan's Regina campus, said incomplete enrolment figures show about 5,300 full-time students, about 100 fewer than last year.

He said some budgetary problems were inevitable because of the decrease in enrolment but said no staff cuts were contemplated at this time. At the university's Saskatoon campus a final tabulation is expected to show enrolment down slightly from last year's total of 19,595.

All three Alberta universities saw declines in student population. The University of Alberta was down slightly from last year's nearly 14,000 and at the University of Lethbridge enrolment was down nine per cent to 1,146 students. University of Calgary was down about 360 students.

Enrolment at the University of British Columbia was approximately 19,500, down a bit from last fall's 19,826. Record year was 1970-71 with 20,940.

UBC's most popular courses are in arts and education.

At Simon Fraser University, Burnaby, B.C., enrolment for the fall semester was nearly 5,300, up almost nine per cent from the fall of 1971. New student enrolment was 1,743, up 27 per cent from a year earlier.

The University of Victoria in the B.C. capital reported fall attendance of 4,291, off from 4,778 last fall.

Regular Checks, Tests Might Not Aid Health

OTTAWA (CP) — Most people generally believe that if everyone had a regular health check-up and had extensive laboratory screening tests, general health would improve, hospital stays would be shorter and health care costs would drop.

That isn't necessarily so, says a recent article in the Canadian Family Physician.

Dr. David L. Sackett of McMaster University, Hamilton, concludes that much more research needs to be done before mass screening programs and routine health checks are instigated on a regular basis.

"I do not conclude that all screening is worthless," he said, but added:

"With the exception of prescription screening among highly selected groups of patients, existing screening and periodic health examination programs carry little promise of improving or maintaining the health of the general population and should not, therefore, be generally applied at the present time."

Dr. Sackett looked at existing programs in the light of six questions and asked:

"Is there a reasonable expectation that patients without symptoms will faithfully take medications or follow other instructions over long periods of time?

"The reader may wish to ponder his own success in modifying cigarette consumption or food intake. . . ."

Dr. Sackett also questioned whether periodic health examination really alters disease outcomes. If so, statistics should have shown decreases in the death rates from cervical cancer among British Columbia women because that province started its screening programs long before other provinces.

But studies had not indicated these lower rates.

In a similar example, he reported on a United States study, which divided a population into two groups, one of which received annual check-ups and laboratory testing.

"After seven years of the program, no favorable health impact of the annual check-up could be detected among women, and only one group of them (ages 40-51) showed any difference in disability and absenteeism".

The usual methods of evaluating early detection programs also were examined by Dr. Sackett and found wanting scientifically.

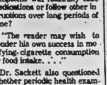
As well, the doctor-patient interaction that goes on as part of the routine health examination may have "a profoundly favorable effect on the physical, social and emotional function of the patient."

"However, I must express concern that the increased automation of such programs as defends, rather than promotes, this interaction."

Although the idea of such programs is "enormously attractive," Dr. Sackett advises more research and a more rational approach before governments jump on the bandwagon.

Iran's New Friend Not Eager to Trade

TEHRAN (CP) — Iran's new found relations with China, established in August last year, and highlighted this year by the visit of Empress Farah to Peking in September, have not opened the floodgates of trade between the two countries, as some observers expected.



The emphasis has been more on the political aspects of the friendship — the economic relations being marked more by an attitude of cautious probing on both sides.

The ties have been established at a time when both Peking and Tehran have set out to widen their diplomatic contacts with the world. For Tehran, which thinks diplomatically in terms of a series of increasingly larger circles of friends, China is an important member of the outer circle which should no longer be neglected.

Diplomacy being what it is, both Tehran and Peking have chosen to ignore that they represent systems of government on opposite ends of the political spectrum, and the Chinese Communists at least have managed to get over the embarrassment by emphasizing the struggle both countries have waged against "imperialism." Great stress, for example, has been put by the Chinese on Iran's triumph over the oil companies in the series of negotiations that have taken place since February last year.

For want of better common ground between the two countries, Premier Chou En-lai also referred, in his banquet speech for the empress, to the "advantage and obstruction by imperialism," which for the last quarter of a century or so have interrupted the cordial ties between them going back some 2,000 years.

CP News Roundup

PM Won't Name Liberal Donors

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau has said he is willing to reinforce legislation calling for disclosure of campaign funds in the next Parliament, but he is not about to name Liberal donors during the current campaign.

When Mr. Trudeau was asked Tuesday during a television program what for by the Liberals if he should disclose all direct and indirect sources of his campaign funds, he said he would not because he didn't have to.

Asked by Svend Robinson, one of six panelists on the show, if he would disclose the sources, the prime minister said he is prepared to bring back after Oct. 30 an election expenses bill which failed to get passed before Parliament was dissolved.

But asked again if he will disclose sources of liberal funds, he replied: "the answer is no."

When asked why he wouldn't, he replied: "Because we don't have to under the present legislation."

Pressed further, Mr. Trudeau said he does not know what his campaign funds are and said: "If you are asking for general disclosure about total amounts I certainly would consider it if the other parties wanted to."

Art Stolen

PRAGUE (Reuter) — Three paintings worth a total of $1 million have been stolen from Prague's National Gallery, the trade union paper Prace reported. The paintings are El Greco's Head of Christ, Tintoretto's Saint Geronimo and Frans Hals' portrait of Jasper Schade van Westrum.

Probation

HALIFAX (CP) — Darrel Mason, president of the Nova Scotia Denturist Association, was sentenced Wednesday to one year probation on each of 45 convictions under the provincial Dental Act.

The suspended sentences apply to 49 counts of offering dentures to the public and six charges of illegally supplying dentures. The sentences will run concurrently.

CUPE Opposed

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Union of Public Employees, which bargains for 18,000 Ontario hospital workers, would not like to see appointment of permanent arbitrators for hospital labor disputes, a spokesman said Wednesday.

Ontario Labor Minister Fernand Guindon said Tuesday his department is studying legislation dealing with hospital working negotiations but has made no decisions on changes, including a move to select permanent arbitrators.

Leap in Dark

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The Ontario Medical Association (OMA) is "taking a leap in the dark" by going to the public for its impressions of doctors, the president of the 10,000-member association said Wednesday.

However, Dr. L. R. Harnick said he believes the decision to invite the public to evaluate what traditionally has not been a laymen's area" in a good one.

Nightmare

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister John Turner has dismissed a Conservative election promise to provide tax credits to small businesses as an impractical gimmick that would create an "administrative nightmare."

Firm Fined

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto company and two brothers who own it were fined a total of $25,500 Wednesday for evading taxes by using false invoices.

Cesaroni Bros. Ltd., pleaded guilty to three charges and was fined $5,000. Samuel Cesaroni pleaded guilty to six charges and was fined $9,500.

Work Together

OTTAWA (CP) — The Young Liberal and Young Progressive Conservative organizations are considering banding together for the remaining campaign days of Monday's election in an effort to get young people interested in voting, it was learned Wednesday.

Informed sources for both groups said the two youth organizations, which are supported financially by the parent parties, probably will announce the plan today in Toronto. That would give them three days of interest Canada's roughly three-million voters 18 to 24 years old in turning up at the polls.

DES Banned

OTTAWA (CP) — The use of the hormone DES as a growth stimulant in livestock has been ordered suspended indefinitely as of Jan. 1, 1973.

Protest Made

OTTAWA (CP) — Chief Electoral Officer J. M. Hamel said Wednesday an official complaint of "partisan political conduct" against Alphonse Charron, returning officer for the Ontario riding of Stormont-Dundas in the Oct. 30 federal election, has been dismissed.

Find Choker

WATERLOO, Ont. (CP) — Waterloo police believe they have solved the mystery of the city's strangler.

Chief Harold Basse said Wednesday that four incidents last month in which teen-age boys were grabbed and choked may have been the work of a 15-year-old boy.

The boy, who is mentally disturbed, is serving a term in training school for another offence.

Get Leeway

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Hydro will not require owners of hotels built before 1971 to install fire exits until 1974, provincial fire marshall M. S. Hurst said Wednesday.

Double Pay

TORONTO (CP) — City council gave final approval Wednesday night for doubling the basic salary of aldermen to $15,000.

Rude Awakening

BIGGLESWADE, England (CP) — The bridal suite was set for the newly-weds and all the preparations made for a cosy first night together, but bridegroom Bryan Newbury found the double bed too comfortable as soon as he lay on it he fell fast asleep. Meanwhile, his wife Lesley had accidentally locked herself in the bathroom. "I hammered on the wall but Bryan didn't hear a thing," she said. "Once I drop off, a bomb wouldn't wake me," her husband added.

U.S. Awaits Bid To Renew Talks

A Belleville Link

Margaret Trudeau, on the campaign trail with husband Prime Minister Trudeau in the Maritimes Thursday, made a Belleville connection. The tot she is trying to coax a smile from at Fredericton airport is 10-month-old Christopher Ing, son of Cpl. David Ing and Mrs. Ing of Cromcole — both of whom are former Bellevillians. The youngster's grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Don Ing and Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Hennessey of Belleville.

Lewis Defines PM

Corporate Candy Man

HAMILTON (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau is a "corporate candy man" and election day is the time to put a stop to his deliveries, David Lewis, New Democratic Party leader, said Thursday night.

In a speech to a rally here Mr. Lewis said the Liberal government, while trumpeting about income tax reform, has left "tax loopholes that are large enough for the biggest corporate bums to go through."

We will fight to stop Trudeau acting like the corporate candy man he and his party have become. The time to take the candy away from the overstuffed corporations has long since passed."

Real tax reform remains the major issue in Canada Mr. Lewis said in a speech to about 500 supporters at Westdale Collegiate.

What the Trudeau government did, Mr. Lewis said, was to go through "a slick public relations exercise" in the tax changes put through Parliament late last year.

PM's Pledge

New Social Ethic To End Drudgery

HAMILTON (CP) — Deep in union country Thursday, Prime Minister Trudeau made a direct appeal for the labor vote by promising a new social "ethic" that will liberate pallbearing work.

Stanfield Sure Liberals to Go

MOOSE JAW (CP) — Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield made his last election visit to the West Thursday and received a thunderous response to his claim that he will be forming the next government of Canada.

About 1,400 persons jammed into a downtown hall to shout "Stanfield, Stanfield, Stanfield" as he entered and to cheer lustily when he said:

"There is one thing that's very sure. The government is on the way out and a new government, a Progressive Conservative government is on the way in."

About 3,500 partisan listeners in the glaccard-filled arena of this steel-making city heard the prime minister say that "all the few industrial and commercial workers enjoy their work."

But he said the frustration of modern labor cannot be compared to the exploitation of the early industrial age.

A different approach to labor issues is needed, said Mr. Trudeau.

"We need a new social ethic in this technological age and I believe one is in sight."

Thieu Wants Vote

SAIGON (Reuter) — President Nguyen Van Thieu backed his opposition to political aspects of the North Vietnamese-United States agreement to end the war with a proposal today for a United Nations-supervised referendum in South Vietnam.

The president greeted a crowd of nearly 1,000 supporters who paraded through the streets and right into the presidential palace and assured them "any agreement that does not have my signature does not apply to Vietnam."

Thieu rejected as pro-Communist a proposal in the North Vietnamese-U.S. agreement for a three-part administrative structure bringing in the present government, the provisional government of Viet Cong) and neutralists:

As an alternative, he suggested that the UN "or some international body or one to Viet nam to organize a people's referendum so that the 17 million people can cast their vote to see how many million would vote for the National Liberation Front."

A Thieu aide explained to reporters that the referendum would decide the composition of a national council, which would then organize new presidential elections.

The U.S.-North Vietnamese agreement calls for the three-part coalition to organize new general elections.

'Wise up! End the war and we and our talks.'

Aikenbrack Reiterates He Saw Clark

NAPANEE, Ont. (CP) — Douglas Aikenbrack reiterated Thursday that he had a meeting with Warden Donald Clark of Millhaven penitentiary and that Mr. Clark revealed to him a report about conditions at the institution.

Mr. Aikenbrack's statement was a denial of charges made Wednesday in Montreal by Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer who said such a meeting never took place.

Mr. Aikenbrack, Progressive Conservative candidate for the riding of Frontenac-Lennox and Addington in Monday's federal election, said he met Mr. Clark with fellow Conservative Eldon Woolliams, a striking re-election in Calgary North, in a car following his nomination Sept. 23.

Soviet Union Backs U.S.

MOSCOW (Reuter) — The Soviet Union unequivocally threw its diplomatic support today behind the United States in a plea to Hanoi to continue the Vietnam peace talks and reach a truce settlement.

Peace Likely Within Weeks

WASHINGTON (CP-AP) — The United States waited today for a signal from Hanoi to open the last round of secret talks that Henry Kissinger promises could bring peace to Vietnam "in a matter of weeks, or less."

President Nixon himself said that remaining differences can be resolved and peace will be achieved.

"Peace is at hand . . . an agreement is within sight.

"What remains to be done can be settled in one more negotiating session . . . lasting, I would think, no more than three or four days."

Kissinger said the North Vietnamese were asked last Sunday to set the time and place for settling the ambiguities that arose in the rush to meet a Hanoi-requested timetable.

North Vietnam's only immediate response was made in Paris by peace-talk delegate Xuan Thuy, who said: "Wait and you will see" Hanoi's reaction.

After listing the tentative agreement reached with Hanoi that would end the fighting and bring all American troops and prisoners home within 60 days of its signing, Kissinger said:

"I want to stress what what remains to be done is the smallest part of what has already been accomplished, and . . . we must remember that, having come this far, we cannot fail and we will not fail over what still remains to be accomplished."

President Nixon Thursday night told an Ashland, Ky., audience that remaining differences "can and will be worked out" so as to bring "peace with honor and not peace with surrender."

The remaining points to be worked out with the North Vietnamese, Kissinger said, are these:

—How to establish an international supervisory body in time to prevent "a last effort to seize as much territory as possible" before the cease fire goes into effect and "to avoid the dangers of the loss of life, perhaps in some areas even of the massacre that may be inherent in this."

—Ways "to compress" the time between a ceasefire in Vietnam and a settlement in Laos and Cambodia.

—Overcoming "linguistic problems," such as making sure Hanoi understands the exact meaning of the word "privacy" in an American context.

—Reconciling Hanoi's strong demand for the South Vietnamese government to be overthrown before the release of U.S. prisoners with Washington's equally vital demand that Communist troops withdrawn from South Vietnam be replaced by a new and genuine government.

Hanoi Insists On Deadline

PARIS (CP) — North Vietnamese negotiators assessed today they will not continue crucial peace talks with President Nixon's adviser unless the U.S. agrees to sign a peace accord by Oct. 31. Nguyen Thanh Le, the Hanoi spokesman, told a news conference that Hanoi does not believe further negotiations are necessary.

Guards Are Working to Rule

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Protesting guards at nearby Millhaven maximum security prison were to continue a work-to-rule campaign today which started Thursday over charges that prison officials are making concessions to prisoners and refusing to listen to guards' grievances.

Harry Mallard

One Big Duck!

Belleville hunter John Hoskin, 24, may have downed one of the biggest mallard ducks in years in Quinte district. Shot near Northbrook, he says he measured its wingspan at 39 inches. Wildlife officials at Tweed say 28-34-span is normal for big birds. Interested in viewing the specimen, they say its size may be due to the fact it's a hybrid since mallards will cross-breed with other species.

Southeast Asians May Find Rules of Survival Are Changed

AP News Analysis
By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

If the suggestion of peace in Vietnam proves secure enough to permit withdrawal of all military men and preclude further intervention by sea or air, a sharp corner will be turned in world history.

No longer is there implicit U.S. military support for South-east Asian countries. They have been mending fences and casting about for alternatives, for new concepts of self-protection.

All will be affected, one way or another—but for South Koreans, Thais and Nationalist Chinese on Taiwan the change, though not sudden, is nonetheless a shocking.

In the 1950s, the world picture had a rather simple look of a contest of ideologies, a world Communist bloc against a system of U.S. alliances. In the 1960s, disintegration of Sino-Chinese ties and China's climb to nuclear power contributed to a process of change, in the 1970s, the scene is dominated by a new and perhaps precarious power balance achieved by the Nixon administration's contacts with Peking and Moscow and prospective U.S. retirement from most of the Asian mainland.

China's influence rises, Russia contests Peking and asserts her own Asian authority by strengthening the Soviet role in India and sending the fleet on shows Pacific and Indian Ocean operations.

What may develop is a test of the Nixon doctrine of 1970.

In effect, the doctrine says the United States will provide a nuclear shield for countries whose survival is tied to American security, and furnish military and economic aid to countries threatened by aggression. But it expects them to do the rest of the job themselves without direct American military intervention.

Having gone through the long agony of Vietnam, the U.S. public would be unlikely to support any new deployment of ground forces elsewhere. Since a nuclear shield is unusable against political aggression, is the United States even now implying that political expansion by Asian Communists need no longer represent a threat to American security?

The whole picture implies that the Communist threat has been downgraded. In the light of the big powers' new triangular relationship, Vietnam seems ironically, to have become irrelevant to all but the Vietnamese.

Ottawa Consulted About Vietnam

OTTAWA (CP) — Talks have taken place between United States and Canadian officials for two days this week concerning recent progress toward a Vietnam settlement. The disclosure came amid speculation that Canada may be involved in international machinery to help supervise a settlement. Asked whether the Canada-U.S. talks had lent credence to this speculation, an Ottawa informant said: "They gave us a stronger feeling that we might be involved."

News Briefs

Want Tests Halted

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Canada told the United Nations Thursday that the nuclear powers have failed their obligation to the other countries of the world by not ending nuclear testing and said the UN "has no option but to hammer again and again" at the powers until all testing is halted. H. Baston, Canada's representative at the disarmament conference, told the General Assembly's main political committee that continued nuclear testing "is an intolerable situation."

Fire Levels $40,000 Barn.

DEMORESTVILLE (Staff)— Fire last night leveled a farm barn owned by Burton Koch-apaar located east of Demorestville on the Fish Lake Road, causing an estimated $40,000 damage.

Cause of the blaze is believed to have been spontaneous combustion. Lost in the fire were 35 milk cows, 6,000 bales of hay, 3,000 bales of straw, a new pipe - line milking system and a stable cleaning system.

The fire broke out at about 10 p.m. and the alarm was answered by the Sophiasburg fire department. Fire fighters saved several outbuildings epidemiologist said the loss was covered by insurance.

— Frank Follwell will be canvassing homes in the city's east and west end subdivisions and, like Ellis, will be doing the rounds of shopping spots.

— The NDP's Elodge Brethour will be campaigning throughout the riding, particularly in the north.

— George Hees will begin campaigning Saturday in Colborne in the morning; from there to Bataava, to Frankford, and then returning to Brighton. From Brighton he will go to Ameliasburg town hall for his final pre-election rally at 8 p.m.

Sunday is his day of rest. On Monday morning Mr. Hees will be voting in Cobourg. He will return to this area, visiting local polls. As election results come in Monday night he will be in attendance at the Trenton Dundas Street East Conservative Committee Rooms.

— George Cunningham, Liberal, will be mainstreeting in Trenton from 9 a.m. At 11 a.m. he will be in Barry Heights and at noon will leave Trenton on an antique car cavalcade through Brighton, Campbellford, Stirling and back in Trenton. At 8 p.m. he will be presenting graduation diplomas at the Trenton High School convocation ceremonies. At 9 p.m. he will attend the Belleville Royal Canadian Legion Street Dance on Pinnacle Street following which he will attend a Greek Orthodox Community dance, to be held at the Legion building. Sunday, from 2 p.m. until 5 p.m. he will be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh O'Neil for a sherry party at their 42 Fifth Avenue residence. On Monday Mr. Cunningham will visit the polls. As election results come in, Mr. Cunningham, along with party workers, will wait at the headquarters to be set up Bleecker.

Deseronto Bypass Discounted

Rumors that the Ontario Department of Transportation and Communications may relocate Highway 2 from Marysville to Napanee and bypass Deseronto are being discounted by at least one town councillor.

At a council meeting earlier in October, Reeve George Lyons had announced to council to have Hastings MPP Clarke T. Rollins and Ontario district highway officials attend the next meeting of council. However, due to previous commitment, Mr. Rollins was unable to attend but said he would attend a subsequent meeting if held in the daytime.

No further direction to meet with Mr. Rollins was given Reeve Lyons at the last meeting.

Today Reeve Lyons said he doubted if there was any foundation to the rumors that a highway relocation possibility and said no meeting with Mr. Rollins or highway officials was scheduled.

However, he admitted there could be direction for such a meeting at the next meeting of council.

Napanee Projects Ready to Proceed

Two of three major commercial developments announced for the immediate Napanee district during the past summer are almost ready to proceed.

They are the $1.5 million enclosed shopping mall proposed for the C. A. Milligan property west of Centre St., which is being purchased by Omsac Developments Ltd. of Toronto, and a Holiday Inn to be built at the Imperial - Oil service centre at the junction of Highway 401 and Palace Road.

No objection was entered last week at a hearing for a zoning change which would allow construction of the shopping mall, but it is expected to be Dec. 15 at the earliest before Ontario Municipal Board approval can be obtained.

No further information is available at this time, the proposed 70-store shopping plaza that had been announced earlier for Richmond Township opposite the Lennox and Addington General Hospital.

Mayor Ackerman Will Run Again

PICTON (Staff) — Picton mayor Margaret Ackerman will stand for re-election this year if nominated.

She is now completing a two year term in office which she won by acclamation when Harvey J. McFarland refused to qualify his nomination in the last municipal election.

Mr. McFarland this year has confided a number of persons have urged him to seek re-election but he has not made any announcement of his plans.

At least three town councilors have stated that they definitely will not seek re-election this term. Among them are veterans councillor and Picton attorney Harold McLoughlin, realtor Corey Walraven, now completing his first term, and Harry Ahrens, also a newcomer to council two years ago.

Picton reeve Albert Pirrith has stated he will seek a municipal office this fall but will not comments on rumors that he may run for the mayoralty.

Councillors Bessie Ward and William Lane have indicated they will again stand for re-election, although Mr. Lane will retire if he is not needed to complete a slate of candidates.

Chief Now Updated

"Let's face it. It could happen that a plane could crash in the middle of Belleville and with this training we know how to best handle that emergency," said Belleville Fire Chief Leo Culhane.

Chief Culhane returned this week from an intensive five day course, dealing with emergency measures in an air crash, called Emergency Fire Service Planning Officers Course.

The course was held at the Ontario Fire College in Gravenhurst.

"We don't anticipate this sort of thing but no one anticipates emergencies and you have to be ready for them," said Chief Culhane.

The chief acknowledged the fact that military aircraft from CFB Trenton were factors in his decision to take the course.

Guest speakers for the course were drawn from the military, civil aviation and provincial police.

Chief Culhane, along with 28 other chiefs from across Ontario, were not trained simply to put out a fire but to co-ordinate the entire emergency effort.

"When something like this happens, the entire community gets involved, from the firefighters to public works to Red Cross to the Emergency Measures Organization," said the chief.

This training, though specifically for aircraft, gives the principals of handling any major emergency.

Similar procedures would have to be followed if gas storage tanks at the harbor were to ignite or if a tanker were to spring a leak.

The chief and the Belleville Fire Department are mutually with other departments in Hastings and Prince Edward Counties in any emergency needing a combined effort.

IN MEMORIAM

McBRIDE — In loving memory of our dear wife, Mom, Grandma, who left us four years ago today, October 27, 1970.

Wonderful memories woven in gold,
This is a picture we tenderly hold,

Yo love, to cherish, to never forget,
Remember your name and speak it often yet,
God bless you mom, you're not forgotten.

Always remembered by our Son, daughter-in-law, grandchildren and great-grandchildren and Jan. 037-

JOHNSTON — In loving memory of a dear wife, Mrs. George (Lillian) Johnston, who passed away October 27th, 1969.

Sweet is the smile is gone forever,
And her head I cannot touch,
But I have so many memories,
Of the one I love so much.

Memories are a keepsake,
With which I'll never part,
God took her home, it was His will,
I have her in my heart.

— Your loving husband George.

REED — In fondest memory of a dear son and beloved brother, Vincent Reed, who passed away October 27, 1971.

A light is from our household gone,
A voice we loved is stilled,
A place is vacant in our home,
Which never can be filled.

God in His wisdom has you taken,
Though on earth you are no more,
And in our hearts you will live on,
As you always were before.

— Lovingly remembered and sadly missed by Mother, Sisters, Brothers, Mother, Christine, Larry and Cathy.

MOONEY — In loving memory of our dear father, who passed away Oct. 27, 1970.

Since you've gone first and I remain,
The thing I'd have you do,
Walk slowly down the path of pain,
For soon I'll follow you.

Then I will meet you and say you take,
That I no longer grieve or mourn,
For one day down that lonely road,
You'll hear me call your name.

— Lovingly remembered and sadly missed George and family. 037-

Santa Needs Taggers

Tag Day, in support of the Quinte Santa Claus Parade, is scheduled for the weekend of Friday, Nov. 17, but so far only a handful of taggers are signed up.

Because of cutbacks in some corporate and business donations, added pressure has been placed on the tag day, which last year raised approximately $1,700.

One donation is down by $250, said a spokesman for the parade committee. This decrease along with others will have to be absorbed by taggers.

Frank Foley, who last year was chairman of the committee and this year sits as treasurer, said, "we could use as many as 100 taggers in our drive."

The committee is also looking primarily for older taggers to work over the weekend.

Anyone interested in donating some of their time to tag day is asked to either come to a Santa Claus Parade Committee meeting or to show up at the recreation offices on Pinnacle Street on tag day.

"If they show up, we'll put them to work," said Mr. Foley. "At least 15,000 tags have been prepared for the canvass," he said.

More Ugandans Arrive

A group of 10 Ugandans arrived in Belleville Wednesday bringing the total of Ugandan expellees in the area to 28.

A representative of the Canada Manpower Centre in Belleville said today, "all members of the family were extremely happy to be back together."

All expellees must be out of Uganda by Nov. 8.

The 28 people are being taken care of by Canada Manpower Centres in Picton, Belleville, Trenton and Napanee, under the co-ordination of James Travers of the Belleville branch.

Mr. Staveley commented, "the Ugandan expellee movement is well under way."

Mr. Staveley was not sure how many Ugandans would eventually come to live in the Bay of Quinte area and said, "we only know they are coming the afternoon before they arrive."

The entire Ugandan contingent will have a chance to meet with one another this Saturday at a tea and luncheon to be held in the YMCA building on Victoria Ave., beginning at 1 p.m.

Two members of this group were present when the first Ugandan family arrived here.

Since that time the organization has formed a welcoming committee to make people coming into the area feel at home.

Long Road Trip For Orchestra

The Eastern Ontario Concert Association will take its longest road trip ever Nov. 5 when they will travel to Tillsonburg to perform for that community's centennial celebrations.

Under the direction of Stephen Chomo of the Hastings County Board of Education, the orchestra is a recognized member of the Ontario Federation of Symphony Orchestras.

Mr. Chomo, a one time resident of Tillsonburg, founded the orchestra 12 years ago and since that time has directed it through weekly rehearsals and more than 100 engagements around Hastings and surrounding counties.

The orchestra will be one of the first groups ever to use Tillsonburg's $1-million centennial community centre.

A special engagement for Mr. Chomo, as it was in this small community west of Toronto, that he first conducted an orchestra in his final high school years.

None of the performers in the orchestra are "actual professional musicians," and play for the reward of applause, said Mr. Chomo.

The 55-man orchestra leaves for the afternoon concert Sunday morning and will return to Belleville the same day.

Expenses for travelling and the stay in Tillsonburg will be paid by that community.

Mr. Chomo described the performance as a full concert drawing material from old favorites, contemporary pieces, show tunes and some lighter classical material.

Marmora House Badly Damaged

MARMORA (Special) — A fire believed to have started in an electrical outlet in the back shed, partially destroyed the frame house of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Darrah, 48 Victoria Street, Marmora, yesterday.

Alone at the time, Mrs. Darrah discovered the whole back wall of the shed ablaze when she opened the door to get a pail from the shed.

A spokesman from the fire marshal's office believes the fire started in an electrical outlet beside the freezer. Marmora volunteer fire department responded to the alarm at 11.20 a.m. Thursday morning and successfully extinguished the blaze, but not before the whole shed and back wall of the house were destroyed. The house is considered a total loss. Some furniture and personal belongings were saved. The loss is covered by insurance.

Mr. Darrah, a mechanic, was in Havelock when he was summoned home. The couple is staying at the home of Mrs. Darrah's son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Don Nicholson in Deloro.

Auxiliaries Meet

Mrs. C. K. Morningstar, centre, president of the Hospital Auxiliaries Association of Ontario, chats with delegates attending the annual meeting in Toronto this week. The three day conference ended Wednesday. From the left are Mrs. G. A. Wilson of Belleville, chairman of In-Hospital Volunteers, Mrs. Morningstar, and Mrs. S. B. Bochnek, second vice - president of the Belleville General Hospital Auxiliary.

Hospital Auxiliaries Seek Greater Role

TORONTO (Special) — Greater representation on hospital boards by auxiliary members is sought by the president of the Ontario Hospital Auxiliaries Association.

Mrs. Charles K. Morningstar said Monday in her speech to the more than 500 delegates attending the annual conference, auxiliaries should seek greater representation on hospital boards of management. She said membership should include full voting privileges.

Belleville delegates were among those attending the annual meeting, which ends Wednesday.

Mrs. Morningstar, who begins the second year of a two-year term of office, said greater involvement by auxiliary members will mean added responsibility.

"Only by self-education can the volunteer rightfully claim membership at this level," she said.

She told delegates voluntary services are an important part of health care both in the preservation of human concern and the economy of the hospital costs.

She said the work of the volunteers in providing supplementary staff and financial contributions to hospitals qualifies auxiliaries for management recognition.

She said in her speech in the future volunteers will become involved in the total concept of health care in their communities. This concernment, she said, will embrace the emotional and psychological aspect, as well as the physical health of people.

Mrs. Morningstar, an active community worker in London, Ontario, said the contribution of money for new equipment and other special needs, plus thousands of hours of time and labor given by volunteers, adds strength to the hospital.

The Hospital Auxiliaries Association of Ontario has an active membership of 32,665. There are 218 affiliated auxiliaries.

Mrs. D. R. Thomas of Sarnia, public relations officer, said in her report auxiliaries raised $2.5 million last year. Almost half the money was spent on equipment and supplies. A further $870,000 was directed toward bursaries and scholarships.

Educational TV Begins Monday

Educational television will come to Belleville Monday as Cablevue presents 10 hours of programming daily over channel 2.

The video tapes, prepared by the Ontario Educational Communications Authority in Toronto will be broadcast by the cable company at its headend building near the lower south west of Wallbridge.

Broadcasting will begin at 10 a.m. each day and continue until 8 p.m., with the last three hours, from 5 to 8 p.m. slanted toward the adult viewing audience.

The programs will be the same as those seen on Channel 19 in the Toronto area, but will be broadcast here a week later.

To keep the public informed of the educational TV schedule, The Intelligencer will publish the listings daily, one day in advance of programming. The schedule will appear under a separate heading near the daily television listings.

The Ontario Educational Communications Authority is providing the video tapes of its educational programs as a service to cable companies. Cablevue here has installed two video-tape machines and will hire three operators to lend them during the 10-hour transmitting period each day.

Ontario's educational programming for television is not exclusively devoted to supplementing classroom teaching.

Among the series to be seen here is one with "how to" tips for the whole family and another offers basic sport skills. A program on how to improve map shots will be aired the first week and another series will examine the field of psychiatry.

Cablevue is now awaiting official permission to broadcast an American educational television channel through its system. When approval comes, the American programs will be broadcast over Cablevue's channel 3.

Museum Will Gain From Frolicfest

German food and festivities may help raise funds for the Hastings County Historical Society's Glanmore House Museum.

Belleville and Trenton chapters of the Beta Sigma Phi sorority are hosting a Frolicfest Nov. 4 at the Canadian Legion Hall in Belleville to fund creation of a library in the new museum.

Food from a Kitchener firm which advised on the menu, will be served at the Frolicfest which also will feature a German orchestra.

The main door prize offers two 22-45 day excursion tickets from Montreal to Frankfurt.

Tickets are available from calling 966-1678 in Belleville and Trenton 392-1695.

WHAT IS A DRUM CORP?
— Some people say it's like a brass band, like Tijuana Brass.
— Not quite, although a drum corps carries the equivalent of many brass instrument. The horns just look different.
— They are both especially for drum corps.
— And color enough to blow your mind.
— You could play a drum or blow a horn — whichever you work out best on. (Experience helps, desire will do.)
— Or you could be in the color guard. Every drum corps learns a different field show — Your corps competes with other corps.
— If your corps wins it's because YOU made it good. Wouldn't you like to be a winner.

WHY JOIN A DRUM CORPS?
— When you join a drum corps you'll go places in the summer, people will cheer you.
— You could be a part of exciting drum corps contests.

WHO CAN JOIN?
— YOU — If you are over 16 years.
— YOU — If you have 2 evenings a week and free summer weekends.
— YOU — If you are the kind of guy who wants to be a winner.
— YOU — If you don't mind thousands cheering you.

HOW CAN YOU JOIN?

Year 1965 Was Turning Point

PEI Was Weathervane of the Canadian Election Scene

By FARMER TISSINGTON
From The Intelligencer's
Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — In the United States there has been an expression "as maine goes, so goes the nation," referring to the results of their national elections over the years. Not to be outdone, Canada developed a similar election guideline involving our smallest province, Prince Edward Island, and its four seats.

Because P.E.I. tended to return members of Parliament in relationship to the over-all success of the parties nationally, and because it was always one of the first provinces to report results on election night, the Garden of the Gulf became a barometer for election-watchers.

A check of the results of the past 10 elections tends to bear out this theory—at least until the 1965 and 1968 elections when P.E.I. suddenly lost its forecasting ability. In the elections of 1940, 1945, 1949 and 1953, when the Liberal government was returned with from 125 to 190 seats, the province elected either three or four Liberal MPs. In 1957, 1958 and 1962 when Mr. Diefenbaker got and kept the Conservatives in power, P.E.I. returned a solid four Tory members each time. In 1963 when the Liberals returned with 128 seats, less than a majority, the province split two-and two. So far, no change.

But P.E.I. ceased to be a reliable weathervane in 1965 and again in 1968. In both elections it continued to remain loyal to its Conservatives, returning four MPs of that party, even though the Liberals formed the government with 131 and 155 seats respectively. Just why this sudden change is a matter of speculation but it might have been due to the Conservatives having better strong candidates who had large personal followings.

One of these has since retired and the betting is the Liberals will take one seat and have a chance at a second this time. If that happens, then the potential for another Liberal victory nationally look strong. On the night of Oct. 30, election-watchers might like to keep this in mind. Return of four Conservatives from P.E.I. could mean a loss of Liberal seats nationally. Return of one or more Liberals could be the forerunner of a Liberal victory greater than 1968.

The city of St. Catharines recently staged its big show of the year, the annual grape and wine festival parade. The story goes that prior to the election call officials invited prime minister Trudeau to be parade marshal, in keeping with the practice of having a prominent political figure on hand each year. The PM declined the invitation so officials turned to Progressive Conservative leader Bob Stanfield, who accepted.

After the election was called and the date of the parade drew near, people from the PM's office phoned in some panic to ask if it was safe for the PM to accept the earlier, declined invitation it was! Even assistants of the New Democratic Party Leader David Lewis were in touch to ask if their man could do the honors.

But it was Mr. Stanfield who rode in the official car during the grape and wine festival parade and won whatever political kudos such events ferment.

Oddly, some of the cabinet ministers considered the weakest from this vantage point look like easy winners on October 30 while some of the better ones may be in trouble. Ministers like Jean-pierre Goyer, John Munro, Gerard Pelletier and Jean Marchand are likely to have little trouble winning their own ridings. But some of the better ones—Jean-Luc Pepin, Jean Chretien, Pat Mahoney and Don Jamieson, are expected to be in fighting for survival in tough personal contests.

Mayor Scott's Statement

An allegation of conflict of interest brought earlier this year by two councillors against Mayor Dr. J. Russell Scott has taken a fresh turn.

Mayor Scott has issued a statement in which he refutes a charge brought in a motion by Alderman Donald Soutter and seconded by Alderman Robin Jeffrey last April. The charge alluded to Mayor Scott's links with 37 acres of land called Sanctuary Developments of which he is a joint owner with his wife and six children.

Neither Mayor Scott nor his wife, according to the statement, are signing officers of the company "and, in law, have no control over its decisions."

It is the rest of the statement Mayor Scott discusses the drainage easement for redevelopment of North Front Street, the sewer project on Valleyview Crescent and inconclusive talks with a local builder-developer regarding purchase of Sanctuary land and he goes on to deny that any of these factors constituted a conflict of interest. He cites "no moreover that his agreement with the city over a drainage easement for North Front Street redevelopment was allowable under the Ontario Municipal Act.

Thus, albeit after considerable delay, Mayor Scott has given his side of this matter. It will be recalled that a demand for a public inquiry into the issue was defeated in Council by seven votes to two, on the grounds of insufficient information. For his part Mayor Scott was silent from December — when Alderman Soutter called for his resignation — "Why, so that you can take my place?"

Council's decision however failed to allay public concern aroused by Mayor Scott's initial refusal to make any statement. This concern was reflected by a number of letters to The Intelligencer.

Now Mayor Scott has made his statement and members of the public may judge it for themselves. Still uppermost in the public mind is the question, why did Mayor Scott wait until now before speaking?

Significant of course is the timing of the statement — only a few weeks away from the municipal elections in December in which Mayor Scott will be seeking re-election. He is being opposed by Alderman Robin Jeffrey whose resignation the Mayor has called for, along with that of Alderman Soutter, on the grounds that their motion alleging conflict of interest is unfounded.

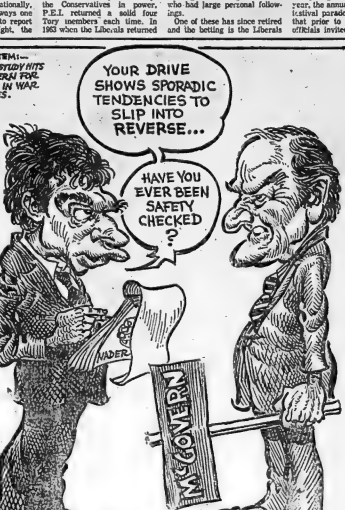
Mrs. Jeffrey has indicated however that there is still going to be a contest for the office of Mayor and the "conflict" issue inevitably will remain one of the campaign issues. Council seems clear to clear the air still further.

Vacant Home's Fate

About the only misfortune, it seems, that has not befallen Glenford Hogle's vacant family farmstead on Highway 2, five miles west of Belleville, is that it is not haunted. At least, not to anyone's knowledge.

The story of the farm property and home owned by Stirling funeral director Hogle and its fate since around 1965 makes dismal reading.

The building's interior and appointments have been badly vandalized and the damage has even been extended to machinery in nearby outbuildings.



If the house could be a haven for transient hippies, would they not have found it preferable to preserve such comforts as existed? And no doubt these were considerable since Mr. Hogle rented the place out as an apartment and latterly used it himself as a summer home while also farming the property.

But that was in the years leading up to 1965 and a lot of water has passed under the bridge since then. There has been a new morality abroad since then and it embraces a wide range of mental aberration of which vandalism is only one manifestation.

We sympathize with Mr. Hogle and can only conclude that a home is best lived in, or rented out to responsible tenants. Locked on a main highway, as it is, the Hogle property may well have been a haven for transients, not to mention some of the more footloose and reckless of our own local n'er-do-wells.

Kenya's Mau Mau Carnage Now A Memory

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst

India's late Prime Minister Nehru once mused that the creatividis of the new ruler of a people of British colony required a period in prison under British rule.

Nehru, who said it more in jest than seriousness, nevertheless had the required credentials as did the late Ali Jinnah, father of modern Pakistan, Mahatma Ghandi, Nkrumah, Ghana's late president, and Kenya's President Jomo Kenyatta.

Remember him and the Mau Mau of the early 1950s? Now 82, a patriarch, the grand old man of Kenya, even decorated in person by Queen Elizabeth, Kenyatta 20 years ago was considered to be the leader of the most brutal uprisings in modern African history.

Where Uganda's General Amin savagely exterminates, intimidates and then expels fellow countrymen, the Mau Mau butchered, mutilated and tortured not only white Kenyans, but members of rival tribes.

Kenyatta had a longer exhibition stretch in jail, a result of his alleged involvement with the Mau Mau massacres, than any of the Indian and Pakistani leaders. From 1952 until 1961 when he was released to take part in Kenya's forthcoming independence move, Kenyatta was under lock and key.

It was the nature of British rule—even during severe and bloody riots as in India in the 30s, or the Mau Mau attacks as in Kenya in the 1950s—to resolve bloody issues through the passage of time and the use of constitutional instruments.

However, it is still difficult for strong supporters of Britain in the world to believe the British established the first of what we today call "concentration camps."

But in the Boer War, when 26,000 Boer soldiers and their families were rounded up and taken from their country when Indian rioters were rounded up by the hundreds, the British set up detention camps of a semi-permanent nature.

The same happened in Kenya when regular British troops sent to the Mau Mau country during the mid-1950s rounded up hundreds of tribesmen and their families into stockades. These all were, in effect, "arms of control and such shelter out everywhere and to everybody.

And in this, of course, he is not at all alone. He expresses a generally held viewpoint today.

Really can you go along like this?

Externally what we are doing now is operating on a government system of spending, more than governing.

We are aiming at a best of all worlds for everybody without real consideration for anyone.

Pragmatically it is nonsense governmenti.

Unsung Election Issues

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

In an election year, we as Canadians must take stock of ourselves. We must go beyond the petty political diatribes that seem to consume so much of the campaigning effort of the political parties of Canada. We as every candidate for election must confront the facts of the fundamentals of life.

The new government and Parliament will have to face big problems: inflation, unemployment and poverty. But before these problems can be solved to any acceptable degree, the Canadian people must commit themselves to the task of creating an Unselfish Society. This action will have a direct bearing on all of the social and economic ills of our society.

In England following the Reis Royce failure, a group of trade unionists got together a manifesto which was published in the national press. It stated that no union should strike if this action would ruin their firm or would do serious harm to the country. Shortly after this decision, a group of management decided, at a time of increasing unemployment, to take on up to seven per cent more employees.

What should Canada's attitude be towards the rest of the world? There are individual Canadians and groups of people who are giving wholeheartedness to creation or prestige to the underdeveloped countries. There was a recent Relief Mission to Bangladesh and now the Canadian Psychiatric Association is arranging for psychiatrists to give unpaid service to the islands of the Caribbean for a month or two each year. Young people are giving one or two years along with scores of adults to the Volunteer Services of the Mennonite Church throughout Canada, the United States and many overseas lands. These are but a few of the efforts of many Canadians that do link fellow man free of the price tag which may be political or economic.

Can a more similar attitude guide policy at the Government-to-Government level so that we five without any strings attached? Out of our affluence and out of our goodwill we have much to give to the less fortunate peoples of the world.

Subsidies Taken For Granted

By DON O'BEARN
Queen's Park Bureau

In a recent speech Minister of Revenue Allan Lawrence made a statement which was thought provoking—and thought disturbing.

Mr. Grossman was defending the principle of subsidized public housing.

And to justify it he listed a host of areas where governments subsidizes the public.

In effect he was saying subsidy is now an accepted fact of public life and we shouldn't be concerned about it.

Then the minister gave his list of examples where there is now government subsidy. It included health, of course, then transportation, agriculture welfare pensions, education and other areas covering a broad spectrum of life.

The statement was thought-provoking in that if you want to be funny further you end up with the startling list of fields in which government is handing out money.

Certainly few people must recognize just how deeply government is into our lives—and what massive amounts of money it is paying out.

Mr. Grossman's statement, of course, exemplified this.

He was not showing concern about the money he intended to spend, just concern that people wouldn't be concerned about him spending it.

He was accepting the fact that today the state does shell

Quebec Drivers Under Fire

Letter in The Montreal Gazette

I was most interested to read the remarks by Sen. Shute (Rep-Maine) concerning the habits of Canadian drivers. Equally interesting was the response by Messrs. Lajoie, Dupuis, Menard, Nadeau, Rochefort and Chevalier, who thought the senator's comments were "astounding".

As a Canadian driver familiar with the highways throughout Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, etc., I must say I agree with Sen. Shute that there are many inconsiderate Canadian drivers on his state's roads. This is not to say there are no bad American drivers or Canadian roads, for I'm sure there are many. However for the moment I will deal with the issue the senator has raised.

On a recent trip through this area I obeyed all the posted highway signs almost to the letter of the law. Invariably I found I was being passed on solid lines, on hills and in the face of oncoming traffic often necessitating quick braking to let the offender squeeze in ahead of me. Time after time the violator was driving a car bearing Quebec licence plates.

The gentlemen who replied in your column implied that because of Sen. Shute's comments they would probably avoid Maine and spend more time and money in Massachusetts next summer.

In light of the attitudes they have displayed in their letter I can only say that Maine's gain is Massachusetts' loss.

E. W. MacDonald.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

October 27, 1952

Bob Elaind, proprietor of the Sports Centre, E. Bridge St. has been appointed an issuer of hunting and fishing licences.

Mr. Blaind's appointment increases the number of issuers in the city to two; Ed Thomas being the other. It was felt the volume of business necessitated the appointment of a second issuer.

Salvation Army personnel from Kingston, Picton, Trenton, Tweed and Hamilton attended the Pinnacle Street Citadel to commemorate the Army's 70th year of existence. The Kingston band and songsters featured the evangelistic session which is part of an 11-day campaign being conducted across Canada.

30 YEARS AGO

October 27, 1942

Mrs. Chief William Lynch sold for $1 at a Red Cross tea for the portable gasoline pumper furnished to the Civilian Defence Committee has arrived in the city. The pumper was received from the Ford Motor Company several weeks ago, but its use came under wraps. Preparations are going ahead for instructional classes of volunteer fire fighters to handle the equipment should the necessity arise.

Little the worse for his experience, James Lafferty, Queen's Hotel day porter, is back at his job after being missing in the north woods for over 24 hours.

40 YEARS AGO

There are 346 pupils registered this year at the Ontario School for the Deaf; 191 boys and 155 girls.

At a meeting of the Belleville Ministerial Assoc. the following officers were elected: president Rev. H. D. Nicol, pastor of Holloway Street Methodist Church;

Municipal Appointee

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Our municipal council should be commended for recommended for appointing Mr. Leighton Thompson to the position of Recreation Director.

Mr. Thompson is well known as a long search to find some one of his qualifications and personal attributes. I am sure he will be conscientious, active, and carry on the position with distinction.

Belleville has been a model for the city manager form of government because, over the years, council has co-operated and made it work. The present incumbent — Mr. Reynolds, has been dedicated and efficient, and has left the political decision-making to the elected ones. By careful control, he has produced, year after year, a substantial surplus, and one of the lowest per capita tax levy in Ontario.

Whatever regard we might have for the politicians at city hall, we should recognize that the whole administration crew is doing a first class job for us.

Shulman Obtained Confidential Facts

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. Morton Shulman said Thursday night he has obtained on occasion confidential information from Ontario Police Commission (OPC) files.

Dr. Shulman, New Democratic Party member of the Ontario legislature for Toronto High Park, said the information came from a police intelligence officer.

He declined to name the officer, however, except to say that the man believed a possible miscarriage of justice had occurred.

"He felt there had been inadequate investigation, horribly unjust," said Dr. Shulman.

Dr. Shulman said the information was given "only to me. . . He knows I'll bring it up in the legislature."

"There have been only three leaks," said Dr. Shulman. "One was with regard to a senior OPP police officer who had social relations with a character connected with organized crime.

"Number two had to do with an inept investigation into a person who might be connected with organized crime," he said. "The third had to do with bombings in the construction industry."

Dr. Shulman was commenting in an interview on reports that 25 police chiefs in Ontario fear top-secret information on organized crime had been "leaked" through the OPC and that RCMP, OPP and Metropolitan Toronto police are investigating.

Minnesota Fats Irked By Raid on Pool Game

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill. (Reuter) — Minnesota Fats, who quite unashamedly considers himself the greatest pool player in the world had nothing but unkind words Thursday for a federal grand jury which subpoenaed him as part of an inquiry into gambling at a pool tournament.

Fats, whose real name is Rudolph Wanderone, insisted he was nowhere near the 12th annual pool hustlers tournament at Johnston City, Ill., when 30 police staged a raid early Thursday.

Wanderone, 59, now lives at Dowell, Ill., only a few miles from Johnston City—which calls itself the pool capital of the world. But he said he was at a party in St. Louis, about 80 miles away, when the raid was staged.

He called the raid and the grand jury inquiry "the biggest joke in all the land, an outright fraud and the most ridiculous things I've ever seen in all my life." He denied any connection with the tournament, but said he had droppde in now and then to help promote it.

Wanderone said he told the jury there was "small scale" gambling at the bar, "but no more than in the national golf tournaments, political conventions and chicken fights in Florida."

Man, 75, Missing in Bush

CARAMAT, Ont. (CP) — The search continues today for a 75-year-old United States man missing in dense bush near this northwestern Ontario community since last Friday.

Norman Marker of Atlanta, Ga., entered the bush with his son last Friday and the two separated to hunt. The father failed to return to the meeting place and the son informed police who began an immediate search.

About 100 searchers, including Ontario Provincial Police, Canadian Forces personnel and local citizens are expected to continue looking today but hope is fading.

May Need Special Law To Alter Voters' List

TORONTO (CP) — City clerk Gordon Batchelor will ask the provincial ministry of revenue's assessment division today for authority to correct errors and discrepancies in lists of voters for the Dec. 4 Toronto civic election.

Mr. Batchelor said Thursday he hopes the special legislation will not be needed to correct such errors as blocks of voters who are listed in the wrong wards or wrong polling subdivisions.

However, special legislation may be required to give John Hall, the province's Toronto regional assessment officer, authority to restore thousands of eligible voters whose names are believed to have been left off the lists. This would require the calling of a special session of the legislature.

Lists for civic elections across Ontario were prepared this year for the first time by the provincial assessment division. Spot checks by city officials uncovered the errors.

In addition, this is the first time that a person can enter a polling station on election day and vote by making a simple declaration that he or she is over 18, a citizen or British subject, and a resident of a municipality between Sept. 1 and Oct. 30.

Mr. Batchelor said he will instruct all 1,500 deputy returning officers to ask any persons taking a declaration to show proper identification, such as a driver's licence or a birth certificate.

Ald. Reid Scott said this new provision, together with some of the discrepancies, "could be a ballot-box stuffer's dream."

One of the errors disclosed by spot checks was omission of large numbers of residents of a senior citizens' home. Another was that none of the occupants of the nurses' residence at Toronto Western Hospital were listed.

Other discrepancies included 900 persons listed at one polling subdivision and two at another.

Mr. Batchelor said if he attempted to correct the lists without proper authority, he could invalidate the civic election.

Officials in Metropolitan Toronto's five boroughs said their voters' lists for the Dec. 4 municipal elections appear to be more accurate than those in the city.

Seeks Power

SEOUL (AP) — President Chung Hee Park of South Korea proposed today a new constitution that would give him more power with no limit on the terms of office.

Driver Fined

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — An Ottawa truck driver was fined the minimum $100 penalty Thursday for careless driving that resulted in the death of a London motorist who had stopped behind a school bus.

"There's no way I can punish this man any more than he has been," said Judge G.G. Marshman before fining Charles Paul Pyke, 40, of Ottawa.

Gerald Marvin Holton, 50, was killed Feb. 9 when his car was sandwiched between the transport Pyke was driving and a school bus about to discharge passengers on Highway 22 near here.

Young Drink

TORONTO (CP) — The use of alcohol among 12-and 13-year-old Toronto students is becoming more of a problem than drug abuse, Dr. Martin Wolfish, chief of adolescent services at the Hospital for Sick Children, said Thursday.

Dr. Wolfish said in an interview doctors are rarely seeing youngsters for conventional drug abuse problems. "We are now seeing kids who are exhibiting classical patterns of alcohol abuse," he said.

Liberal Wins

LONDON (CP-AP) — Cyril Smith gave the Liberal party its seventh seat in the House of Commons Thursday with a by-election victory in the northern English riding of Rochdale.

Oppose Project

MONTREAL (CP) — A coalition of Indians and Eskimos from the James Bay area of northern Quebec is asking for a court order to halt construction of a $6-billion hydroelectric development in the region. A request for temporary restraining order against the James Bay Development Corp. should be before the courts by the first week of November, Cree Chief Billy Diamond said Thursday. Officials say the project will create an average of 30,000 jobs a year for the next 12 years.

Subpoenaed

MONTREAL (CP) — Subpoenas have been sent to most of Quebec's 800 striking elevator technicians ordering them to appear in provincial court next month, a justice department official said Thursday.

The official said the subpoenas, sent early this week, inform members of the International Union of Elevator Constructors they are "participating in an illegal strike."

The strikers are among 2300 elevator technicians across the country who walked off the job Monday after after negotiations for a new contract broke down.

Identified

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Donald Derosi, 36, of Toronto, was identified Thursday as the ring leader of a group of gunmen involved in the $1.3 million holdup of a Windsor bank.

Four women employees of the main Windsor branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia made the identification at the county court trial of five persons facing a variety of charges connected with the robbery.

Bank manager

Kenneth Moore identified George Davison, 43, also of Toronto, as the gunman who met him as he entered the bank minutes after the holdup began.

Man Jailed

BARRIE, Ont. (CP) — Thomas John Newton Brown, 40, of Collingwood, Ont., convicted of criminal negligence by a county court jury Oct. 5, was sentenced Thursday to one year definite, one year less a day indeterminate and two years probation.

Brown was charged following an incident in Collingwood Dec. 4, 1971, in which Constable Howard Gill of the town police force was seriously injured by fragments from a bullet Brown fired.

Constable Gil was hit after he was called to investigate a disturbance between Brown and an employee at a restaurant Brown owned.

Pay Raised

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) — The Sault Ste. Marie Police Association and the police commission ratified a new contract Thursday which will raise pay by 19 per cent over two years. Under the contract, a first-class constable will be paid a base salary of $12,100 in the second year.

Hippo on Porch

MEREDITH, N.H. (AP) — John Smith of Meredith was afraid to tell police there was a hippopotamus on his porch at 3 o'clock in the morning.

No-one, he thought, is going to believe a call about a hippo in New Hampshire — from somebody named John Smith.

Awards Made

TORONTO (CP) — Two former employees of the Toronto Telegram were awarded financial compensation Thursday by a tribunal appointed under the Employment Standards Act to investigate claims against the Telegram Publishing Co. Ltd.

Marc Zwelling, a former reporter for the newspaper, was awarded $1,140, representing six weeks of severance pay.

D. D. Carter, tribunal commissioner, also awarded Gotlieb Essig $7,903.82, representing 31 weeks of pay in lieu of the remaining period of 16 weeks notice required under the act in cases where the company shuts down operations.

Boil Water

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — The Waterloo County medical officer of health has advised residents of Ayr, 20 miles southwest of here to boil or chlorinate their drinking water.

Dr. Gerard Evans said Thursday 134 of the 181 wells tested in the village Oct. 11 contained water that might be harmful to drink.

He said there has been no illness among the 1,200 residents of the village traced to impure water.

Deaths High

OTTAWA (CP) — Roughly five to every 100 babies born alive in the Northwest Territories last year died before their first birthdays, Statistics Canada figures released Thursday show.

Although the latest death rate in the territories in 1971 dropped significantly from 1970 when there were 68.1 deaths for each 1,000 births, it still was nearly twice as high as the rate in any other part of the country. The number of infant deaths in the Northwest Territories was 63 in 1971 and 81 the year before.

PMs Missives Questioned

Official Cannot Rule On Letters' Legality

OTTAWA (CP) — Chief Electoral Officer Jean-Marc Hamel says he cannot act on complaints the vote-seeking letters sent by Prime Minister Trudeau are illegal.

"This is not within the scope of my authority" Mr. Hamel said in an interview Thursday.

The computer - typed letters, from Mr. Trudeau began being received by voters in selected ridings Thursday.

The letters received less than enthusiastic welcomes in some homes, because the computer apparently ignored party affiliations and sent them to some prominent opponents of Mr. Trudeau's Liberal party.

Among the bemused receivers was Stephen Lewis, leader of the Ontario New Democratic Party and son of NDP federal leader David Lewis.

Bill Clarke, Progressive Conservative candidate in Vancouver Quadra, sent a telegram to Mr. Hamel complaining that the letters contravene an Election Act section that says party campaign literature must be identified as such.

Mr. Hamel said the section referred to by Mr. Clarke is Section 72 but the section which gives Mr. Hamel power to deal with election irregularities does not list Section 72 as one of the areas he can handle.

Mr. Hamel declined to say what legal steps are open to Mr. Clarke, suggesting that the candidate get legal advice on that subject.

In Toronto, Liberal campaign official said Thursday night that the letters all were processed in Canada.

Earlier in the day, a Progressive Conservative party official said the sealed personally-addressed letters originated inside a giant computer in New York City.

But Gordon Floyd, research director for the Liberal campaign in Ontario, said in a telephone interview "the whole operation was done in Canada."

"Most of it was done in our Ottawa headquarters but some of it was done in Montreal."

CRTC Won't Halt TV Sunday Poll

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Radio-Television Commission is not planning to prevent the CTV Television Network Ltd. from broadcasting results of a federal election poll Sunday, a commission spokesman said Thursday.

He said the commission has been informed that the network intends to broadcast the poll results on a hour-long news special Sunday night.

The courts have ruled that the commission cannot act as censor, prohibiting certain material from being screened, the spokesman said. But the commission still had the right to take action later when television and radio stations sought licence renewals.

Television and radio stations are prohibited from broadcasting partisan advertisements or announcements 24 hours before election day and during election day. But factual news reports are permitted.

Clifford Scotton, national secretary of the New Democratic Party, said Thursday he drew the matter to the commission's attention and suggested action before the broadcast.

"It is unquestionably political broadcasting," Mr. Scotton said. "Who knows the validity of polls?"

J-M HAMEL

Editor Honored

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba Theatre Centre has provided the setting for a sculpture of Frank Morriss, retired entertainment editor of the Winnipeg Tribune who was killed with his wife in a car crash last spring. The sculpture was commissioned by the longtime movie critic's two daughters.

Youth Leaders Hope Vote Heavy

TORONTO (CP) — Youth leaders of the main political parties are unanimous in hoping that as many as possible of Canada's 2.3 million first-time voters go to the polls on Monday's federal election.

"Politics affects the lives of the young directly and all of them should listen to all the candidates and then vote," says Bob Dundas of Ottawa, president of Canadian Student Liberals.

Len Domino of Winnipeg, president of the Progressive Conservative Youth Federation and Gary Hall of Toronto, acting Ontario chairman of New Democratic Youth, express similar sentiments.

Mr. Dundas, 26, studying for a PhD at the University of Ottawa, said he thinks the Liberals have the most appeal for youth largely because of Prime Minister Trudeau's "strong and decisive" personality and because he is "young at heart."

The 22-year-old president of the Conservative Youth Association says leader Robert Stanfield "stands out for credibility" and has a more practical approach to finding work for persons looking for their first jobs.

Mr. Neil, 21, a warehouseman, said he thinks the problems of the young are mostly the same as those of the older Canadians.

Listen closely to all you hear from Plymouth. We've found new ways to keep it quiet.

For 1973, Plymouth is quieter than ever before. Satellite's front and rear suspension systems, for instance, have been isolated from the Unibody with rubber pads. This stops most of the road shock and noise from travelling through to the body of the car. Plymouth's Unibody construction helps too. Its one-piece welded strength stays tight and quiet for years. Inside, quiet surrounds you. Passenger compartments have been insulated from bumper to bumper. Outside, we've lowered noise levels too, by designing new air intake and exhaust systems.

As well as being the quietest Satellite ever, this year it's the smoothest running Satellite. Electronic Ignition eliminates the breaker points and condenser so it's virtually maintenance free. You'll go further between tuneups, and your exhaust will stay cleaner longer. Electronic Ignition is standard on every North American built Plymouth this year.

Satellite's 2-door hardtop may look like a sporty personal car, but its size and features make it enough car for most families—and all their luggage. Its 115 inch wheel base is easy to handle, and easy to park. A 318 V8 delivers plenty of power, with remarkable gas economy. There's also a money-saver 225 slant Six available. See the quiet, new 1973 Satellite at your Plymouth dealers now!

Extra care in engineering... it makes the difference.

Thanksgiving Theme Given

The autumn Thanksgiving meeting of Bridge Street United Church women was held on October 17 in the Sunday school auditorium.

The speaker, Mrs. Jean Veaden, was introduced by Mrs. Grace Anderson. As the study book for the year has been on Africa it was fortunate for the group to hear Mrs. Veaden who made an extensive tour of Africa in the spring of this year. She is a retired school teacher from Forest Hill School in Toronto and is a graduate of the University of Toronto.

Mrs. Veaden's talk was accompanied by slides of the eleven countries she visited.

She stressed the fact that she was more interested in the contrasts of the people and their living conditions in the various countries rather than their political problems.

After her landing in the modern city of Dakar she proceeded to the primitive city of Timbuktu on the edge of the Sahara desert where much of the life of the city revolved around one tiny lake of water.

Johannesburg and Capetown had lovely parks and buildings with a more moderate and comfortable climate. Mozambique and the Cecil Rhodes game park, where she went on a safari were most colorful and Ethiopia were also described.

Mrs. R. Morden thanked the speaker for enlightening members and friends of this vast continent.

Miss Myrtle Reid, president, conducted a short business meeting. She announced that 14 from the group had attended the recent regional rally in Carrollton.

The worship service was in charge of Mrs. H. B. Finnigan and followed the Thanksgiving theme.

Do You Need A Vaccination?

"Vaccinations and boosters for small pox, diphtheria, polio and pertussus (or whooping cough in the preschooler) have been available in the 100 schools of Hastings and Prince Edward County for seven years at no cost, since the health unit was formed," said Dr. Lenk, Medical Officer at the Hastings and Prince Edward County Health Unit.

A team from Dr. Lenk's, health unit visits elementary, high schools and separate schools in this area. Notices are issued to parents informing them of the shots their child is eligible for. When this team, consisting of a registered nurse, her assistant and clerical worker return, the vaccinations or boosters are given.

Starting at the pre-school level, a vaccination is administered for the mentioned viruses. "After the vaccination is given, antibodies form in the blood stream and after five years, this antibody level drops. At this time, the person is more susceptible to the virus and that's when a booster is required," said Dr. Lenk.

When a baby is from 3 - 5 quoid vaccination (or four-in-uoid vaccination (or four-in-one) for diphtheria, pertussus, tetanus and polio. A year from the date of the third needle injection, a booster shot is given. From there, at 13-month,ha, the baby is given a combined vaccine for red and German measles. This vaccine may be given though any time up to kindergarten age. At 18-24 months the small pox vaccination follows.

Vaccines are used for re-inforcing doses oly in children and adolescents of school age who have previously been immunized against diphtheria, tetanus and polio in the infancy and pre-school years.

Reduced dosages are given as the person grows older as it reduces the incidence of reactions to the diseases. Treatment from the health unit also give TB tests, audio-visual tests and small pox vaccinations in Hastings and Prince Edward County schools.

Gold Mining Could Soar

There is little large-scale gold mining now in the hills and gullies east of Sacramento where '49ers dug and panned for gold.

The few mines that survived into the 1930s were shut down during the Second World War because miners were desperately needed to mine copper and other minerals needed for war.

"Some of the mines never reopened; others did," says Hendry Jones, a mining engineer for the U.S. Forest Service.

"Those that opened have pretty much shut down again by now.

It's not that they ran out of gold—there's plenty of gold. It's just that the wages and everything else went up to the point that the $35 gold wasn't worth what it was costing to take it out. If the price gets up to triple the old $35 price—$105—you'll see a real change."

The international price of gold now hovers at about $70 an ounce—roughly twice the $35 an ounce pegged by the U.S. government as gold's official price from the early 1930s until 1968. Until 1968, American miners could only sell their gold to the government. Now they're free to sell it on the international market.

UCW Meetings

MELROSE U.C.W.

The combined units of Melrose U.C.W. met in the church basement for their October 19 meeting. The worship service was conducted by Mrs. Jack McFarlane and Mrs. Ivan Hastings.

A "Thank You" note from Mr. and Mrs. Mac Lazier was read in appreciation for the dinner served at their daughter Susan's wedding. An invitation was extended to attend the fall bazaar at Front Road Church on Nov. 3.

The club leaders accepted an invitation to cater to the 4-H Girls dinner to be served on Achievement Day, Nov. 25.

The next meeting will take the form of a pot luck supper to be held at the home of Mrs. Newton Demaile on Dec. 4.

Mrs. Chas. Bates Jr., in the absence of a guest speaker, showed slides of the demolition and progressive scenes at the time of the rebuilding of the present church structure in the summer and fall of 1962. Special interest was noted at the conclusion, the dedication ceremony where members of the faces were seen. The pastor, Rev. Doug Steven and other church dignitaries were prominent at the sod turning and placing of the date plaque.

COLLEGE HILL UCW

The theme for the October meeting of College Hill United Church Women was a Thanksgiving and Thanksgiving.

Helen McLaren introduced Rev. Cyril Betts, from the Tyendinaga Tehan Reserve.

Rev. Betts gave a history of the Mohawk Band stating the reserve is one of the best in Canada. He had an interesting display of Indian crafts and answered questions following his talk.

The business meeting was opened by president Helen McLaren. Prayer was said by Rev. Roy Veasey. Mrs. McLaren welcomed visitors and Mary Byrd gave the treasurer's report. An invitation was read from the Front Road Church regarding their fall bazaar. Annes Wickens, Marjorie Cannen and Pat King were in charge of the devotions.

LAWRENCE — POST

Rev. Canon Wright officiated at the recent wedding ceremony at Christ Church of Karen Evelyn Post, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil V. Post, Belleville, and Alfred George Thomas Lawrence, son of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Lawrence, RR3, Belleville. John Withers was the organist.

The bride, given in marriage by her father selected a full length gown of white Venice lace over nylon taffeta, which featured a lace stand-up collar and long full sleeves. The bouffant skirt flowed into a full chapel train. Her rhinestone and seed pearl headdress held a four-tier bouffant veil. The bride carried a cascade of orange roses and white baby mums.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Marie Post, was wore an orange jumpsuit with a split floor length overskirt in shades of avocado, orange ice, gold and white. Baby gardenia adorned her hair and she carried a nosegay of gold and white mums. The bridesmaids, Miss Donna Marie Sinclair, Miss Patricia Chapman and Miss Darlene Dempsey were attired identically to the matron of honor and carried the same bouquets. Similar flowers also adorned their hair.

For the reception held at Christ Church Parish Hall, the bride's mother greeted guests wearing a mauve floral street length dress accented by matching accessories and a corsage of yellow sweetheart roses.

Upon their return, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence will reside at 7A Reid St., Belleville.

MR. AND MRS. HAROLD GURNEY

Gurney — Wickson

Redeservile United Church was the setting for the recent evening candlelight ceremony which united in marriage Bonnie Lynn, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rowan (Ron) Wickson of Belleville and Harry Donald Gurney, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Gurney of Brantford, Rev. J. M. McLeod officiated. Mrs. McLeod rendered the appropriate organ music.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, chose a floor length gown of ivory satin peau de soie in a simple empire waist style. The gown was accented by a ruffle encircled on the bemline and long full cuffed sleeves. The bride's upswept hair was simply adorned with flowers to match her bouquet of shasta daisies intermingled with deep pink roses.

The maid of honor, Miss Patricia Trounce, and the bridesmaid Miss Evelyn Johnson, were attired identically in floor length empire-waist styled dresses of printed voile. An underlining of deep rose accented their dresses and each carried a nosegay of white shasta daisies.

A reception was held at Applelasgrey town hall where the bride's mother greeted guests wearing a floor length dress of deep gold polyester crepe. Gold accessories and a corsage of bronze sweetheart roses enhanced her dress.

The bridegroom's mother wore a long dress of deep rose crepe trimmed with silver and complemented by a corsage of white sweetheart roses.

Upon their reutn, Mr. and Mrs. Gurney will reside at RR3, Belleville.

New Spartan Ethic Desired

By DORIS CLARK

"The average student spends 250 a year on soft drinks and tobacco and more. If they would contribute only $3 per student per year, they could recruit the toughest finest lawyers to begin dealing with pollution and corruption.

"Being stoned on marijuana isn't very different from getting stoned on gin. We need a new spartan ethic in this land."

So says Ralph Nader, and he ought to know. It could be real fun to find out just how well our young people could get themselves under control, and devote themselves to a constructive cause like anti-pollution, rather than the morale-breaking indulgence of marijuana and its companion drugs.

Addictions bespeak frustrations with life. Devotion to a worthwhile project rubs out the frustrations and the drugs slink away, from neglect.

Dear Doris: I am an 18-year-old boy and believe I am normal sexually but 6 masturbate about every three weeks. I seem to do this when I am bored or depressed. I know that many other boys masturbate and some doctors think it is normal and good for relieving tensions but I feel guilty after I have done it.

Other people look at masturbation as a sex deviation and refuse to talk about it. Bothered.

Dear Bothered: The word itself bothers a lot of us. Earlier on, we were taught that anything related to sexual indulgence was wrong. Then we began to understand a little more about physical urges.

What you are doing is by no means a sex deviation. There are times when it can be a great relief. When you finally choose a mate for life and achieve complete physical expression the urge for anything less will probably leave you.

Meanwhile, work off your excess physical energy with active games like football, tennis, basketball, swimming or whatever appeals to you. This is the healthier, more mature way to let down tensions.

Confidential to Still Wonder-ing: You are right that true love is a gift from God; and when you find it here years after year, no matter how far away you are from each other and this person is in your mind all the time, it's got to be the real thing.

It is said that one who has the capacity for a great love is lucky, whether or not it is possible for that love to be expressed in a legal and physical union. From that point of view, I would say you are a fortunate women.

Bazaar A Success!

The hall was decorated in the Halloween theme and there were many attractions for all ages, starting with the exciting bake table with items made by members themselves. Mrs. Bert Hanoski, Mrs. J. Corkery and Mrs. McCumber were on hand to serve.

The Penny-ante table with Mrs. Trudy Fonlyn and Mrs. Dorothy Cadwell in charge had many winners.

The Fancy Table had attractively displayed gifts including popular handicrafts made and donated by members. This table was under the charge of Mrs. Margaret Baker and Mrs. Betty Carlisle.

The Gift Tree, a delight for adults as well as children had flowers pinned to it's branches, concealing numbers to correspond to the numbered gifts.

Mrs. Hazel Hamilton, Mrs. Anne Plevak, Mrs. E. Long and Ann Belch were in charge of this tree.

'Touch and Take' was under the care of Kim McKeown. Diane Houle and Susan Martyn operated the fish pond.

Convenor for the tea table was Mrs. Mary Baker with Mrs. Marilyn Burak assisting. Mrs. Steven Plevak, Mrs. Michael Dolinsi, Mrs. S. Vorobec, Mrs. Michael Warylow, Mrs. Ann Belej and Mrs. Terease Houle took part in the kitchen crew.

Draws were made by Father McGarvey. There was a Halloween cake made by Mrs. D. Leask.

Women's Institutes

LONSDALE W.I.

The October Lonsdale W.I. meeting was held in the hall with 13 members in attendance. The president, Mrs. J. Stafford opened the meeting.

The guest speaker was Mrs. E. Struthers, instructor of the 4H club. She gave a complete history of 4H activity and the impression it has on the girls in the community. Included in her address she spoke about how the 4H club is organized: the different projects; what the girls achieve; the trips taken and awards received among the members. The guest speaker answered questions from the W.I. members. Mrs. Jarrett thanked Mrs. Struthers, and presented her with a small token.

During the business meeting Mrs. L. McGuinness, the secretary-treasurer, gave her report and read the correspondence. It was agreed that repairs be made to the W.I. hall.

The next euchre party will be on Nov. 8 and 22. An invitation was received from the 4H Club to their tea. This is a project for the girls who are now taking the course, "The Club Girl Entertained".

Mrs. J. Jarrell, the resolutions convenor, conducted the next part of the meeting. Mrs. H. Freeman and Mrs. J. Buckley gave readings from the Home and Country magazine.

Lunch was served by Mrs. Coppell and Mrs. Leon McGuinness.

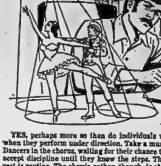
NOTICE RESPECTING SCHOOL SUPPORT

The Municipal Enumeration list may be inspected during business hours, at the Office Of The Tax Collector, City Hall, Belleville, Ontario.



Any Complaint with respect to School Support may be brought to the Municipal Clerk, Pursuant to Section 20 of the Municipal Amendment Act, R.S.O. 1972 (No. 2).

Notice of Complaint must be made in writing no later than the 3rd day of November, 1972.

Mirror of Your Mind
by JOHN CONWELL

Do creative people need discipline?

YES, perhaps more so than do individuals who function best when they perform under direction. Take a musical, for example. Dancers in the chorus, waiting for their chance to be creative, will accept discipline until they know the steps. Then, for them, the rest is routine. The show's author, though, is able to create original ideas only because he must abide by rules devised by himself—a stricter taskmaster than the strictest dance taught.

Is it all right to rag a 'sexy' child?

NO; even a lackadaisical child should be spared the nagging to "keep him on the ball." Regardless of what nagging could do to his disposition (and sometimes the results can be serious), nagging gets to be a habit with the youngster. Even if the child becomes extremely withdrawn, instead of nagging him, parents should try to determine why he must be prodded all the time. It could be that he just doesn't know what is expected of him.

Should a wife be told everything?

PUT it this way: a wife should not be kept in the dark about things that trouble her husband. After all, they are a couple; what affects him, affects her, and vice versa. A husband, too, knows if he wants his wife to understand him better, he doesn't have to hesitate about what he should tell her; if he simply wants to prove something, then he should question his motivation in whatever "secrets" he wants to reveal to his wife.

CLUB ACTIVITIES

Senior Citizens Club No. 94

The regular meeting of the Bellecille Senior Citizens Club was held at the Recreation Centre with a good attendance and the usual president Mrs. Kathleen Moon.

One new member and one visitor and the regular members were welcomed.

Mrs. Bowers read the minutes of the previous meeting. Mrs. Jackson gave the financial report which included the proceeds from the bazaar which was most gratifying.

Mrs. Gist reported on the sick and Mrs. Milne and Mrs. Theda Woods were still in hospital. Mrs. Vickers is home and improving slowly.

Mrs. Summers introduced Mrs. Carolyn Moynes who spoke on the various activities which the members can take part in: carpet bowling, cricket work, art class and other entertainment.

Mrs. Moon thanked Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Ethier for looking after the refreshments also for all the members who helped make the bazaar a success.

Mrs. Vickers is unable to continue looking after the euchres so Mrs. Jessie La Londe and Mrs. Kay Watson are taking over this responsibility.

After the meeting closed cards were played; the winners were, Ada Scales, Connery Reid, Vera Bates, Jae Bailey, Kay Watson and Eleanor Hewson.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Beatrice Smith, Mrs. Ann Ethier and their helpers.

Thomas Simpson won the door prize.

Ann Landers
This Reader Doesn't Swear And He's Proud of It

Dear Ann Landers: Your answer to "Bridge Bill" regarding four-letter words was good but you should have hit him harder. Granted, words are only sounds, but by the same token, rattles and hooters are only scrape of paper. It's what those sounds and scraps of paper mean that matter. Most decent people are made uncomfortable by dirty words. Refraining from making people uncomfortable is simply good manners. No one has the right to embarrass others. In Texas a person can get arrested for using foul language in public.

I am 17 years old and proud to say that my father would slap me across the room if he heard me use a filthy word. Some kids my age think I am weird when I tell them to watch their mouths when I'm around, but in my opinion there's a lot more wrong with kids who can't express themselves without talking dirty than with me. If I'm a square, OK, but I'm proud to be a Texas Baptist.—Tyler Teen

Dear Ty: I'm a far cry from 17 and I'm no Texas Baptist, but I agree. Shake hands with a square from Iowa who liked your letter.

Dear Ann Landers: My 20-year-old boyfriend, after two years of college, has decided to be a hippie. My parents are shocked. My dad's comment was: "This kid must be gay." I need to assure dad that Gordon is a perfectly normal, healthy, male type and his major interest is taking care of sick people. He's not a queer and why Gordon doesn't go to medical school and become a doctor. But Gordon doesn't want to be a doctor. He prefers the relationship that exists between patient and nurse.

I am considering a career in nursing now that Gordon has talked so much about the satisfactions of caring for the sick. It would be simple to switch since I've had two years of college chemistry, zoology, biological science. But wouldn't it be considered odd if two nurses got married?—Service Oriented

Dear S.O: Today nothing is considered odd. Tell your father that many normal males have found a rewarding career in the nursing profession. But I do feel that they ought to call male nurses something else.

Dear Ann Landers: This question I want to ask is a highly personal one and I am reluctant to ask anyone we know. It places not only me, but my family in a very unflattering light. Can you help?

In the last month two relatives passed away. Both times we received huge boxes of clothing from the families. First, let me tell you that we are not poverty stricken, although I guess one might say we are probably the least affluent members of the family. Many of the garments were years old and in need of dry-cleaning. There were included, beds run down, holes in the soles, and broken laces. There were several dozen pairs of faded socks, torn pyjamas and underwear and shirts with frayed collars.

With missing buttons.

Our first inclination was to return the boxes but my husband and I decided that no insult was intended. These people are just ignorant. We sent the few wearable suits to the dry-cleaners and then to Goodwill Industries. The rest of the clothes we will use as polishing rags.

Now the question: Should we acknowledge receipt of the boxes? If so, what should we say?—Not THAT Poor In W. Va.

Dear Virginia: Acknowledge the boxes. Say: "Thank you." Period.

Browning – Whitney

MR. AND MRS. MICHAEL BROWNING

Christ Church was the setting for the recent wedding ceremony of Mary Lynn Whitney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Allan Cyril Whitney, Belleville and Michael Bert Browning, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bert A. Browning, Belleville. Rev. Canon Wright performed the ceremony.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She chose a floor length bridal gown which featured a lace bib on the front, and a round neckline trimmed with lace. Her shoulder length headdress fell from a comb headpiece. She carried red roses.

The matron of honor was Mrs. Catherine Anne Kleer. She was attired in a long gown with a floral bodice and rose skirt of polyester crepe. She carried a bouquet of pink and white mums.

Donald Lee Browning attended the bridegroom.

Ann-Margret on the Mend

—Entertainer Ann-Margaret gets an autograph from her husband, Roger Smith, on the cast over her broken arm as she recuperates in Hollywood from a fall off a 25-foot platform at the Sahara Tahoe hotel five weeks ago. She suffered five facial fractures, a broken jaw and the broken arm, and her jaw is still wired. Her doctors have approved plans for her to resume her career with an engagement in Las Vegas, Nev., starting Nov. 28. (AP Photo)

Accountants Hear Donnelly

Behavioral Science was the topic of discussion for area industrial accountants at their recent meeting.

Dr. Peter Donnelly, Ph.D., of Prince Edward Heights, Picton, addressed the group, explaining employee dissatisfaction when work is "mechanical," and "monotonous".

Outlining the relationship between employee and machine, Dr. Donnelly said the employee input into the operation becomes so "monotonous that people are rebelling".

He mentioned some industries have created teams to overcome monotonous tasks.

Guests for the next meeting, to be held Nov. 3, are National President of Society of Industrial Accountants Herb Pakrul and provincial president R. Scott.

B. C. Pensioners Guaranteed $200

VICTORIA (CP) — Residents of British Columbia who are 65 or over are guaranteed a minimum income of $200 a month under provisions of a bill given third and final reading Thursday in the B.C. legislature.

The Guaranteed Minimum Income Assistance Act, which is expected to cost about $58 million, was the major bill introduced in the nine-day 11-sitting special sitting of the legislature which is to be prorogued today.

The new Democratic Party government's initial legislative blueprint for the province contained 13 bills which were assured easy passage because of the party's 38 seats in the 55-member house. Social Credit holds 10 seats, Liberals five and Conservatives two.

Today the house will tackle 26 public bills in the hands of opposition members and eight motions introduced by the members.

Other bills given final reading Thursday were:

—The Handicapped Persons Income Assistance Act which provides for additional income assistance for the handicapped.

—An act to amend the Gift Tax Act so that it will conform with federal requirements and enable B.C., along with other provinces, to enter into a collection agreement with Ottawa.

—The Tobacco Products Act which gives the government the power to control the packaging, selling, distribution, advertising and promotion of tobacco and tobacco products within the province.

Nets Bird

WINNIPEG (CP) — When a ruffed grouse crashed through his living room window, Jack Larcombe used a fishing net to land the intruder. Later he got a friend who is knowledgeable about birds to care for the grouse until it could be set free.

Mrs. Trudeau Lets Down Campaign Hair

TORONTO (CP) — For reporters accustomed to seeing Margaret Trudeau maintain a discreet distance from them, there was packed disbelief on the press bus Thursday when the smiling wife of the prime minister hopped aboard.

"Hi," she said, as jaws dropped.

"I thought I'd like to ride in a press bus. I hear you have fun back here."

And with that, the dark-haired beauty stood in the aisle, held on to overhead rails, and talked happily about everything from women's liberation to motherhood.

"You're upsetting the apple cart," a reporter suggested.

"Goody, goody. I like to do that."

While the police escorted limousine carried her husband up ahead, Margaret Trudeau told the reporters that the stuff she reads in newspapers about herself is "like milk-toast." She said she didn't know the person described in the stories—but there was no massive amplification on this.

"I don't want to be liked as the prime minister's wife," she said. "I don't care to be around me for that reason."

She could move freely around Ottawa by herself—and she enjoyed doing so—"because people just aren't looking for me unless I am with Pierre."

She was "kind of in favor of women's lib," but "carrying a placard is not the way to achieve liberation."

It was a casual and laughter-loaded chat, coming near the end of an election campaign that has seen little of the 23-year-old Mrs. Trudeau.

When a discussion developed over whether reporters were price guys she pointed toward the limousine and said there was a nice guy up there, too.

"I am struggling to be myself," she said, and she added that she was a wife and mother. She didn't want to be standing around smiling.

When someone asked about a social pecking order, she said "I don't care about the pecking order."

It was a stunning departure from the impression of Mrs. Trudeau that has been created—and she did little to dispel it—since their marriage. Privacy has been diligently guarded.

The last time Mrs. Trudeau exchanged words with reporters—and they were scarce—was Sept. 26 when she entered the press section of the campaign plane with son Justin.

At that time the biggest piece of information was that Justin had two teeth. He now has four.

But on this swing, she has been far more outgoing. She seemed delighted in Fredericton earlier in the day when she became involved with the mother of a boy around Justin's age and they swapped information about teeth again—and she helped the woman change a film in her camera.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, FRIDAY, OCTOBER 27, 1972

Liberals Lack Humility: Ellis

SHANNONVILLE (Staff) — "The land is strong", said Hastings PC candidate Jack Ellis, referring to the Liberal Party slogan.

But he said "Canada is strong more in spite of than because of Mr. Trudeau's actions . . . the point that should be made is that the land should be stronger."

Ellis, in an interview here, stated he finds it objectionable that the Liberals do not even concede there are serious shortcomings with their leadership.

He said "they balk at criticism and do not have the humility to even see that a better job can be done. They are complacent."

The candidate said that the Land Is Strong theme plays strongly on Canadian patriotism, and with the theme linked to the Liberals, in effect, they have tended to make criticism of themselves appear to be criticism of Canada.

"I think people in this riding want to protest against the lack of feeling the Liberals have shown for their needs and aspirations," he stated.

"Canada needs new approaches in administration and the Liberals need to get the message that the people are not happy with the present leadership of their party by Mr. Trudeau."

He said the Liberals are now uneasy and are trying to bolster their chances with election "goodies" that now total $381 million by PC calculations.

Politics, Population Don't Mix

BLOOMFIELD (Staff) — Population pollution queried by one voter present at Monday's all - candidate session here was rejected by George Hees, PC, Prince Edward-Hastings as an impractical topic for discussion.

"We should deal with things that are practical policies," he emphasized.

Mr. Hees said zero population growth is "very repulsive and unhuman attribute".

The concept of supporting smaller families is not a new one but Mr. Hees said there is slight chance that any government to come will legislate population.

Zero growth of population and industry is impractical.

George Cunningham, Liberal candidate for Prince Edward - Hastings said expected persons have begun to limit the sizes of their families and he is convinced education is the answer to overpopulation.

Two Named To Police Commission

Two new appointments to the Belleville Police Commission have been confirmed by order in council, it has been announced by Mayor J. Russell Scott.

The new members are Judge Wilfred S. Lane of Picton, who succeeds former Hastings County Judge J. C. Anderson on the commission, and local businessman James B. Driscoll, who is replacing Judge T. Y. Wills. The new ber 15.

Judge Anderson resigned his position as county judge late in the summer but still acts as Surrogate Court Judge for Hastings. No appointment has been made to succeed Judge Anderson as county Judge.

Judge T. Y. Wills has been a member of the commission since his appointment as a magistrate shortly after World War II.

Mr. Driscoll, general manager of Moira - Schumer Fuels, is a former member of the Ontario Provincial Police.

Since the appointment of Judge Anderson as county judge, Mayor Scott has been acting as chairman of the local police commission.

What's in the Cards?

Sparring Session Opens Trial

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — Defence attorneys for Lake Ontario Cement Company Ltd. and Triad Trucksway yesterday made a bid to quash charges laid against both firms under the Environmental Protection Act before provincial court judge J. L. Clendenning.

The charges, relating to quarry operations at the Sandbanks, were laid by Toronto vacationer Agda Rayner. The cement company and the trucking company are jointly charged with two counts under the criminal code of Canada with interfering with the lawful use of and enjoyment of personal and private property. Both are jointly charged under the Environmental Protection Act on two counts of emission of sound in the operation of a front - end loader and trucks at the quarry site.

Joseph Pomerantz, a Toronto lawyer representing Triad Trucksways submitted that the Environmental Protection Act, section 14 particularly ultra vires in the province of Ontario.

He argued that pollution of the environment and protection of it against contamination are "a heading unto itself" and said the concept of protecting the environment must be considered as a whole unto itself."

The attorney remarked that federal legislation pre-empts provincial applicability if the matter in question is of paramount national concern.

Mr. Pomerantz referred to a "checkerboard system of thousands of laws" many of them contradictory, that control the environment in Canada because ecology, environment, and protection of the environment have not been reorganized as matters of national concern.

He said he knew of no judicial authority that can prevent Judge Clendenning from declaring control of the environment is "a subject matter all to itself."

The attorney added the government has created a ministry of the environment in response to concern for this issue and said it is not unusual or radical for the judiciary to recognize this interest.

Mr. Pomerantz asserted that he invited the judge "to judicially sanction that which the balance of society already knows to be true."

He commented the environment and its problems are "entities unto themselves" and should not be dealt with by the checkerboard system.

Mr. Pomerantz also argued the charges laid under the Environmental Protection Act by Mrs. Rayner do not disclose an offence known to law and are void for duplicity.

He said the charges read that the two firms "unlawfully did cause or permit the emission of a contaminant into the natural environment . . ."

Mr. Pomerantz said that it can be argued that LOCL caused the emission or Triad Trucksways caused it or either one permitted it or it could be "crisscrossed once again."

He said the law regarding the concept of duplicity is that only one offence can be disclosed. The essence of the offence must be determined first.

Charles Dubin, the attorney retained by LOCL, said the information under the Environmental Protection Act do not disclose an offence known to law.

He said should the judge accept the informations do purport an offence, then the charges are ultra vires.

He claimed they are also void through multiplicity, duplicity and uncertainty.

Mr. Dubin said section 14, 1A of the Environmental Protection Act does not prohibit what is alleged against the accused in the case.

"This charge is completely misconceived," he said.

He argued that sound is not a contaminant if the air since a contaminant is defined as any solvent, liquid, gas, odour, sound, vibration, radiation or combination of any of them, resulting from activity of man which may impair fully the natural environment and cause other specified damages.

He said one of the charges as laid under the protection act, alleges that sound from a motor vehicle affected the quality of the air.

"Obviously it doesn't make sense. It was never intended to," he observed.

Mr. Dubin also said the charge is misconceived "on its face" because it describes the that emission of the sound of them resulting from activity of man which may impair fully the natural environment and cause other specified damages.

The hearing resumed today in the former county jail court house.

Election Gimmick Charged

Sports Complex Support Iffy

By KENNETH SMITH
Staff Reporter

None were more curious about what the Liberals were doing yesterday than the other parties.

Word came early in the day that the Liberals would have some big news at 2 p.m., but there were no clues. Liberal candidate Frank Follwell broke from his schedule during the day by not attending a candidates' debate at Centre Hastings Secondary School, and PC Jack Ellis asked the students there "what is more important coming here to talk to you people or preparing some big announcement?"

When the Liberals finally disclosed what they had so carefully concealed, it turned out to be a backroom meeting between Belleville Yardmen and a senior civil servant at which groundwork was laid for an application by the locally-based benevolent fund for federal funding of their Quinte Sports Centre.

Mr. Follwell had called health minister John Munro and told him about the project, asking for a responsible civil servant to be sent down to give the yardmen advice on applying for assistance.

Setting for the meeting was the smoke-filled room in Liberal committee rooms on Front Street and Mayor J. Russell Scott was on hand to welcome visitors and explain the importance to the area of such a sports centre.

Some of the interesting tidbits of information revealed by the civil servant, who asked not to be named in reports of the meeting included:

— To get federal funding, Belleville Yardmen must show that the complex would not only be good for Belleville but that it is needed by the entire country.

— There is no possibility the federal government will give financial assistance toward the construction of the ice rink portions of the sports' centre.

— If the government gives the money it will want some say in the facilities provided.

— Many communities have applications before the government now for Olympic-scale facilities and Canada can get by without another Olympic training centre. The yardmen will have to vie for funds against many larger centres.

"You say there is a great need . . . who decided you needed an Olympic complex here?" asked the civil servant.

He said the need must be proved and the yardmen must make a definite proposal for their funding — ask for a "specific amount rather than having a we'll - take - what - we-can-get approach.

Jack Ellis of the PCs reacted to the Liberal - organized meeting by saying that "it looks like an election . . . they are trying to make the prospect of assistance to this project an election goodie."

He said he thinks it is up to the member of parliament elected next Monday to make sure that the complex would not only be good for Belleville but that it is needed by the entire country.

Ellis said "there was another federal government activity yesterday of great significance" — a reference to announcement by the department of Manpower and Immigration to pull out its counseling facilities from North Hastings.

"That is where the most serious unemployment problems are in this riding . . . if their services are not working out up there, it is their fault. Those services should not be terminated without full discussions with the people of the area."

The NDP's Elridge Brother called the meeting in Liberal headquarters yesterday "dirty play . . . unfair and a gimmick."

"It could have waited until after the election . . . neither Liberals nor Conservatives like to do anything until just before an election . . . the NDP has no surprises," he concluded.

Election Dismissed But Quiet - But

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Confusion is shaping up for election day, Monday, as different interpretations are placed on the Canada election act in different ridings.

In Belleville, on the advice of a member of the staff of the chief electoral officer in Ottawa, a blind eye will be turned on wearing of flags, ribbons or badges election day.

Loud speakers, ensigns and banners on vehicles will be ignored, too.

Both are forbidden in the election act, but the chief electoral officer's staffer was quoted by a local spokesman as saying "It's in the act, but we're not going to enforce it."

PC candidate Jack Ellis' car was the issue that prompted the appeal to the chief electoral officer. Brightly painted with PC signs and logos, it is illegal on the streets election day.

But, says the Ottawa authorities, this part of the election act is almost impossible to enforce. If one party wants to put the cars of another party off the streets for the day, it merely has to "slap on a stick or every time a car appears, and keep sending it back to the garage for removal.

"I've told all the parties to just use their good common sense," says Hastings riding returning officer, Reg Dunham.

But in Trenton, Prince Edward - Hastings returning officer Grace Radcliffe says any one sporting a party badge or logo on his person or his car election day is subject to serious trouble".

Furthermore, she won't allow a sign within 200 yards of a polling station.

Mr. Dunham says he will permit partisan signs on the cars of neighbouring ridings to the polling stations election day.

But a bulletin from Conservative headquarters to party workers says there is nothing in the election act to prevent placing party signs on lawns, porches or roofs of polling stations.

"The deputy returning officer may not be aware of this section of the election act; rather than waste your time arguing with him put the signs on neighbouring lawns," reads the bulletin.

On one section of the act everyone is in agreement. It is legal to run newspaper advertisements for candidates election day, but all radio and television broadcasting must cease by Saturday midnight. Broadcast advertising is prohibited by the election act on election day and the day immediately preceeding it.

China Tour Recalled

PICTON (Staff) — West Lake farmer Reginald, Windall, who spent three days in China on a tour organized by the National Farmers' Union, Tuesday described highlights of his visit to Picton Rotarians.

Mr. Windall showed colour slides which illustrated the science of acupuncture being exercised as an operation at the Norman Bethune Institute there.

The Canadian farmers and their wives joining the tour were invited to watch the operation for removal of a cancer from a Chinese patient anaesthetized through acupuncture.

The man remained "perfectly conscious" throughout the entire operation and apparently was not made self-conscious by his audience of Canadian farmers.

A farm is worked to supply the hospital with foods and a herd of Peking black and white cattle, identical to Canadian holsteins is maintained.

Mr. Windall remarked tractors are seldom used by Chinese farmers except for hauling on the roads. The horns on all vehicles are used extensively, however, since pedestrians and bicyclists ignore traffic regulations and will not be run down.

Police constables control the traffic lights in some areas and lights frequently are switched on held in the immediate demands.

Roads built in the Chinese communes were described by Mr. Windall as being in fairly good condition and all routes are lined with trees.

No natural forests exist now on the mountains in China but many trees have been planted since the "liberation" in 1949, mentioned frequently by the people.

The Chinese enjoy a new society which is extremely noisy and it was one of few places visited by the farm tourists which prohibited cameras.

The Chinese seem to boast very low crime rate and theft is unheard of in the countryside.

Mr. Windall said that hotel rooms were not locked and visitors could leave their handbags and other personal effects about but said Use only while they hiked, without fearing theft.

An exceptionally clean country, China has an almost zero fly population. The Canadian farmers, impressed by this phenomenon counted the flies they did see and ended with a total of eight during their 14-day stay.

In some areas of China the land is extremely rich and very deep and it is hard to find a desert sand farm areas and heaped in a two-foot depth over the crops growing there.

The trees of China are generally very small except for those grown on the estates of once wealthy war lords where no man dared to cut them for firewood. Many pines are grown there and a large number of poplars.

The touring farmers visited Hong Kong, The Forbidden City, and Peking while on their visit to China.

Proxy Deadline Tonight

Tonight's the deadline for persons unable to vote in Monday's federal election to obtain proxy certificates qualifying others to vote for them, says Hastings returning officer Reginald Dunham.

Mr. Dunham says application for proxies can be obtained at his Front St. office up to 10 p.m.

Philip Rickard, left, executive director of Belleville General Hospital chats with John A. Lupton, administrator of Trenton Memorial Hospital prior to the general session of the Ontario Hospital Association, Monday. Mr. Rickard was one of five panel members discussing approaches to ensuring patients out of active treatment facilities. Mr. Rickard spoke of the Queen's self care unit. Mr. Lupton was chairman for the session. (Toronto Bureau Photo)

Self Care Topic

Signing Up

The chief electoral officer for Canada is looking the other way this election when it comes to partisan political labels on cars and polling places Monday. Although buttons, such as these worn by first-time voter Garry Lyons, a Moira Secondary School student, are illegal in polling booths, the relevant sections of the election act are considered unenforceable.

Margaret With PM

TRENTON (Staff) — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau's wife, Margaret, will accompany him to Trenton and Port Hope this evening, in the final swing of his pre-election campaigning.

His motor cavalcade through downtown Trenton will stop in front of the PEI Office tower on Dundas Street. During this stop PM will make a short speech.

A spokesman for the local Conservatives today said there has been no change in the schedule for party leader Robert Stanfield's 6:05 p.m. landing at CFB Trenton. During his brief stopover there he will meet with members of the local press before leaving by helicopter for his final pre-election rally at Kingston.

NHL Teams No Longer In Fear of Boston Den

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ever since the Boston Bruins became a powerhouse in the National Hockey League, one of the accepted facts was that the team was almost unbeatable at home.

The Bruins have been so formidable on home ice in the past four seasons that during that time they lost only 30 of 154 games.

But with the lingering knee trouble of Bobby Orr, their all-star defenceman who also is an essential part of their attack, the Bruins appear less fearsome to the opposition and so far this season have been defeated three times in four home appearances.

The latest came Thursday night when they were beaten 6-5 by Chicago Black Hawks, the first Chicago victory in the Boston Garden in nearly two years.

While the Bruins continue to flounder, Montreal Canadiens maintained their unbeaten streak with a 7-0 whitewash of St. Louis Blues and Detroit Red Wings had their undefeated streaked broken by losing 2-1 to Philadelphia Flyers. In the only other game Thursday night, Los Angeles Kings beat Atlanta Flames 3-1.

The 24-year-old Orr, the league's most valuable player the last three seasons, was declared out of action indefinitely Thursday. His left knee, operated on last June after he fell Boston to the Stanley Cup championship, "requires more strengthening exercises to build it up to meet the stress of game-type competition," said Dr. Carter Rowe, the Bruins' surgeon.

The Bruins showed signs Thursday night of holding their own with the Black Hawks, 3rd leaders in the West Division despite the Chicago loss of Bobby Hull to the World Hockey Association.

They overcame a goal by Chico Maki in the first minute of play by scoring three first period goals to lead the Black Hawks 5-4 at the end of the first period, but their defence collapsed after that.

Chicago scored three goals in the second period and twice in the third to win its first game in Boston since January 1970. Six players shared in the Chicago scoring while Phil Esposito got two for the Bruins.

Lemaire, who scored three goals Tuesday night in New York against the Islanders, also got assists in Montreal on goals by Yvan Cournoyer and Chuck Lefley.

Lemaire's scoring however is not the only reason for Montreal's undefeated streak and sole possession of first place in the NHL's East Division. Ken Dryden's goaltending is also a factor.

The lanky goalie registered his third shutout of the season as he blocked 27 St. Louis shots—though few of them were dangerous. All seven Montreal goals were scored against Jacques Caron in the first two periods. He was replaced by Wayne Stephenson at the start of the third period.

Out Ort of Action For Indefinite Period

BOSTON (AP) — Bobby Orr, the National Hockey League's most valuable player the last three seasons, was declared out of action indefinitely, Thursday because of lingering knee trouble.

The 24-year-old superstar underwent surgery on the left knee last June after leading Boston Bruins to the Stanley Cup championship. He was recovering but suffered a setback after he appeared in just three games this season.

Dr. Carter Rowe, the Bruins' surgeon, said Orr's knee "requires more strengthening exercises to build it up to meet the stress of game-type competition."

Orr, the NHL rookie of the year in 1966-67 and winner of the Norris Trophy as the league's top defenceman the last five years, began skating in early September, but had to sit out the Team Canada-Russia series.

He wanted to return to action against Pittsburgh Penguins Oct. 15, but Bruins Manager Harry Johnson vetoed the idea. He finally made his debut last Saturday in Pittsburgh and played against Vancouver Canucks Sunday and against Buffalo Sabres Wednesday.

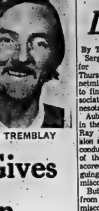
However, he was used sparingly, mostly on the powerplay or when the Bruins were shorthanded. He took a recurn turn in the third period against Vancouver, but was unable to skate in his flashy style.

Orr refused to admit the knee bothered him much, but teammates told friends he was in a great deal of pain.



The loss of Orr is a severe blow to the Bruins, who are struggling with a 3-4-1 record. With him in uniform, they won one game, tied another and lost one.

Although not fit to play, Orr will continue to skate with the Bruins in practice while taking special exercises and undergoing therapy.

To replace Orr, the Bruins called up rookie defenceman Ron Jones, 21, from Boston Braves of the American Hockey League. Jones was a top selection in the amateur draft last June.

Hadfield Gives Explanation

TORONTO (CP) — Vic Hadfield, captain of New York Rangers of the National Hockey League who walked out on Team Canada in Moscow nearly a month ago, has told his side of the story.

In a television show, Sports Beat, on CTV network Wednesday night, Hadfield, who refused to speak to reporters in Moscow following his defection—said nobody had asked for his version of the incident.

"I went to practise in Russia," he said. "There were 34 players and naturally with 34, everybody isn't going to play and everybody realizes this. They took eight forward lines and I was left by myself and told to stand over by the boards while the other players practised.

"Now, I am a pro and have a lot of pride—I mean I play aggressive hockey and I thought like I was supposed to be immune but I have feelings the same as everybody else and I was deeply hurt. But I came over because I thought I could help. . . .

"Finally, Harry Sinden comes over and says 'I'd like you to take a few shifts at centre,' I said 'Harry, what are going on there? I scored 50 goals and I think I'm as good as anybody out here. I came over with all intentions of playing Canada.'

"He said 'if you don't like it, you can take your clo-hoo and go home.'

Hadfield said he left it at that. Does said Alan Eagleson, one of the Team Canada officers, that he would rather go home if he's tired—he weren't needed.

He quoted Eagleson as replying 'okay, I'll make the arrangements: you can fly home tomorrow.'

He said he left it to Eagleson to 'smooth everything out' with reporters.

Parent Out For Month

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Goalie Bernie Parent of Philadelphia Blazers is expected to be out at least four weeks with a broken bone in his foot, Parent, who joined the World Hockey Association club from Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League, suffered the injury Wednesday night in the Blazers' 4-3 drubbing by Cleveland. The first shot of the game struck him just above the metal guard on his skate.

Nordiques Win Game Despite Aubry's Exit

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Serge Aubry started in goal for Quebec Nordiques on Thursday night but the fiery netminder never got chance to finish the World Hockey Association game against Minnesota Fighting Saints.

Aubry, given a minor penalty in the second period by referee Ray Scanas, argued the decision and was later given a misconduct. Then towards the end of the period when Minnesota scored, Aubry continued arguing and was given a game misconduct.

But despite Aubry's ejection from the game for his game misconduct, Les Nordiques held on to defeat the Saints 5-4 before 5,980 fans.

Another game, Houston Aeros whipped Ottawa Nationals 7-3 and New York Raiders beat New England Whalers 7-6.

After Aubry was thrown out of the game, he was replaced by Richard Brodeur, a junior last season with Montreal Red-wings of the Quebec Junior Hockey League. Brodeur allowed one goal in the third period.

Les Nordiques took a 4-0 lead in the first period on goals by Francois Lacombe, Yves Bergeron, Andre Gaudette and Ken Desjardine, but the Saints fought back with three unanswered goals in the second period, two by Wayne Connelly and one by George Konik.

The team exchanged goals in the final period, Michel Parizeau scoring for Les Nordiques and Mike Antonovich replying for Minnesota.

J.C. Tremblay, the former Montreal Canadiens star defenceman, missed action Thursday night because of calcium deposits in the left shoulder but he said he will be ready for the last four years, but said the job ahead was equivalent to completing 12 years of normal progress into four.

Hudson's chart showing medals won by countries of smaller population than Canada for the summer and winter Games, showed that East Germany, with a population of 17.5 million, had gone from 25 medals in 1968 to 63 medals at the 1972 Olympics in Munich.

Bulgaria, with slightly more than one-third of Canada's population, went from nine medals to 21. Sweden, like Bulgaria with a population of eight million, went from four to 16 medals.

Canada had progressed from five medals in 1968 to six in 1972.

The COA plan, in summary, would establish "full-time" first-class athletes in all Olympic sports by 1976; have Canada place in the top 10 countries in the unofficial Olympic point standings; would ensure that "every Olympic-class athlete has full access to resources necessary for him to compete to maximum potential," and would be a program "that must compliment and extend the over-all development programs of the sports federations."

Tenace Shuns Series Fame

NEW YORK (AP) — The hero of baseball's World Series may seem like a pinch of heaven to the average American boy, but not to Gene Tenace.

"It's not that I don't appreciate it—I just don't enjoy it.

GENE TENACE

The 26-year-old part-time catcher of Oakland Athletics said Thursday after returning to New York to accept a new automobile.

"I just want to go home."

"I just want to go home."

Tenace, who emerged from virtual obscurity to lead the Athletics to a seven-game victory over Cincinnati Reds, received a 1973 sports car from Sport Magazine as the Series' most valuable player.

"Nothing's changed," he said in a subdued voice. "I'm no different. I'm still just me."

Tenace slammed four homeruns during the Series, tying a record shared by such immortals as Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig; batted in two runs and set up the third in the Athletics' seventh game 3-2 victory; batted .348 and had an all-time slugging mark of .919, eclipsing Ruth's finest.

Since then, his life has been one mad merry-go-round.

Knudson Still In Golf Groove

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (CP) — George Knudson began the first round of $135,000 Canadian international golf tournament Thursday in the same way he opened play in the Kaiser Open—in the lead at the end of the first round.

The Torontonian, the streakiest winner of the Kaiser last Sunday, when he won $30,000 with a 17-under-par 271 shared first place in the Sahara with four others, including the legendary Arnold Palmer, 43.

The five forged 65s over the Country Club course. The others include stand-out Lanny Wadkins and Larry Ziegler.

Knudson, who shot rounds of 66, 69, 66 and 70 to take the Kaiser Open, Calif., three strokes ahead of Hale Irwin and Bobb Nichols, said after that second record-breaking effort that the Sahara would be his last tournament for the year. s

Provinces Back Olympic Plan

TORONTO (CP) — Game Plan '76, the Canadian Olympic Association's blueprint for excellence at the Montreal summer Games, has "achieved one heartening result" of gaining unanimous endorsement by the sports federations of all 10 provinces and both territories as well as that of all COA member sports federations.

"All we lack now is formal agreement from the federal government that it, too, is prepared to support Game Plan '76," said Imre Szabo, chairman of the plan's steering committee.

At a news conference, called to report progress on Canada's plans for upgrading her athletic performances in international competition, other spokesmen said such plans are about a year behind what could be considered an ideal position and were nearing a critical stage.

"Canada faces an athletic decade in international sport," Szabo said. "but if we are to get maximum results, our athletes must have the kind of development support provided to other athletes of other nations."

John Hudson, head of the Coaches' Association of Canada, produced figures he said show Canada has progressed in

Trojan Fiddles in Tune

By ERIC EMERSON
Sports Editor

Ever play second fiddle in a one-man band? No matter how good you are, you just don't attract much attention.

It must be the same kind of feeling for Glen Shaw and Steve Kirby, operating out of the Moira backfield. The pair bombined for what might have been the key play of Thursday's game as the Trojans rallied to a 32-12 win over Trenton seniors to win the sudden - death Bay of Quinte COSSA semi-final.

With the Trojans clinging to a slim 7-6 lead in the third quarter and facing a third-and - seven situation, Shaw, who doubles as Moira's punter and kicker lofted a Joe Kapp-type pass from punt formation. The ball flutter-wobbled, dipped and floated — right into Kirby's hands at the seven-yard line. The Eastern division champions scored on the next play to open a 14-6 lead which they were never in jeopardy of losing.

"We called that play from the bench," admitted Hugh Cook after the game, "their corner linebacker had been dropping in towards the middle on punts all game. That time, he stayed in the flat, but they still managed to complete the pass."

Despite their efforts Shaw and Kirby continued to be over - shadowed by teammates' Dave Rutherford and Peter Saulnier. Rutherford continued his offensive heroics with 186 yards rushing and three touchdowns, while Saulnovich kept proving that one man can indeed gang tackle, with some crushing stops on the Trenton offence.

Cook picked up 107 - yard touchdown run by Rutherford as his choice of fake was a key play. In the second quarter, with Moira trailing 6-0 and backed up on their own three, the Trojans speedster broke off-tackle and outdistanced a pursuing Darryl Donnelly the length of a sloppy Albert College field. The Trenton safety had caught Rutherford from behind for a one-yard line in last week's regular season meeting to prevent a long touchdown run.

This week it was Rutherford's turn on defence, overhauling Peter Yates on the one, after the Trenton back had broken an 83-yard counter in the first quarter. The Moira defence, led by tackle Larry Kirby held the Tigers from scoring to preserve a 6-6 tie.

Joe Norman gave Trenton its only lead by pulling in a 45-yard scoring pass from Dave Harvey. It was one of the few successful air strikes by the Trenton quarterback who had trouble setting up because of the soft field and a hard defensive line.

After the key Moira gamble in the third quarter in which Shaw connected with Kirby, Rutherford rambled the ball over from the seven on the next play for a 14-6 lead.

John Hilborne on a 30-yard interception return, Rutherford on a 40-yard sweep and Steve Kirby on a 45 - yard off tackle scare the visiting Moira scorers. Don Armstrong, a two - way standout for the Tigers scored their other major on a seven - yard sweep in the third quarter.

Moira's Leon Leween sends Trenton ballcarrier Shane Barker flying through the air with a perfectly timed tackle during a muddy Bay of Quinte COSSA semi - final football game Thursday. The senior Trojans sent Trenton flying in much the same manner by spanking a surprising 32-12 win on the slightly - favored Tigers. Teammates Peter Stalkovich and Larry Kirby move in to give Leween some assistance that obviously wasn't required.

Somewhere in that tangle of players, Quinte's fullback Kevin Joudwa carried the pigskin over for the third touchdown. Joudwa contributed to Quinte's 43-0 win over BCI yesterday at the QSS field. The Saint's victory puts them into the Bay of Quinte COSSA final against Moira Tuesday. The Saints have been undefeated in league and playoff action to date, while Moira has lost only one game.

Saints Black Out BCI

By AL ZARAS

With Quinte's fifth straight shutout, a 43-0 win over BCI yesterday, the Collegian's black jerseys seemed appropriate, as if mourning the death of their hopes of entering the Bay of Quinte COSSA football finals.

While the Saint's defensive line up seemed impenetrable, BCI's crumbled before the offensive onslaught directed by quarter-back Rick Meagher.

In the first quarter, Paul "Sadie" McQuaid put Quinte's first touchdown on the board, running 60 yards out off a sweep. In the second, the Saint's simply ripped apart BCI's defense. Terry Rappel dropped on a fumbled BCI punt attempt from their own goal line, adding six, Kevin Joudwa zoomed in for another six, Steve McDowell for another six, Ken Vos, off a kick off, for yet another six. Conversions totalled the second quarter scoring to 31 points.

In the third quarter, the BCI Collegians plugged up the holes in their line, grouped Q-back Meagher's aerial attack, and kept the Saints from crossing their goal line.

At the beginning of the fourth quarter, the Collegian's at last caught a glimpse of the chalk of Quinte's goal line, only to have a fumble cost them a possible scoring play. Fittingly, Paul McQuaid, again rounded the end and swept in for the TD. With the convert good, and BCI conceding a single the Saints marked up 45 points.

When asked to account for the success of the Saints, who fielded only 28 players, coach Rick Locke said, "every player knows that he won't sit long on the bench. They don't lose touch with the game or their enthusiasm."

Rollins Press

Rollins' peewee majors pressed the scoring button Thursday night and it stayed pressed as the Belleville team fired 19 goals in the final period for a 13-7 win over Oshawa.

Dan Duffy led the OMHA team with four goals.

Collegian Juniors Tumble Trenton

BCI's Bruce Sutherland, in an amassing 200 yard offensive assault on Trenton's defenses, helped lead the Collegians into the Bay of Quinte COSSA semi-finals yesterday afternoon. Amassing 450 total offensive yards, the Collegians upset the previously unbeaten Tigers 20-6.

With BCI's defense "stopping Trenton absolutely cold" as assistant coach Ken Smith said, Sutherland, Brian Roach and Russ Simmonds put BCI ahead to stay in the first quarter. Larry Wilson booted two singles into the end zone, while Trenton's lone TD came from Mark Petrie.

Moira 'Mudder' Gives Juniors Win

The Moira "mudder" was fullback Dan Gutcski who plunged through the 26 Tiger points. The 186-pounder barrelled across on line plunges for four touchdowns and added a two-point conversion.

Sneddon praised the work of offensive linemen Chris Foran, Rick Growder, Mark Hannah, Brian Spencer and Mickey Whalen for opening the holes in the Centennial defensive unit for Gutcski.

Reids Can't Waite

Ted Waite didn't wait to begin a Bay of Quinte Hockey League scoring pace putting four of Reids seven goals into Belvedere Hotel's net. Ron Pointer, Paul Zakos and B. Wonders on the Reids team added the other three tallies. Belvedere's goals came from John Baker and Elmer Cain.

In the other Quinte hockey league game last night, the Teachers, in a 5-4 decision edged Central Taxi.

Teachers' tallies came from Doug Judson (2), Gord McGaughey and Bruce Racicot who scored his second and tie-breaking goal with less than two minutes remaining. Central Taxi's goals came from Dwight Rathwell, Jim Woodcock, and Tom Pierce with two.

Goalies Great

At the Prince Edward North Shore hockey league's opening double header Thursday night at Wellington Arena, two goalies opened their seasons with shutouts.

RAMS, BEAVERS TIE

TORONTO (CP) — Richmond Hill Rams battled back from a third-period, 4-1 deficit to tie Downsview Beavers 4-4 Thursday night in an Ontario Hockey Association Provincial Junior A game. Bob Bangay led the Rams with two goals, including the tying one with less than five minutes to play. Dave Hill and Hugh Culler got the others. Rick Lazaro, Jeffe Kelly, Randy Sisoti and Ernie Paruschi scored for Downsview.

What the Stars Say

By JEANE DIXON

SATURDAY, OCT. 28

Aries (March 21-April 19): Your persuasive skills rise to the occasion late in the day. Almost anything is within your reach then.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Home affairs deserve extra attention. Whatever you do to achieve harmony has desirable side effects.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Conservative, calculated risks work out. Stay out of sight to exempt yourself from other people' whims.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Don't waste energy on matters not to your immediate concern. Blocking near home base offers a new perspective on an old problem.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Endless discussions turn around issues that have been settled; nothing to do but rehearse the experience until all are used to the state of affairs.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your plans interest so many people for so many reasons it may be better to say nothing about them.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Care and courtesy are the order of the day. Nearly everybody is in a hurry, distracted.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): People will not be easily rushed or persuaded. Let them reconsider spontaneously. Explain nothing without definite requests from authority point.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Travel is not feasible, apt to be complicated. Bills are due. Check your arrangements and have an alternative course prepared if you cannot skip the journey.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Anything you do will stir comment, so be forthright and candid.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Circumstances are on the brink of potential major change—be alert and ready to go with the flow.

Bowel Pragmatic, Likes Easy Life

By G.C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: When ever-I go on a diet I have trouble with my bowels not moving. What can I take to keep them regular?—Mrs. F.B.

You aren't the only one wondering about this. Lots of diets are deficient in fiber.

The bowel is a very pragmatic organ. It does the work that needs to be done—which is to get rid of waste material from the intestinal tract when-ever there's enough to be worth getting rid of.

Now when you go on a diet, of a reducing die, is it not? If you eat less. That's the purpose of a reducing diet, is it not? If you eat less, there's less material for the bowel to discharge, so it doesn't happen as often.

You say you want to remain "regular" and the chances are that you do remain regular—except that "regular" doesn't necessarily mean as often as before.

In other words, if you eat less, don't expect to have your bowel act as often. Missing a movement for a day or two doesn't mean you are in trouble or that you are "constipated."

Of course, there are things you can do to add more fruit and vegetables, particularly the low-calorie ones like lettuce. For reducing cut down on high-calorie, low-fiber foods such as cereals, potatoes and fats, and substitute an equivalent amount of low-calorie vegetables which have a rather high residue (cellulose which you don't absorb) but don't add weight. (They are also valuable sources of vitamins and minerals.)

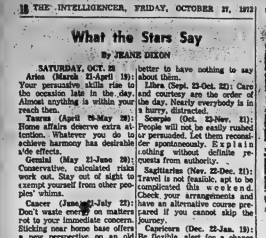
Or, alternatively, you can get some artificial "bulk producers," such as agar preparations (a vegetable) (not daily) doses of milk of magnesia can induce slightly more frequent movement without unduly irritating the colon, as the harsh laxatives do.

Or, finally, you can just accept the fact that if you are eating less you don't need as frequent movements.

I am quite aware that a lot of readers, who have been brought up to believe that a daily bowel movement is "necessary for health" will still have an unreasoning belief that, even on a diet, they ought to have just as much bowel activity regardless of the reduced food input. But figure it out for yourself. Why should you?

It's either a fold of skin or a tiny tumor at the end of the urethra in women—the urethra being the tube from the urinary bladder to the outlet.

It can cause a deviation of the urinary stream as well as painful urination. A caruncle also tends to bleed readily.



The cause is not clear, but probably due to loosening of underlying membranes. It is successfully treated by removing the caruncle surgically. Not a difficult procedure.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Do you see any harm in using a depilatory to remove stray unsightly hairs? I don't like to pluck them because I've heard it increases growth, and anyway there are too many stray hairs to do that. —F.K.S.

Depilatories are likely to irritate tender skin, and there's also the risk of getting them in the eye, as I'd say plucking does not increase growth. With either method, the hairs will grow again. Have you considered having the hairs removed permanently by an electrologist?

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — John Quarrinton had his 1968 car stolen. It was found in a nearby field it was minus one or two things—engine, wheels, seats, the entire rear-end housing, transmission, speedometer, radio, speakers, even the heat controls. Bidding quiz

You are South, both sides vulnerable. The bidding has been:

West	North	East	South
1♣	Dble	Pass	?

What would you bid now with each of the following four hands?

1. ♠ 72 ♥ 843 ♦ Q952 ♣ Q953
2. ♠ 83 ♥ KJ6 ♦ KJ4 ♣ KQ984
3. ♠ 94 ♥ Q652 ♦ KQJ8 ♣ 753
4. ♠ 6 ♥ Q974 ♦ AJ87 ♣ KJ96

1. Two clubs. North's takeout double is presumably based on at least the values for an opening bid. He may have 14 points, possibly 20; there is no way of knowing at this stage how many he actually has. Since you are obliged to respond to the double, you can't be held responsible for bidding a poor hand when you do respond.

With identical holdings in the minor suits and a poor hand to boot, you start at the bottom of the ladder in responding. If partner lacks club support he has room to bid diamonds at the two level. But note that if you responded two diamonds, there would be no corresponding opportunity to locate a club fit with you not going into the three level.

2. Three clubs. You can't bid two clubs with this hand as well as the preceding one and expect partner to know that this time you're loaded. The usual way of showing strength opposite a double is by making a jump response. Generally, such a response designates 10 or more high-card points, but when there are attractive distributional features the requirements are of course reduced.

3. Two hearts. Here you lack the strength for a jump response, but the values you do have are sufficient to suggest the possibility of game. It is therefore best to respond in one's cheaper major diamonds, because partner is more likely to bid again over a major suit reply than a minor suit reply. If he raises to three hearts, you should happily bid four.

4. Two spades. Game is extremely likely in one of your three suits, but you can't tell which one. Instead of trying to guess by jumping to three of a suit, you should force North to choose the right spot by cuebidding the adverse suit.

Partner can't possibly misunderstand this call, for you would leave the double in if spades were actually your longest suit. Two spades is consequently a strength-showing bid and must be raised by North to select the trump. Whichever suit he chooses, you raise directly to game.

Tomorrow: A Basic principle.

Pyramid Selling His Target

TORONTO (CP) — At first glance Paul Brown is a bit disarming. He looks more like an easy-going student than the person the Ontario government decided to knit off illegal pyramid selling operations in the province.

He's been register of pyramid schemes since June, when legislation was enacted to control pyramid selling in Ontario, but it has been long enough for him to realize how difficult it is to come to grips with the problem.

Mr. Brown is 27, gentlemannered and boyish. He is genuinely shocked at what some slick pyramid promoters have done to "hook" people into their schemes.

In pyramid selling, individuals invest substantial amounts of money for two things — a distributorship for a product or service and the right to receive extra cash rewards for finding other would be salesmen who are willing to invest. They are the ones who, in theory, most of those who take the bait invariably lose.

Ontario's new legislation, effective June 15, requires all distributorships for products to register with Mr. Brown and comply with the regulations he enforces.

Under the law the reward offered for recruiting a new participant is limited to 10 per cent of his investment. The newcomer must receive goods with a retail value of at least his total investment.

At any time within six months the newcomer can step out of the scheme and get 75 per cent of his money back if he returns all his goods undamaged.

The promoter must file a prospectus with the registrar, and get his approval, and provide copies of the document to each prospective newcomer 12 hours before any contract is signed.

Mr. Brown can refuse to issue a certificate of acceptance for a wide range of reasons, from the fact that it violates the new law to a personal hunch that a scheme is "unfair and not feasible."

Penalties of up to one year in jail and a $5,000 fine for individuals and a $100,000 fine for companies are provided.

Mr. Brown says no company has yet filed a prospectus. Two companies, however, have been given provision to continue operating pending a formal filing.

He tells the story of a Northern Ontario milkwright who came into his office one day with his wife and child.

"I guess he had been making $3 to $4 an hour, I'm sure. Anyway, he got involved in two pyramid schemes in the last 5½ years and in that time he lost his house because he couldn't keep up the mortgage payments and lost a trucking business. I think, because he spent so much time recruiting new people into the schemes. He was $30,000 in debt."

The man didn't want to take any legal action: he just wanted to know the truth about the companies and get the government on their trail. Many others take this same attitude.

"I'm sure there are pyramid schemes operating in Ontario. But we can't do much unless we have the complaints and unless they are willing to go to court."

Mr. Brown, paid $21,000 a year, has no permanent staff of his own, but he can borrow personnel from other government departments and the Ontario Securities Commission. He often passes on information to provincial police trying to prosecute a company underfraud or lottery provisions of the Criminal Code, and similar to recent actions in New Brunswick and Alberta.

He says that from his experience with new legislation, passed because Ontario felt it needed more certain controls than those that could be drawn from the Criminal Code only, the province has modified the behavior of pyramid schemers in the province. They are "operating at a lower profile now" and some have even changed their operations to the point of requiring no investment.

Minimum Low

TORONTO (CP) — An expected raise in the Ontario minimum wage from $1.65 an hour is not enough, David Archer, president of the Ontario Federation of Labor, said Thursday. The Ontario government is expected to announce the increase in the next few days. "We believe $2.50 an hour is the minimum on which a person can live in decency and dignity," Mr. Archer said.

Egg Raid

LONDON (CP) — A gang of Soviet thieves who stole 24,000 (about $10,000), with the help of rotten eggs, has been arrested in Moscow, police announced today.

The eggs were thrown at the window of the Mayfair jeweller's shop until shattered, a passer-by outside to clean up, one of the thieves slipped inside for the loot. The manager's only comment afterwards: "We paid a cowardly sum like that, they must have all been chicken."

No Bombs

WINNIPEG (CP) — A Canadian-born Jew who called police after he received a letter he thought might have been booby-trapped need not have bothered. The man said the letter looked suspiciously like those sent by terrorists to Israeli embassies. But armed forces bomb disposal experts found it contained only two lottery tickets.

Bombing Halted

LONDON '(AP) — U.S. Defence Secretary Melvin Laird announced today that United States planes have halted all bombing operations on North Vietnam above the 20th parallel.

The 20th parallel bisects Northern Vietnam. The area above the 20th includes the capital, Hanoi, and the port of Haiphong. The parallel is about 75 air miles south of Hanoi and some 240 air miles north of the so-called demilitarized zone.

He refused to say whether the United States was still flying reconnaissance missions north of the 20th parallel but he appeared to take one step further an announcement in Washington Thursday by presidential adviser Henry Kissinger.

Kissinger told a news conference the United States had informed North Vietnam that "we would stop violating missiles north of the 20'h parallel."

MANY BIRDS

There are 700 species of birds found on the mainland of Australia and the seas nearby.

Transferred

MONTREAL (CP) — The Gazette says several Montreal police morality squad members, including the commanding officer, are to be transferred to other departments on the force.

The newspaper said today that Capt. Robert Blanchette, head of the squad, and Lieut. Steve Ojnyk, expert on illegal gambling, are among the officers to be transferred Monday.

Change Coming

MELITA, Man. (CP) — Premier Ed Schreyer said Thursday it would be unrealistic to expect the New Democratic Party to form the next federal government. But it is likely they will have the majority of representatives from Western Canada.

He told about 80 people at a rally in support of Brandon-Souris NDP candidate Ken Singleton, that the election of three western NDP provincial governments since 1939 indicates a change is coming federally.

On the Election Record

Promises, Promises

OTTAWA (CP) — Election promises have come in all shapes and sizes during the campaign for Monday's general election.

Politicians have concentrated on taxes, inflation and unemployment, but their other pledges range from improving the Alaska Highway to helping Soviet Jews emigrate.

Following is a sampling of specific promises, excluding tax cuts, made so far in this campaign, as culled from the published record.

They are compiled by party, on a day-to-day basis:

PIERRE TRUDEAU

Liberal

Sept. 12: Manpower Minister Bryce Mackasey says the Local Initiatives Program (LIP) will be made permanent on Liberal re-election.

Sept. 14: External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp tells Jewish demonstrators in Montreal the Canadian government will intercede for Soviet Jews who want to emigrate, but is unable to pay the demanded $2-per-cent tax.

Sept. 19: Regional Development Minister Jean Marchand says the federal government will contribute $5.3 million dollars to build a woods industry plant in Cabano, Que.

Sept. 19: Urban Affairs Minister Ron Basford promises a federal program by late 1973 to deal with municipal sewage-disposal problems.

Sept. 19: Environment Minister Jack Davis promises to work for a new Canada-U.S. agreement to develop the St. John River in New Brunswick.

Sept. 21: James Richardson, minister of supply and services, says the federal government is willing to sit down with provincial governments next year and discuss their objections to freight rates.

Sept. 22: Mr. Marchand pledges $150 million over the next five years to the Cape Breton Development Corp., established to deal with a depressed Nova Scotia area.

Sept. 27: Mr. Basford says Metis and non-status Indians in the West will get $1.1 million this winter to repair their houses.

Sept. 28: Prime Minister Trudeau says the government will continue "putting pressure" on the U.S. to get a Canadian airline the right to schedule flights to the U.S. from Winnipeg.

Rates Frozen

Sept. 23: Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson announces that interest rates on loans to farmers, fishermen and small businessmen will be frozen for six months.

Sept. 29: Mr. Olson says he would consider giving the National Farmers Union the right to bargain for all farmers if the union gets the support of 51 per cent of farmers.

Sept. 29: Mr. Richardson says his supply department will decentralize its purchasing so that the West and Atlantic provinces can sell more equipment and supplies to the federal government.

Sept. 30: "Prime Minister Trudeau promises, if Quebec ever separates, to return to Quebec and fight for a re-united Canada.

Oct. 3: Mr. Davis says Canada will negotiate the Pacific salmon treaty.

Oct. 4: Solicitor-General Warren Allmand: Goyer says the Prison Act will be amended to allow provincial penitentiaries to hold federal prisoners.

Oct. 5: Mr. Goyer promises an announcement before Oct. 30 on what the new RCMP investigation will be, provided he can get provincials' agreement by then.

Oct. 10: Mr. Trudeau and Northern Affairs Minister Jean Chretien announce a program to develop historic trails, waterways and parks.

Oct. 12: Justice Minister Otto Lang announces that advance payments for western grain are being increased by 30 cents a bushel; he also promises that there will be enough revenue from grain sales to give farmers a final payment on top of that big increase in spending money just before election.

ROBERT STANFIELD

Plan Park

Oct. 16: Mr. Sharp announces a $30-million plan to develop the waterfront of Toronto, his home city.

Oct. 18: Finance Minister John Turner announces a comprehensive redevelopment plan for Ottawa, his home city.

Oct. 20: Marc Lalonde, key Trudeau aide and Liberal candidate rumored to be in line for a cabinet post if elected, says a guaranteed annual income will be established at some future date.

Oct. 22: Mr. Basford promises new housing legislation next year to provide federal funds to renovate rundown residential areas.

Oct. 23: Mr. Trudeau says immigration regulations will be tightened to cut down on foreigners who come here as tourists and then get Canadian citizenship.

Oct. 24: Consumer Affairs Minister Robert Andras promises a national system of new-home warranties.

Conservative

Sept. 6: George Hees, former Conservative trade minister, promises that a Conservative government will launch a massive campaign to find new agricultural markets.

Sept. 14: Claude Wagner, Conservative Quebec lieutenant, promises tax cuts and says there will be $70 million in income tax rebates.

Sept. 15: Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield promises a minimum price of $1.10 a bushel for top-grade-wheat, and must 25 cents more than the then-current price.

Sept. 16: Mr. Stanfield says a Conservative government will improve wage and price controls in an inflation crisis.

Sept. 19: Mr. Stanfield promises a free vote in the Commons on whether to bring back capital punishment.

Sept. 21: A Conservative policy paper promises to outlaw strikes in essential services.

Sept. 21: Another Conservative paper promises an "income development program" similar to a guaranteed annual income.

Sept. 23: Mr. Stanfield says that as prime minister he will re-establish a separate fisheries department.

Sept. 27: Mr. Stanfield promises to give provincial governments 100 per cent of revenues from their offshore mineral resources.

Sept. 27: Mr. Stanfield promises to negotiate with the U.S. on improving the Alaska Highway.

Sept. 28: Mr. Stanfield pledges higher fines for policemen.

Parole Change

Sept. 28: Mr. Wagner says a Conservative government will shake up the national parole board to ensure dangerous convicts are not released on parole.

Sept. 30: Mr. Stanfield suggests a Conservative government would cancel plans to build an airport at Pickering Ont., saying construction of a second Toronto-area airport "may well be undesirable." But a local Conservative candidate pledge to work for the Pickering airport.

Oct. 2: Mr. Wagner says a Conservative government will end the monopoly of non-Quebecers over the Gaspe fishery.

Oct. 4: Mr. Stanfield promises to investigate alleged conflicts of interest in the Canada Development Corp., that revolving federal agency designed to promote Canadian ownership.

Oct. 5: Conservative policy paper promises shorter election campaigns, television coverage of Commons debates and a permanent Speaker.

Oct. 7: Another promises quicker divorces after separation or desertion and a free vote on whether to change abortion laws.

Oct. 11: Yet another policy paper says a Conservative government will set up an environmental youth corps.

Oct. 19: Mr. Stanfield promises a $300-million program to build small businesses.

Oct. 20: Mr. Stanfield promises to freeze rail freight rates.

Oct. 22: Mr. Stanfield says

DAVID LEWIS

that as prime minister he would call a federal-provincial conference to discuss "priorities for tomorrow."

NDP

Sept. 12: Mr. Lewis says there is a nine-per-cent interest rate on houses and he will cut that by six per cent. Also the proposed Mackenzie Valley pipeline should not be built in the near future.

Sept. 13: An NDP government will provide guaranteed prices for all agricultural commodities, halt Prairie rail line abandonment, nationalize the Canadian Pacific Railway and give low-cost credit to encourage farming, Mr. Lewis says.

Oct. 14: Mr. Lewis outlines measures to help employment and stop inflation: Controls on food prices and land speculation, massive house-building program, construction of urban public transport systems and waste treatment plants.

Sept. 14: An NDP government will raise old-age pensions to $150 a month, he says.

Sept. 18: He opposes capital punishment.

Sept. 21: He promises to point the finger at Ottawa NDP candidate Irving Greenberg, a former executive with a firm president, if he learns Mr. Greenberg is a corporate welfare bum.

Sept. 25: He will require all future exploration for resource development to be done by Canadian companies.

Sept. 26: He supports the idea of a Crown corporation to produce and sell prescription drugs.

Oct. 4: An NDP government will bring in stronger laws to stop job discrimination against women.

Oct. 6: Raymond Lalibrel, Quebec NDP lieutenant, says a NDP federal government will negotiate the question of separatism with any elected Quebec secessionist government.

Oct. 21: Mr. Lewis proposes an ombudsman to protect the rights of senior citizens.

Social Credit

Sept. 1: Social Credit Leader Real Caouette promises a guaranteed annual income of $1,200 for each Canadian over 18.

Sept. 19: A Social Credit government will let provincial governments borrow from the Bank of Canada.

Sept. 25: Bank of Canada credit, not loans from U.S. interests, would be used to build the Mackenzie Valley pipeline.

REAL CAOUETTE

Sept. 28: Not a single job will be pledged by Social Credit promises because "unemployment is here to stay and we have to live with that fact."

Sept. 28: Mr. Caouette also says a Social Credit government will ban all strikes.

Oct. 1: It would use money now spent for arms to raise the standard of living.

Oct. 4: Mr. Caouette promises to move to Victoria if Quebec separates from Canada.

Oct. 14: Mr. Caouette promises that a Social Credit government will not enforce any law requiring individuals to be bilingual.

Combines Charge Cost Seems Large

FREDERICTON (CP) — A now in its ninth day and far from over.

At Thursday's session Saint John publisher Ralph Costello was freed from the witness chair after almost three days of continuous questioning.

Judge Robichaud said the length of the Costello testimony was a record in his experience on the bench.

Desmond Sparling, general manager of the Fredericton Gleaner, followed Mr. Kutz as a witness Thursday. He told Mr. Hoyt that he started sending a monthly financial statement to Mr. Costello, publisher of Irving papers in Saint John, after K. C. Irving, a New Brunswick industrialist, bought the Gleaner in May, 1957, control of The Gleaner in May, ...he province.

Corn Recalled

OTTAWA (CP) — The health department announced the voluntary recall of about 2,400 cans of "" cream-style corn because of a potential health hazard.

Business Prospects Promising

MONTREAL (CP) — Experts from business and government gave their views on the immediate future that the Canadian economy Thursday andappeared to agree that the prospects are promising.

But some problems were seen, the most-often mentioned being unemployment and inflation.

—A rapid growth in the labor force, creating the need for millions of new jobs.

—A modest but not rapid increase in business investment.

—Continuing demand for consumers for better products and improved service.

One dissenting voice, however, predicted that third-quarter figures available next month will indicate that Canada's recently strong economy has run into a slowdown.

Lights Out

LONDON (CP) — Christmas won't be the same this year in London. There'll be no special Yuletide lights along Regent Street, a major shopping thoroughfare. The illuminations will be absent for the first time in 18 years because of financial complications and traffic difficulties caused by streams of additional cars lured into the area by the decorations.

French Fact Rears Head

PM Raises Voice

'Now hear this, Canada.'

PORT HOPE, Ont. (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau ran into a vocal barrage of separatism in Quebec Friday and later said here that it was just what the Liberals need to encourage strong support.

The most dramatic event of the whole campaign, a scene one in contrast to that of 1968 when Trudeau was accused for at least part of the Liberal majority, occurred Friday afternoon Chicoutimi.

At a noisy shopping centre appearance in the industrial centre 120 miles north of Quebec City, Mr. Trudeau faced vocally-powerful opposition from separatists who tried to drown out his remarks with chants of "Le Quebec aux Quebecois." Translated, the shout means "Quebec for Quebecers.

Mr. Trudeau's normally soft voice was forced into a shouting defence of his federalist policies as the mostly-young separatist sympathizers competed continuously with the platform amplifier.

Exactly how many separatist demonstrators were among the audience of about 500 at the shopping centre was impossible to estimate because they were homogeneously mixed among partisan supporters and neutral passersby. But in terms of volume at least they were evenly matched.

At one point in his noiseless remarks, Mr. Trudeau said:

"See what kind of Canada you want. You won't let me speak freely."

And if it can catch some headlines, I'm afraid the only result will be that we will have a massive vote for the Liberals in Quebec instead of only a very heavy vote in Quebec because the people of Quebec know one thing about this election:

"They know that there is one party, one strong party which is able to say no to separatists, which not only doesn't need the separatist vote but doesn't want the separatist vote."

Campaign Bar Bill Staggering

HAMILTON (CP) — The Air Canada bar bill for the reporters and aides travelling with Prime Minister Trudeau during the election campaign proved to be more than $13,000.

The steward of the jet chartered for the tour gave reporters that figure late Friday as the entourage descended to Mount Hope airport near here.

It was the second-last day of the flying campaign and many of the 43 reporters aboard had travelled all 27,540 miles accumulated in the past six weeks.

For each reporter's seat on the DC-9, he or his employer is charged $1,200 by the Liberal party. The Air Canada steward said the bar bill is included in the rter contract.

Sleep Tight!

Daylight saving time ends tonight, with everyone slated to get that extra hour's sleep lost when the clocks were put ahead an hour last April.

Clocks should be moved back an hour tonight as the country returns to standard time for the winter months.

Today's Chuckle

There's a new after-shave lotion that's guaranteed to drive teen - age girls out of their minds. Smells like a telephone booth.

Tory Ads Hit

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield went home to the Maritimes today to finish his election campaign and vote for himself next Monday.

He will be ending a one-week tour that by tonight will have taken him to every province except Newfoundland. Up to, and including Friday night, he found nothing but packed halls and enthusiastic audiences.

On Friday, during a 2,000-mile trip that started in Moose Jaw, Sask, he got caught in the second embarrassing situation in less than a week involving an advertisement inserted by one of his own candidates in a local newspaper.

In both cases the ads were read by some as being anti-French or anti-Quebec.

The situation created by the newspaper ads was touched on at a rally in Thunder Bay, Ont., and news conferences there and in Quebec City.

Conservative candidate John Erickson in Port Arthur said in the ad that he "knows that we need a Canadian cabinet and prime minister that will represent all Canadians."

The ad also mentioned French power and that considerable federal money was spent in Quebec. A woman in the audience said the ad said Mr. Erickson wanted a Canadian prime minister and not a French one.

Mr. Stanfield said he did not believe what the woman said, but added that while he is critical of many aspects of Prime Minister Trudeau's record, "I am not opposing Mr. Trudeau and I would not support anybody who opposed Mr. Trudeau because he is French."

"I believe that we in Canada accept people as they are; accept their contribution as it is regardless of their race or racial origins and that one Canadian is as good as another, regardless of where they come from."

At the news conference he said he is not in favor of "developing a backlash of any sort."

In Quebec City, where he flew next, he said he opposed all forms of appeal to prejudice and all attempts to divide Canada.

Trudeaumania Hits Trenton

Jim Bowden

One of the wildest cases of Trudeaumania to hit the 1972 federal election campaign trail rocked the downtown section of Trenton Friday night, leaving many onlookers bruised and somewhat the worse for wear, police and security men with a few hard-earned gray hairs and Liberal organizers a bit dumbfounded. Here, Prime Minister Trudeau greets some of the more than 2,000 who lined Dundas Street, while Prince Edward-Hastings candidate George Cunningham tends to well-wishers on the other side of the convertible. Guards Back on Job

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Guards at nearby Millhaven penitentiary stopped booking off sick late Friday after receiving promises of tightened security and improved working conditions from the commission of federal penitentiaries. However, a spokesman for the guards, who asked not to be named, warned the work-to-rule procedures may be reinstated Sunday if the 200 guards at the maximum security prison don't ratify the agreement. Six of the guards travelled to Ottawa Friday to confront Paul Faguy, commissioner of penitentiaries; Mr. Faguy had intended to come to Millhaven to negotiate with the guards. Terms of the agreement were not announced.

Still 600 Cans to Find

TORONTO (CP) — A spokesman for Ontario Group Ltd. said Friday it has located 1,776 of 2,400 cans of cream-style corn which the health department Thursday labelled as a potential health hazard. Sam Crystal, public relations director for the company which supplies 136 IGA stores in Ontario, said in an interview: "We're very anxious to get the other 624 cans back because some of them could explode." He explained that some of the cans had not been cooked and have swelled. Of the 1,776 found, 710 had swellings and 19 had exploded in stores. Dawn cans have been found in stores in Georgetown, Mt. Abert, Keswick, Maple, Burlington, Hamilton, Stirling and Tweed, all in Ontario. The cans bear the lot number WCC1203C which is embossed on top.

Big IRA Guns Nabbed

BELFAST (AP) — Three Irish Republican Army commanders, including a top marksman, were captured by British troops in Belfast and Londonderry Friday, the army said. An army spokesman said a patrol grabbed Jim Doe Doherty, 31, operations officer for the IRA's Provisional wing in Londonderry's Creggan district. The army refused to identify the two other high-ranking Provisionals, both captured in Belfast, but security sources reported they were company commanders from two IRA battalions.

Dust off Peacekeeping Plans

OTTAWA (CP) — Long-standing contingency plans to move a Canadian peacekeeping force of up to 5,000 men to Vietnam are being dusted off in the defence department in the wake of disclosures that an end to the Vietnam war is at hand.

A department spokesman said Friday that Gen. Jacques Dextraze, chief of defence staff, has ordered that the plans be re-examined and where necessary brought up to date.

The step was taken, sources said, in the shape of a possible Canadian peace role still is far from clear and some Canadian officials have suggested it will be strictly non-military.

The only sure things Canada has to go by are:

—The fact that an international supervisory commission is provided for in the settlement worked out by North Vietnam and the United States, which still has to be put into final shape and signed.

—State Secretary William Rogers's statement to Canadian Ambassador Marcel Cadieux in Washington Thursday that it is "quite possible" Canada will be one of the countries invited to participate in the commission.

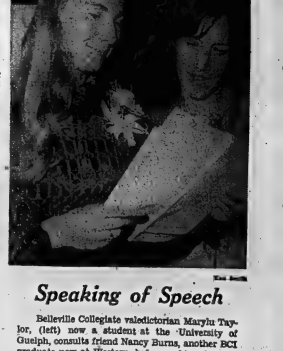
Names of the other countries have not been disclosed, although Britain, France, Poland and Japan have been mentioned.

Poland and Canada, along with India, make up the International Control Commission established under the Geneva armistice accords of 1954.

Though they have military components, the commission has essentially non-military tasks of observation and inspection.

Particular attention, however, is being given to means of quickly getting the Canadian Airborne Regiment, on standby at Edmonton for any international peacekeeping role, to Vietnam.

Pension Staying Put?



VANCOUVER (CP) — Urban Affairs Minister Ron Basford said Friday that old age pensioners can expect no specific raise in their allotments from the Liberals, and he criticized the pension promises of other parties.

Social Credit has pledged $200 a month, the New Democrats $150 and the Conservatives about $85.

Western Windup

Lewis Sings Same Campaign Tune

'Let us hide nothing as we go forward...'

REGINA (CP) — Winding up his last western foray before Monday's federal election, New Democrat Leader David Lewis socked the party message to more than 1,000 Regina supporters in person Friday and to thousands more on a province-wide radio hookup. The themes were the ones he has stressed since the campaign started two weeks ago: that corporations get an easy tax ride under the Liberal government, that unemployment could be virtually eliminated if the government would act, and that steps could be taken to cut down recent rises in living costs. But the party faithful were obviously happy to get the message straight from their leader, giving him prolonged bursts of applause. They laughed heartily as he referred to Prime Minister Trudeau as "poor puzzled Pierre," who was in an apparent quandary about unemployment. He got more laughter talking about the "alphabet soup kitchen" the Liberals had created in their attempts to end regional economic disparity. Mr. Lewis said "stupidity and insanity" are the only words to describe a tax system that helps foreign-owned corporations take an ever larger bite of the Canadian resource and manufacturing sector. As a result of the NDP election campaign "never again will any government of this country be able to get away with further corporate tax rip-offs." When unemployment in September reached 7.1 per cent of the labor force, Mr. Lewis said, the prime minister said he was puzzled. But there certainly didn't need to be any mystery in finding work for Canadians.

French Air Crash Kills 60 in Dense Fog

CLERMONT-FERRAND, France (Reuter) — A French domestic airliner carrying 68 persons apparently lost its way in heavy fog and rain and smashed into a mountain east of here, killing all but eight of those aboard.

More than 2,000 rescue workers, hampered by the bad weather, searched for six hours before they stumbled across the wreckage of the Air Inter Vickers Viscount and a number of survivors early today.

It was still uncertain how many survivors were found in the wrecked aircraft, which went down Friday night shortly before it was due to land at Clermont-Ferrand.

An Air Inter spokesman said between 15 and 20 persons had been found alive but other sources put the figure as low as nine. Earlier officials said their search of the crash area was likely to go on well into the morning.

The first two survivors pulled from the wrecked aircraft were taken to hospital in the small town of Thiers, 15 miles by road from the point nearest the crash scene that ambulances could reach. Injured were carried in stretchers to the road through two or three miles of dense woods.

The airliner crashed 90 minutes after it was due to have landed after a one-hour flight from Lyons.

Five minutes before it was due at Clermont-Ferrand, radio contact with the airport control tower was lost. Airport sources said the plane turned around and flew off in the direction in which it had come.

It was sighted several times by local residents during the next 90 minutes, flying at low altitude in conditions of nearly zero visibility—fog, rain and occasional snow flurries. The reported sightings, as well as reports of a sudden explosion, eventually led search teams to a forested slope of the 3,500-foot Pic DU Picon.

Judge to Rule in January On Sandbanks Charges

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — Provincial court Judge J. L. Clendenning has reserved ruling on motions to quash charges laid against the Lake Ontario Cement Company Ltd. and Triad Truckways under the Environmental Protection Act until January 15, 1973.

The charges, laid by Toronto barrister Agnes Repper relate to the emission of sound from the operation of development at the Sandbanks quarry site of the LOCL and also the alleged impairment of the environment. The quarry site is adjacent to Sandbanks Provincial Park and the Sandbanks Beach Resort.

Judge Clendenning announced his decision at the close of a six-hour court session yesterday during which prosecution lawyers Aubrey Golden, representing the Environmental Law Association and Morris Manning of the Ontario attorney-general's office argued that the charges should be heard because they are valid.

Morris Manning contended that provincial legislation is valid in relation to the charges. He also submitted that under the guise of peace, order and good government, the federal government has passed no legislation to conflict with the Environmental Protection Act.

The lawyer maintained there is also no conflict between the section under review in the Environmental Protection Act and the municipal zoning and nuisance codes of the Criminal Code.

Also on the hearing opened Thursday lawyers for Triad Truckways and LOCL made bids to quash the charges and submitted they were ultra vires in the province of Ontario and did not disclose an offence known to law.

Attorney Joseph Pomerant, representing Triad Truckways said the charges also were void for duplicity because two separate accusals both were charged with "causing" and "emitting" a noise.

Charles Dubin, a Toronto lawyer representing the LOCL said the informations laid under the Environmental Protection Act of Ontario did not disclose an offence known to law. He claimed also they were void for multiplicity, duplicity and uncertainty.

Mr. Manning yesterday argued that the subject of pollution as in the Environmental Act can fall, in some aspects, into provincial jurisdiction and also, for other aspects, in federal jurisdiction.

The natural environment is defined in the Act as "air, land, and water of the provinces of Ontario" and no extra-provincial reach is stated.

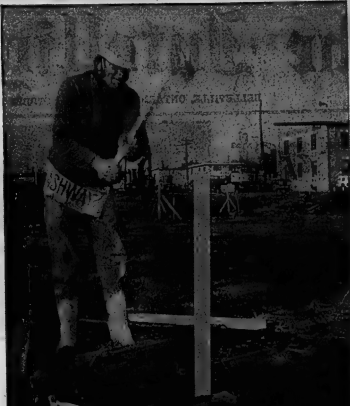
The attorney submitted there is no evidence to show there is a national state of emergency requiring federal intervention. He said noise pollution in Picton is not important to whose farmers in Saskatchewan.

In rebuttal to arguments by lawyers Aubrey Golden and Morris Manning concerning the charges, Triad Truckways attorney Joseph Pomerant replied it is legally impossible to have something called provincial air.

"The air of the province of Ontario as opposed to the air of the federal government is as much a legal mythology as you can get," he said.

He added that if each province allotted its own air it would leave the matter of what air would be left to the federal government.

Charles Dubin, lawyer for LOCL argued sound is not a contaminant and said the charge is "misconceived."



He admitted that a contamturbing to people a charge should be laid under section one C, of the act which deals with "material discomfort."

He pointed out the accused is charged with air pollution and the statute only prohibits or determines a contaminant by its effect on the environment.

He admitted that a contaminant must impair, destroy, injure or deteriorate the environment and sound does none of these to the air.

Mr. Dubin again stressed that LOCL and Triad Truckways jointly are charged under the Environmental Protection Act and said it is impossible for both to have done all that is listed in the informations. He alleged the informations therefore were void for uncertainty since the offences of each were not described.

Judge Clendenning said the hearing which began Thursday morning had taken "much longer" than he anticipated and stated he would not hear the case until early January.

IN MEMORIAM

FOX — In loving memory of our dear mother Lily May Fox who passed away October 28, 1971.
Somewhere beyond the shadows,
Somewhere beyond the sky,
There is a land of beauty,
Where I cherished so divine,
But God called me to your heaven,
Dear mother.
Though you mother, I never will,
Your years roll on I never will forget,
The love was great the shock so great.
Little thought the day and year,
Only those who have lost can tell,
How sad a parting and so sudden,
—Always remembered by son Carlie and daughter-in-law Dorothy.

BAYERSTOCK — In loving memory of our beloved husband Roy Bayerstock who passed away Oct. 28, 1964.
And we can hear you softly calling,
And we can hear you say,
To our hearts there comes a longing,
To meet you far away.
Sadly missed by his loving family.
When at times they see the sunset,
Or hear the rustling trees,
Our smiles hide all the while,
Our memories remain the same.
Inserted by Grace, Ed, Bernard and Dorothy Tinsan and family.

BAYERSTOCK, Nora — In loving memory of our dear mother who passed away one year ago today, October 28, 1971.
She trusted no one, her want were few,
And now, dear Lord, she is with you.
We do not see her as she is now,
For to a mother she was the best,
—Always remembered by daughter Edith Mary and grandchildren Patricia and Bonnie.

BAYERSTOCK, Nora — In loving memory of our dear mother who passed away one year today, October 28, 1971.
Death is cruel to take mother dear,
Leaving memories that never disappear,
We loved you too dearly to ever forget you.
—Sadly missed by daughter Alice and son-in-law Eddie.

VADEN — In loving memory of a dear husband, father, brother, Nathan Vaden who passed away Oct. 28, 1971.
We are not within our memory,
Your face we see no more,
For the one we loved so dearly,
Has gone to rest called away.
Your memory is sweet dear Nathan,
His eye can see us weep,
But memory will keep us fond,
While life shall last.
—Ever remembered by daughter Alice, Beechwood, Marilyn and grandchildren, son Sherwood, daughter-in-law Glenna and grandchildren Thomasson.

VADEN — In loving memory of a very dear son and grandson Nathan Edgar Vaden, who passed away Oct. 28, 1971.
Sweet memories are all we have left to us,
Of a boy we loved so much.
—Lovingly remembered and missed by Mother Beechwood, Grandmother Harold and grandaughters Wendy and Marilyn.

VADEN, Nathan — In loving memory of a dear husband, father and brother, Nathan E. Vaden who passed away October 28, 1971.
A light is from our household gone,
A voice we loved is stilled,
A place is vacant in our home,
Which never can be filled.
God in his wisdom has the right,
To call whom he sees fit,
But in memory you are with us,
Dear husband and father.
—Sadly missed by Mother Wynne, Valerie, Nathan Jr., Heather, Maisie, Linda, Lori, Dawn and Murray.

Bayside Unique in Province

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Bayside Secondary School was officially opened and unveiled to the public last night with a promise from its principal that "this school will be based on the sure and firm rock of scholarship, decency and honor."

Ontario's secretary of social development, Robert Welch, declared the school officially open and remarked that "a wonderful spirit exists — one can sense it as soon as he comes in the front door."

More than 1,000 people flocked in for the one - hour opening ceremonies and tours of the $4½-million building, repeatedly referred to as "unique in Ontario."

Hastings county board of education chairman Donald Williams announced that the open concept school had won an Canadian Education Showcase award this year.

Sharing the platform, and button - popping pride, with trustees were principal Liston D. Read, resplendent in his Bayside red blazer, and architect Irving Bolgen of Toronto. Mr. Bolgen handed the key to the school to building committee chairman Ralph Weaver, who turned it over to director of education Eric Runacres. Mr. Runacres completed the circuit by handing the key to the principal, with a tribute to Mr. Read's intellectual and leadership qualities.

Mr. Read, noting that 1972 is the silver anniversary of his entry into the teaching profession, remarked that a there was no finer way of celebrating the event than by opening a new school.

Bayside is one of a mere handful of secondary schools that make use of the open concept approach, Mr. Welch said in his address, carried over closed - circuit television to those who could not squeeze into the cafeteria-auditorium for the ceremonies.

"The school is unique in many ways, he said.

"It doesn't divide students by age: grade 7 and 8 pupils and adults are using the school. Community involvement will be encouraged in recognition that education is a continuous process. Adult day courses are being considered. One aspect I find particularly exciting is the use of the property for study of biology, geology and field life."

Mr. Welch commended the school board for its "thoughtful and far sighted planning in the decision to keep a large part of the site in a natural state.

"The design and scope of education inside and outside the walls indicate Hastings county recognizes the changing needs of students," he said.

The former minister of education said the motto for the 1970s is "the community as a school and the school as a community".

"The school is regarded as a forum for all members of the community to learn together," he said. "The problem of the community will become the problems of the school more than at any other time in history."

The senior Protestant chaplain at CFB Trenton, Major S. G. Horne, dedicated the school and board vice-chairman MacDonald Smith presented Mr. Read with a school Bible.

Ontario's secretary of social development, Robert Welch (centre) officially opened Bayside Secondary School Friday night. With the cabinet minister is Jack-ie Bench, one of Bayside's Gold Caps, a corps of uniformed student guides who conducted tours of the building, and Bayside principal, Liston D. Read.

News Is Bad for Teachers

While their students took the day off, teachers from three Quinte district councils wrestled with the most ticklish issues of their profession — their legal, moral and social status in a changing world.

Three visiting experts gave the more than 1,200 teachers gathered at Centennial Secondary School little comfort on their annual professional development day, organized this year by the Hastings, Lennox and Addington and Prince Edward counties branches of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation.

The teachers were told that:

A recently released research report on procedures for board - teacher salary negotiations inhibit change, development and growth in the profession and crystalize the status quo;

Although the future of civilization, even of the human race, depends on increasing moral sensitivity, teachers, faced with many conflicting moral standards in society, hardly know where they stand;

The public will never let teachers govern their own licensing and conditions of work, thus preventing them from attaining the full professional status enjoyed by priests, lawyers and doctors.

First to bring bad news was Paul Lamek, Toronto lawyer and legal consultant to OSSTF.

"The teachers of Ontario have failed to mount an effective campaign to acquaint the public with what they want, he said.

He noted that strife and discord has arisen between some boards and their teachers over including conditions of quality teaching in contracts.

The research report "has fortified the uninformed view that salaries are your only concern," he told the teachers.

Dr. Kenneth Davis, associate professor of intellectual history at the University of Waterloo, attempted to give teachers some moral guidelines to follow in a society that has seen the breakdown of the traditional Judeo-Christian attitude toward the rightness and wrongness of thoughts and actions.

"Schools are no longer considered by the public as Protestant, civic Sunday Schools," he said. "To whom is the teacher responsible now — parents, pupils, his profession or the government? I see the profession as a trust from a community of specific homes and families. To the degree we are responsive to this trust, our moral status will grow."

Parents expect education to fit their children for life in the future, but the future parents see is close to present reality.

"Education for tgo far ahead can lead to unnecessary generation conflict," said Dr. Davis.

A University of Guelph sociology professor, Dr. Richard Carlton, said that everyone thinks he could be a teacher.

"Everybody has been to school," he remarked.

Teachers will never be able to completely govern their entry into, and conditions of work with in their profession.

"Our clients can gang up on us," he said. "Students and parents can control how you do your job."

Safety Foremost On Hallowe'en

Hallowe'en, stemming from a long-ago pagan ritual, is intended to be a happy time for children when they can reap the harvest of sticky candies, candied apples and the occasional trick from neighborhood homes.

Belleville and the Quinte area in general have had a pretty good record over the past few years concerning the safety of treat-hungry children.

To maintain this record, both the city police department and fire department ask parents to be very sure that every possible precaution is taken to ensure that children return home safely Tuesday night.

The police department, as in the past, will be utilizing all available personnel during the evening and strongly urge that motorists practise "extreme caution," especially in the early portion of the evening after supper.

"With the weather almost daily and leaves covering the roads, driving will be very treacherous," said Deputy Police Chief Harold Reid.

"Small children, while out trick-or-treating, have only the goodies in mind and not the traffic," he said.

The police department issued another warning today, "we will crack down and we mean . . . and those offenders could be charged with wilful damage under the criminal code," said Deputy Reid.

The extra patrol on the streets is not to "deprive anybody of good, clean fun, but to check vandalism," he said.

Deputy Reid did comment that vandalism had not been serious in the past.

The police department asks that parents sit down with youngsters before they leave the house, and run over traffic safety with them.

Children should not wait until too late in the evening and where possible an older child should be around.

The fire department warns parents that costumes should not be so long they could cause a child to trip and that the material be light-colored enough that motorists could see the child in the dark.

Impossible Dream

Rising cost of living is one thing but the rising problem of "relief" for the pup is just too much. The pup, up for adopton through the Ontario Humane Society, found the tall problem near construction of the Sidney Street Bridge. Carrying a Hallowe'en pumpkin and taking care of the playful pup is 10-year-old David McKinney.

New School Has Instant History

Ontario's "most modern secondary school" opened officially at Bayside last night with 141 years of tradition behind it.

Bayside Secondary's "instant history" lies in its site, the 197 acres owned by the Hastings county board of education that stretches from the bay front north to beyond the CPR tracks.

Hastings county historian Gerald Boyce wrote the story of the school in the program handed out at the official opening.

In 1789, five years after the arrival of the United Empire Loyalists who colonized the Bay of Quinte, Kingston citizens asked for the government for state aid for education. He set aside lands in the new townships for the endowment of schools, among them lot 19 concession 1 Sidney township, then comprising 200 acres.

Squatters settled on the land, but in 1861 district residents were ready to build a school and petitioned the government for title to the school lot. Legend says that three Sidney pioneers, Daniel Ostrom, Elijah Kellogg and Jacob Finkle, walked to Toronto to make their plea.

However they obtained it, the three men, as trustees of the school section, were given the crown patent to lot 19 on July 14, 1871.

"The possession of this land gave the school section a decided advantage over every other section in the county," said Mr. Boyce. "Sections of this land were rented and the timber also was a source of revenue that greatly reduced the amount of money that had to be raised either by fees or by assessment on the local ratepayers."

As late as 1969, when the Ontario Scholarships were awarded to Susan Bertin, Cassandra Dymock, Dorothy LeBaron, Peter Mischenko, Brian Montgomery, Alison Murphy, David Murray, Stephen Ross and Lynne Woodley.

Peter Mischenko took a $1,700 - a - year University of Toronto Memorial Scholarship.

The Elton Burgess Memorial Award of $50. The Intelligencer Scholarship ($100) and the Carter Scholarship of $100.

The Northern Electric Bursary of $50 went to Eric Frankley, the $100 Kinsmen Bursary to Tren Taylor.

Anna Bozma received the $50 Business and Professional Women's Club Prize.

A Choice Choice

With Hallowe'en three days away, 18-month-old Robert Carter makes his choice of pumpkins from a generous selection at the Belleville farmer's market. The tot is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Carter, RR 2, Stirling.

Goals Key to Happiness

A 19-year-old University of Guelph arts student, Marylin Taylor, last night advised the Belleville Collegiate graduating class to seek new goals as keys to happiness.

She said one must have some student goals in store for.

The former BCI cheerleader, gymnast, musician and Kampus Kapers worker said that satisfaction with goals will make you happy.

"And when we are happy, we can accomplish great things," she added.

Former principal of the school J. D. McKay, now principal at Centennial Secondary School told students "you can take the student out of BCI but you can't take the BCI out of the student." In his remarks he also spoken.

Election Day

Monday is election day and Canadians have the opportunity once again of casting their vote.

In doing so we bear in mind that there are many countries where no such privilege — and it is just that — is available to citizens. They may cast a ballot all right, but it is not for the candidate of their choice. Rather it is for the man whom the "system" has chosen. The whole exercise is simply a charade.

In at least one country which observes our own democratic practices — our fellow Commonwealth nation of Australia — the exercise of the ballot is held to be important enough that it is compulsory and while we are not convinced this is a desirable edict it does serve to emphasize the power and influence of the democratic system fully exercised.

The election being held on Monday is as important as any in the nation's history — and perhaps more so — for the administration that is returned has pressing problems to face which will need the resolve that comes with a firm mandate. There can be no such mandate if a large proportion of voters neglect to do their duty and stay away.

The country needs a full turnout of voters. If we can achieve this, or come close to it, we shall be serving the nation and our democratic system well.

No New Thing...

Isn't it Socrates or some such philosopher of old who is frequently quoted on the subject of youth and the older generation? The gist of it being that there has always been a generation gap and that youth has always been in revolt in one way or another, or in conflict with parental authority.

Indeed there is no new thing under the sun. Take the flight from the farm in these days of urban affluence. The lure of the bright lights has always been a factor. Perhaps more than ever nowadays; and it inspired some interesting discussion at a recent candidates' meeting in Bloomfield, with Richard Lunn, NDP candidate in Prince Edward-Hastings, telling farmers that youth has been leaving the farm since time began. The boy of 5,000 years ago, he said, was eager to get from behind his oxen and go to Babylon.

In other ways times have changed somewhat. It is generally agreed that life is more permissive. The mobility and open nature of society gutranteed by the Bill of Rights insist on considerations that bring to the forefront so much comment and facts of latter-day behavior.

At one time it was thought that the so-called "generation gap" would turn full circle and we would witness a return to relative puritanism. But there seems no sign of this as yet and we see contemporary mores reflected — as Allan Fotheringham noted recently — in the movies of the day, in films such as Summer of 42 and The Last Picture Show. We see it in the increasing clamor over such out-of-the-laboratory-and-test-tube scientific experimentation with methods of birth control. This is reflected for instance in the report that 15 students of the University of Toronto were given a "morning-after" pill — treatment last year and none became pregnant.

The pleasures of the flesh have become more respectable, if not fully accepted in the thinking of all. But synonymous with this there is still a great deal of ignorance, among the young especially, so that they are not fully aware of what they are doing or of the serious consequences of licence. It is all part of a new world order and as in every age and civilization gone by, there are advantages and drawbacks.

End at Last?

After an agonizing decade of foreign involvement in Vietnam, the United States at last seems close to a negotiated settlement of the conflict there. It has been a long time and from it the Americans have learned a bitter lesson. What began as an advisory role, at the invitation of the then government of Vietnam, developed into full scale war. Hopefully the Communists also will have learned a lesson, that they just cannot walk in and take what is not theirs. There is talk of Canada being asked to send a peacekeeping force after the truce. It is a role with which we are familiar and which we do well. Let us hope that the end result really will be peace, and not just the precursor of a subsequent Communist takeover.

'Beware of Socialism' Says Columnist

A Personal Opinion on Which Way to Vote Monday

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — This one column is to be quite personalized, first such written in years, and so might never reach print.

It is to be controversial and opinionated too, and so the editor may just drop it into his well-stuffed waste-basket.

Fair ball, if he does, for in putting out the paper, the buck is passed to him and he can not pass it on. It stops at his desk.

What I want to say is this: vote; vote Liberal, or Conservative, or even Social Credit, but do not vote for the New Democrats.

Of all the candidates of the NDP were of the worth and in expanding crestie new national wealth and jobs. And remember, all governments do it.

It seemed odd that he should select the phrase corporate welfare bums, which in its usage seems to assume that people on welfare — the free-loaders in a d that welfare itself is something to be condemned.

David Lewis has been attacking finance and investment companies while insisting that what he is assailing is really the "system" of grants and tax incentives.

But an attack it is, hammering the value of the holdings of many thousands of Canadians in shares in business and industry, and undermining confidence in the honesty and integrity of both public and private enterprise together.

He makes it sound as if governments and industry were in some sort of shabby conspiracy to ride the backs of the taxpayers, when, in fact, all governments and industry in the free world have been trying to work together for the collective public good.

In his attack on industry, David Lewis singled out the International Nickel, and at one point said that if it came to that he could run it.

Now unless David Lewis is altogether different than any other politician who has come down the campaign trail in the last 50 years, he could not run a peanut stand.

Not as a profit, anyway.

He would have to subsidize it to keep it in business, and in subsidizing it, pack it onto the backs of the taxpayers.

No government, federal or provincial, or for that matter, foreign, has ever made much of a business success when leaving private into public enterprise.

The federal government's big gest crown corporations, the CNR, Air Canada and the CBC all run in the red or just on the brink.

And New Democratic governments have had the worst record of all. Former New Democratic Premier Tommy Douglas, who headed the first provincial NDP administration took a flyer at a dozen different industries and made them all losers.

When a government takes over an enterprise it makes it over in the image of the civil service: overstaffed, fat with patronage; with neither profit to make nor payroll to meet, not with the ever-available taxpayer there to pick up the deficits.

Now the newest NDP premier, David Barrett of British Columbia, is cutting off grants and subsidies to industries and has a new tax plan in the drafting. If the combination of the two discourage industry to the point of leaving the copper, nickel, or other resources in the ground, too bad, says Mr. Barrett.

Too bad for British Columbia. And too bad for Dave Barrett if non-development of resources results in heavy unemployment.

So vote. Vote Liberal, Conservative or Social Credit, but not NDP; their theory that the state can always do it better is too dicey.

Asian Newcomers Need Our Help and Compassion

THE WORLD TODAY
By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst

This is going to be more than the "winter of discontent" for the world's minority populations of East Indians. For many, especially those forced out of Uganda, it is going to be a winter—and perhaps several seasons beyond that—of privation and very hard times.

How the several thousand who are coming to Canada at the beginning of an unusually cold fall will make out, also remains to be seen.

We have heard a good deal in the last few years about depressed and attacked minorities. Now it is our turn to hear of the plight of the Ugandan East Asians and to show sympathy and understanding.

Let's face it and admit the so-called "East Indians," grab-bag expression for peoples from the Indian subcontinent of several races and even faiths, have us cold. Their lifestyle, personal habits, standoffishness, intense cultural differences all do easily suggest abandonment by us.

This is part of the reason they have found in trouble in many other countries of the world where they have settled, as well as in Canada. In Africa, South East Asia and the Caribbean, "East Indian" communities have largely been ones of prosperity and wealth. The once-small shopkeepers and literate clerks which the British settled in their African and Caribbean colonies to upgrade the economy and run governments, have become millionaires in many places.

They have shunned the grubby world of politics, left to the original black or Asian populations and held influence behind the scenes through economic power.

In Uganda, their industries and personal holdings largely dominated that country's already very shaky economy. When they goes, Uganda slides down the slippery scale of gross national product increase to a new low spot near Haiti.

In Guyana, they mix business with political interest. The opposition party leader to Premier Forbes Burnham is Cheddi Jagan, a Caribbean Marxist and an East Indian. He gets his support, curiously enough from that country's small and aggressive East Indian businessmen.

Guyana—with the exception of neighbouring Trinidad —is the one nation of the many where East Indians live and work, where they also have an influential stake in the political system.

In Kenya, where they took over many businesses once owned by the departing British and Kenyans with British passports, they are now in jeopardy of facing the same plight as in Uganda.

Possibly too in Tanzania where a heavy program of state control of virtually all private enterprise means blacks who dominate the Tanzanian bureaucracy and not East Indians, could become state-imposed managers of their businesses and shops.

And as it goes. Almost a chain reaction of disaster, personal tragedy, family traumas. And now Britain which morally must accept so many of them who are British subjects by a British decree of 1962, is the scene of an intense racism, unparalleled in that country. By the end of this year Britain will have admitted Asian, African and Caribbean population of about three millions.

Again the reasons for bitter resentment are the very wide gulf in lifestyles, the apparently permanent impossibility of British working class, who can be unbelievably reactionary and East Indians, to work together or live together.

Our country is neither so content, nor one hopes so beset with historic racial superiority as Britain. Yet we will have to make our own intense effort to be tolerant.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

The induction of the Rev. Andrew E. MacKenzie, BA, into the Principalship of Albert College took place in the Memorial Chapel, with Rev. G. A. Puttenham, BD, chairman of the Belleville Presbytery, presiding.

Rev. William H. Carty, pastor of Toledo since 1945 has been appointed pastor of St. Peter's Church, Trenton.

The Rednersville branch of Prince Edward Red Cross has just completed the manufacture of 3,072 pounds of jam during the present year. This exceeds those made 18 hours before with modern gadgetry! Abe claims 90 per cent accuracy, but we suspect he has given us the old read somewhere about last year's Almanac:

"The coming issue of the Old Farmer's Almanac predicted two-tenths of an inch of rain for northern New England on Thanksgiving Day 1971. Then weren't the folks in Dublin, NH, where the Almanac is published, a little surprised by that two feet of snow? "Well," one native allowed laconically as he dug out his driveway, "it was an understatement."

For the first time in golf history in this city, two members of the same family had to play off for club championship when Helen Hurley and Mary Hurley reached the finals in the Belleville Golf Club annual competition. Mary Hurley won the championship by defeating her sister four and three to go. This is the first time that either player had tried for the finals.

The Farmer's Almanac Again

Ottawa Journal

One of life's delights is that some good things never change. Such is the Old Farmer's Almanac, that folksy annual of planting tables, zodiac secrets, recipes, advice, folklore and weather forecasts of disputable accuracy.

This year is the Almanac's 181st anniversary and it's a little faster than usual. "All in all," say its New England publishers, "this year's edition has been great fun to produce because we have given ourselves enough space to do the job right."

They have also stuck their necks out farther than ever with 16 regional weather forecasts instead of the usual 10. For this region (Abe Weatherwise, the Almanac's mythical forecaster includes us in his prognosis for New England) says:

"This winter will not be harsh but snowfalls will be unusually high. Spring will be nice, followed by a hot rainy summer. In the fall, the rainfall will drop off markedly as drought conditions start in the North-east, but a hurricane may be expected around Sept. 9."

How reliable can forecasts be when they're based on old Weather Bureau observations, sunspot studies, Abe's secrets and made 18 months in advance? Probably almost as accurate as those made 18 hours before with modern gadgetry! Abe claims 80 per cent accuracy, but we suspect he has given us the old read somewhere about last year's Almanac:

"The coming issue of the Old Farmer's Almanac predicted two-tenths of an inch of rain for northern New England on Thanksgiving Day 1971. Then weren't the folks in Dublin, NH, where the Almanac is published, a little surprised by that two feet of snow? "Well," one native allowed laconically as he dug out his driveway, "it was an understatement."

Dial-A-Bus Services Spread

Brantford Expositor

Nothing sounds better to city dwellers than dial-a-bus service but two things have to be remembered. Dial-a-bus is not a taxi-style door-to-destination service and it is not necessarily economical. But if dial-a-bus experiments under way in Kingston, Brantford and Belleville pan out, they may encourage Brantford Public Utilities Commission to try dial-a-bus.

Such a service might solve gray-area problems. One gray area is providing service—without losing wads of money — to new housing surveys which lack enough residents to make regular bus service feasible. Another gray area is night service which tends to be infrequent and discouraging. Kingston is tackling both problems in one by ferrying evening customers from their homes in two specially parts of the city to a key shopping centre where they connect with regular bus routes. Strathroy-Caradoc has replaced its regular night service with DART (Dial-a-Ride Transit), in its first month. DART business has risen to 400 a day, a new high. Brantford and Kingston Transit Commission services

Dial-a-bus service has boosted business in Regina where, for a year, it has served 18,000 residents in a 2½ square-mile area in peak periods and 22,000 in five square miles in off-peak periods. Montreal, Sarnia, Oshawa and Nepean Township at Ottawa all are considering dial-a-bus systems. Brantford, with any luck, will derive from such a system that could work here.

Statement Of Mayor Challenged

Editor,
The Intelligencer,

After 183 days Mayor J. R. Scott has condescended to break his silence regarding the conflict of interest charges laid against him by Alderman Donald Soulter.

When the charges were initially laid those of us who had worked for and supported His Worship in his campaign for the mayoralty of the city of Belleville expected to see him rise up and defend the office the people had placed in his hands. Instead he hid behind section 36 of the Municipal Act.

We must not forget either, the members of council, who for reasons best known to themselves, voted along with the Mayor to deny a judicial enquiry—the only way the facts could have been produced in an impartial manner. So, once again the citizens of Belleville were not considered adult enough to be given the full facts from both sides.

The Mayor's comment that "This civic politics for the self gain of two individuals is of concern to the whole community" needs some explanation and amplification. Two councillors put their political careers on the line, willing to stand or fall by whatever evidence was produced by an enquiry. It seems to me that they did not stand to gain, but had a great deal to lose if proved wrong. Their reasons for their actions must be sure they would never have the chance.

The motion by Aldermen Soulter and Jeffrey did not impugn the Mayor but implied anything dishonest. It merely asked for an inquiry into his involvement with Sanctuary Developments in order to lay to rest, if the Mayor through the years from December 1965 to April 17, 1972.

It now appears that Mayor Scott, with the fate of the impending municipal election, thought it expedient to wait 183 days before making any sort of explanation to those he hopes will be out voted by the Ins 2 beside his name on polling day. In 183 days folks are inclined to forget awful lot — especially when it centres around the muddy waters of the beginnings of city council.

Now, His Worship, after keeping citizens in the dark since April 24 not only asks us to swallow his explanation, he demands the resignation of both Alderman Soulter and Alderman Jeffrey.

As an interested and impartial observer I just cannot accept such a philosophy. Where the actions of elected officials were laid against Messrs. Bales and McDougall both should be protected and the public conscience was quieted.

Perhaps the Mayor, in one fell blow, hopes to destroy the political aspirations of Alderman Soulter and remove the threat of Alderman Robin Jeffrey as he campaigns for Mayor of the city of Belleville.

Whatever the reasons, I for one am not satisfied with the final-delayed, dampening explanation offered. Also I am not many others I would like to know WHY?

New Zealand Churches Approve Plan to Unite

AUCKLAND (CP) — After seven years of discussion and preparation, members of five Protestant churches in New Zealand have voted for union. But the majorities in some denominations were not large, so that the future of the proposals still remains in doubt.

Since 1960, the Anglicans, Presbyterians, Methodists, Churches of Christ and Congregationalists have been discussing a plan for church union.

The original plan has been amended several times until a final proposal to put before individual denominations was agreed upon last year.

It amounts to a compromise containing elements of all five denominations, while allowing considerable individual freedom of opinion. The plan provides for deacons, presbyters and bishops although with modified duties as compared with those of ministers in any of the five churches), and for division into parishes, dioceses, and a national assembly, the supreme council of the united church.

Much argument for and against the union plan has proceeded in each church since the final plan was approved, and the proposals have been discussed at length by the individual congregations.

In the wake of the vote, each church governing body now is faced with the problem of deciding what further action to take.

Observers predict that the Methodists will certainly opt for union, and the Presbyterians probably. Much doubt hinges on the fate of the two smallest churches, Churches of Christ and Congregational, but their abstention would not necessarily wreck the plan.

The crucial decision probably lies with the Anglicans, the largest of the five churches involved. And Anglican sentiments are widely divided on whether the majority in its vote of 58 per cent to 42 per cent is large enough to justify carrying through the plan for union.

Those opposed to union declare that the dissenters are too numerous to ignore. Those favoring union maintain that a large proportion of those voting against would never-theless go along with a decision for unity if it was taken.

Methodists, Churches of Christ and Congregationalists are due to take final decisions this year, with verdict either at annual conferences or in individual congregations.

The Presbyterian general assembly is due to take a decision shortly, but if the decision is for unity a second vote to determine the number absentmantly opposed will be made in 1974.

Anglicans will make decisions by diocesan synods this year or next, followed by a final vote by the general synod in 1974.

So the shape of a new united church, if any, is not likely to become clear until 1975 when the new organization would come into being.

It seems as though the Presbyterians and Methodists will decide to go ahead with some project for union whatever the other churches decide—either by adopting the present plan in the hope that other churches will join later, or by amending it to create an organization more in keeping with their thinking arrangements.

Whatever the national bodies decide, a movement for unity of individual congregations will continue. Presbyterians and Methodists are already involved in more than 60 union parishes and more are under consideration.

Several churches of the smaller denominations are also actively engaged in union negotiations.

The Rt. Rev. W. J. Robinson Anglican Bishop of Ottawa, will be present at all worship services this Sunday, October 29th at St. Thomas' Parish observes its 154th Anniversary. Bishop Robinson will celebrate holy communion at the 8.00 a.m.-service and will be the guest preacher at the 10.30 a.m. and 7.00 p.m. services.

Bishop Robinson is a product of the Diocese of Ontario. He ministered to a number of parishes in this Diocese and was rector of St. Thomas' Belleville from 1953 to 1955. He also served in the Ottawa and Niagara Dioceses prior to his election as Bishop of Ottawa in April, 1970. A coffee hour will be held in St. Thomas' Parish Hall at the conclusion of the 10.30 morning service when members of the congregation will have the opportunity of greeting the Bishop.

In addition to Bishop Robinson, a folk singing group, "The Joy of St. John" from Prescott, Ont., will be making a return visit to St. Thomas' and provide the music for the 7.00 p.m. service. "Lord of the Dance", "Let My People Go", "We Shall Overcome" and "On Our Way Rejoicing" are among the modern songs that will be sung at this informal hour of worship. Bishop Robinson will have a message particularly for young people at the evening service.

St. Thomas Will Hear Bishop

Unbelief Difficult

By REV. G. C. SMYTH

People are often very much impressed by the difficulties of religious belief. They find it hard to reach any absolute, convincing faith. Indeed, there are doubts and obscurities that every one feels.

And yet did you ever squarely face the thought of a logically consistent unbelief, with no origin, no spiritual hopes or of by worship, a universe absolutely without God, a permanently faithless world?

What is the difficulty here? Undoubtedly it is that these aspects of life, though they are often hard to hold, are harder still to shake. Faith has its perplexities. However, no sooner do you stimulate the spiritual than you are confronted with a series of experiences, emotions and intimations which are simply inexplicable.

Let me put the situation in the words of Dr. Ignace Lepp. "Long before I became a Christian, I believed in the world. But I was also vaguely aware that there was something deficient in a world of constant becoming. For a long time, I believed that evolution reached omega in social revolution. Gradually, I came to see that revolution could not justify the marvelous and ever-increasing spiritual dimension of the universe. Only after I understood the Christian message did everything become clear."

Ignace Lepp, who died in 1966 became a practising psychotherapist in Paris and also a writer. His classic "The Faith of Men" (MacMillan) to you. Many a reader will see himself in the pages of a book whose author quickly and candidly states that, until he was 27, he knew little about Christianity and could not care-lessly accept it.

"The Faith of Men" has optimism, intellectual depth and psychological insight. Beginning with belief in God, Lepp discusses evolutionary creation and the lure of the Eastern religions. He takes up the mystery of the Trinity, the Eucharist, and the Church, before leading them to our lives on earth. He has many interesting and significant things to say about miracles, eternal life and the Church.

Yes, many a reader will see himself in this book and emerge with the optimism which characterizes it. He will find that if his difficulties of faith were great, his difficulties of unbelief are greater.

What is, on the whole, the best working theory of life? Life holds the highest facts, the greatest irresistible experiences that sometimes rise within the soul, of hope and love and desire? These questions turn the critical, skeptical temper back upon itself.

All Appeals Are Heard

By TOM DOUGLAS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Despite competition from federal politicians who have an appeal campaign of their own going, United Appeal drives in major centres across the country are doing well.

A Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press shows that most cities are past the halfway mark in their collections and most campaign directors are optimistic targets will be reached.

Hugh Creighton, executive director of the Victoria appeal, was typical of many officials when he said his target of $775,600 will be reached.

"From the point of view of the economy, things look pretty promising," he said. "It was a good year tourist-wise and I think business is up over the last couple of years."

He said the federal election campaign has cut into things a bit, occupying the attention of the media and possibly attracting campaign volunteers who would otherwise have aided Appeal canvassers.

A spokesman for the United Appeal of Metropolitan Toronto gave the federal election as one reason for extending its canvass for slightly more than $14 million to Nov. 15.

"It began on Sept. 25 and was originally scheduled to wind up Nov. 3, but various other appeals for public attention and money have slowed things down a little," he said. "Aside from the federal election, there was a telethon here a little while ago that drained off more than a million bucks for crippled children."

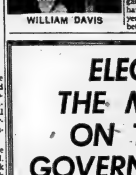
Despite the slower returns, the Toronto group is expecting to hit its target, even though it represents a 14 per cent increase from the 1971 figure which fell $500,000 short of the mark.

"It's the largest increase we've had in our 20-year history," he said. "Normally we would set our goal below what the 78 organizations needed to be more realistic in what we were capable of collecting.

"This year, however, we said he hell with it and decided to go all the way."

New Cabinet Members Comply with Davis Rule

TORONTO (CP) — The business interests of Ontario's four new cabinet ministers were made public by Premier William Davis Friday.



The four, appointed earlier this month, are the last to have their business affairs outlined under the premier's guidelines on avoiding conflict of interest.

John Clement, whose portfolio of consumer and commercial relations includes liquor legislation, is shown as having 25-per-cent interest in a Niagara Falls restaurant and liquor lounge. In addition to his interest in the Texas Beef and Steakhouse Ltd., Mr. Clement holds one property mortgage. Interest in another private corporation and an inactive interest in a law firm.

Claude Bennett, minister without portfolio, is listed as having an insurance business, an interest in an area in London, Ont., and in another private company.

Jack McNie, minister of colleges and universities, is listed as having controlling interest in a public relations and advertising firm and his wife as having controlling interest in a property firm.

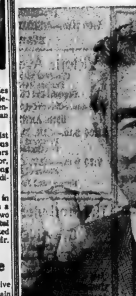
Mix-up Voting Not so Bad

TORONTO (CP) — Revenue Minister Allan Grossman said Friday reports of errors in Toronto's preliminary lists of voters for the Dec. 4 municipal election are "grossly exaggerated and unnecessarily alarmist."

Mr. Grossman made the statement after meeting Ald. David Rotenberg, city clerk Gordon Batchelor, deputy clerk Roy Henderson and Arthur Mesne, parliamentary assistant to the provincial treasurer.

ALLAN GROSSMAN

The minister said all parties at the meeting agreed that adequate machinery exists to ensure that all eligible voters can vote in the Dec. 4 election.



Mr. Grossman said voting list errors involved either persons not enumerated or electors who, because of clerical error, were listed under the wrong ward number or polling subdivision.

"The number of errors in these groups totalled between a few hundred and possibly two thousand electors out of a total of 430,000 electors enumerated in the city of Toronto," Mr. Grossman said.

Real Headache

OTTAWA (CP) — Extensive use of over-the-counter pain killers, such as headache tablets, can cause serious kidney damage and other medical disorders, the Canadian Medical Association Journal says. An editorial in the most recent issue, signed by Dr. R. H. Wilson, head of Toronto General Hospital's kidney unit, said it is imperative that both the medical profession and the public be made aware of the dangers of chronic use of such medicines.

JASPER THE BEAR

"Since tourists started giving him money instead of food, he's been investing in Canada Savings Bonds."

He said Toronto corporations are largely responsible for pulling the campaign 14 per cent ahead of last year's collections at the same point in the campaign.

Campaign directors across Ontario report returns that generally reflect a more healthier percentages than those in other parts of Canada.

In Hamilton, the target is $2,220,000 and to date, 70 per cent of this has come in, or $1,540,000. That appeal is being undertaken as a combined effort by Hamilton, Burlington, Stoney Creek, Ancaster, Dundas, Waterdown and surrounding townships.

A larger of $1,560,000 has been set by Windsor, to be parcelled out to 36 participating agencies. To date, $650,000, or 43 per cent, has been collected. Last year, contributors put the campaign 10 per cent over the top with donations that totalled $1,498,000.

London's objective is $1,422,000 and they are 71 per cent of the way towards collecting it, having taken in $1,013,000. No closing date has been set and organizers will continue as long as contributions came in.

St. Catharines is another municipality with the enviable record of having overachieved last year's goal. Canvassers collected $463,000 when the target was only $470,000. This year's objective is $500,000, with $373,000, 94 per cent, in the bank already.

Peterborough faces this year's campaign from the other side of the ledger, having failed to reach last year's target of $225,000, falling short by some $22,000. This year's goal is $323,000 and so far organizers have a return rate of about 60 per cent.

Kingston and district United Fund also was a trifle shy in its returns last year with 97 per cent of the targeted $275,000 being collected. This year's figure has been set at $300,000 and about 38 per cent, or $181,000, has been collected.

Cornwall's campaign is referred to as the Community Cheat and has seen a 40 per cent return, or $56,000, towards the target figure of $142,000. Theirs was a success story last year as well, with $122,000 collected on a goal of $125,000.

Welland has aimed at a figure of $163,000 which will be channelled to 16 different organizations. So far, residents have contributed $88,000. Last year's target of $148,000 was bettered by $4,000.

Metis Mount March

WINNIPEG (CP) — About 200 Indians and Metis marched through heavy snow and blustery winds to the Manitoba legislative building Friday to protest what one spokesman called "generations of oppression" against Indians.

The noisy demonstrators carried placards espousing red power and calling for an end to racial discrimination.

They tore to bits a cardboard box symbolic of a recent commission report on alleged racial discrimination and booed and jeered Premier Ed Schreyer. Some demonstrators also threw apples in the foyer of the building.

Welcome back, soccer superstar of 1956

You can still have a ball on a visit to Britain for $204 return
(half fare for the under 12's)

It's been a few years since you were the hot-shot of the Ramsgate Rangers. But old friends are still back there, and memories of the good old days are still fresh. (They'll even reassure your kids you were as great as you told them.)

The above is the Individual economy return 22/45 day airfare Montreal/London or Manchester. (It's even less to Glasgow.) For departure November thru March.

For those who have less time to spend BOAC also offers BRITANNIA HOLIDAYS of one or two weeks in Britain. A one week Britannia Holiday costs as little as $71 November thru March plus low G.I.T. return airfare. You get one night in a London hotel (twin room) with private bath and breakfast; guesthouse accommodation for 6 nights; and a car with unlimited mileage for the whole week.

You can use your CHARGEX credit card for any BOAC tour or scheduled flight, if you wish.

So take your family back to your old haunts soon, and have a ball. Your travel agent will show you how.

Decisive, constructive action on issues that matter to you:

Jobs

A Progressive Conservative government under Robert Stanfield's leadership will make the creation of jobs its first priority. It will immediately reduce personal income taxes to stimulate consumer demand, to create jobs. It will eliminate the 11% sales tax on building materials to encourage construction and create jobs. It will introduce a Canadian investment credit incentive, to encourage Canadian citizens to invest in small Canadian businesses—to create more jobs. It will encourage more processing of Canadian raw materials here at home, because that means jobs. And a P.C. government will expand the retraining opportunities available through the Department of Manpower, and make that agency much more aggressive in searching out job vacancies for those seeking employment.

Prices

A P.C. government will have the courage to impose temporary price and wage controls, if necessary, to halt spiralling inflation.

It will ensure that old age security and income supplement benefits are adjusted regularly to reflect adequately any increases in the cost of living.

A P.C. government will discipline its own spending to ensure that federal expenditures are not contributing to the inflationary trend.

It will increase the authority of the Auditor General, so that his department can be fully effective in bringing to light wasteful and inefficient government spending, which contributes to inflation.

And it will make funds available to assist in setting up residential land banks that will help to keep soaring land costs from adding to inflationary pressures.

Taxes

A P.C. government will stop the personal income tax increase of 3% scheduled by the Trudeau government for January 1st and will introduce immediate reductions to put more money into the hands of Canadian consumers. It will also change our system of taxation to end the extra (and hidden) tax burden that inflation has imposed upon Canadian taxpayers. For the long run, it will undertake a systematic review of all our taxation policies. The government's new tax legislation, some of which was forced through Parliament in a matter of hours, disheartens many businessmen, and does little to relieve the disproportionate tax burden now borne by Canada's poor. These things, and many others, must be changed.

A Progressive Conservative government will do better.

OCTOBER'S HALLOWE'EN

"According to ancient, sacred custom." — Jean Racine (1639-1699).

* * *

Upon meeting an elderly gentleman who makes a hobby of gathering data concerning the story behind the celebrations, both local and world-wide, we inquired about October's party — Hallowe'en.

"Where did the name Hallowe'en come from?"

"Hallowe'en," he answered, "comes from and means All Hallows Eve. That is, the night before All Saints Day. But Hallowe'en really has little in common with the Christian festival.

"What then did influence the mystique which surrounds Hallowe'en?"

"The historic culture that had a great influence had to do with pagan customs and superstitutions of the ancient Druids."

"In what way?"

"Around the beginning of November, the Druids had a celebration known as the Vigil Samhain, god of the dead. The Samhain, was believed to summon from bodies of animals, who had died during the past year, their spirits.

"The black cats were decreed sacred, by the Druids, who believe they really were once human beings, punishment for their evil deeds, were changed into black cats.

"What did the Druids do, then?"

"The Druids believed they could appease the spirits playing havoc with mortals by frightening and hurting them and their property, and playing tricks, by setting out dainty food and sweets.

"Did this really help?"

"Evidently. Another way to appease the spirits, they thought, was to pretend to be one of them. And so that is why we have masks, strange gowns and costumes, going about out-of-doors, and the trick or treat threat."

"Was that all the people did?"

"Well, many sang and danced. Others lit great fires to frighten the spirits away. Still others wore hideous masks, and would leap wildly through the flames as if possessed by the spirits of these other-worldly creatures.

"Also, since the Druids believed many women sold their souls to the devil this was a time when the traditional witch rode the skies on her broomstick."

"It was a night, it seems, then, for black cats, ghosts and goblins, a yellow moon — and a time for storytellers."

"Definitely, even the devil himself played the bagpipes, even castanets from deadman's bones."

"The jack-o-lantern represents several things; the demon mask as well as the Halloween fire the Druids lit on hilltops to mark the beginning of winter and finally a hallowen symbol, today."

MR. AND MRS. DEREK LODER

LODER — SHEIKJ — Linda Bradford-Sheikj, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Bradford of Belleville was recently united in marriage to Derek Ardan Wallbridge Loder, nephew of Dr. and Mrs. P. G. Loder, RR3 Belleville. The bridegroom's parents are deceased. Rev. Canon T. E. Loder, of Toronto, grandfather of the bridegroom assisted Rev. D. Dargavel during the ceremony in St. Columba Presbyterian Church.

Club Activities

Stirling Horticultural Society

— STIRLING — Stirling Horticultural Society met at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church hall recently with 42 people in attendance. Mrs. Floyd Armstrong presided. A large array of plants and flowers were on display including a pineapple plant, a floral table centre and various cuttings for planting or preserving in water during the winter months.

Mrs. G. H. Hogle gave an interesting commentary and showed floral scenes from various places she had visited. Included in the presentation were scenes from: Bahamas, Nassau, Hershey and Lemord Gardens, and the British Isles.

Miss Gena Spry read an article giving the formula for geraniums in a heated basement all winter. They should be pulled before frost; dries for ten days and then wrapped in newspapers and stored in a dark corner until spring. In the latter part of May prune the stems and soak in a vitamin solution for two days before planting.

During the business meeting, final plans for the observance of the 75th anniversary were completed. A pot luck dinner and program will be held in the Presbyterian Hall on Monday evening, November 20.

Campaign '72

What's It Like for the Wives

Jean Falwell, wife of Frank Falwell, Liberal candidate for Hastings Riding does not take an active part in her husband's campaigning. "I have great faith in Frank's campaign manager and I know everyone is doing a good job.

"Politics is not a hard game if you can endure it," said Mrs. Falwell. "I've noticed that Frank has shown more vim, vigor and vitality than ever while working on this campaign. Since 1945, Frank has showed interest in the community by involving himself with politics. It's just natural for Frank to be involved. He always has been."

There is never a prepared speech, just a few notes — what to discuss. Politics is not discussed that much at home for the Falwell family.

"Frank doesn't talk a topic of family conversation at home. Jim, 29, who is taking a year off university, talks a lot further at campaign headquarters.

"Although Elizabeth, 18, is attending university she shares the family's enthusiasm for politics," said Mrs. Falwell. "As for myself whenever Frank wishes me too to attend a public gathering, I do."

Mrs. Falwell who saves all published pictures and family memoirs, assists in managing a woman's shop on Front St. The Falwell family lives in Halloway. So after work, she calls on her husband and son at the committee room.

During the past three weeks meal planning has been difficult for Jean. But, when there is a family dinner, Frank's favorites, mile and vanilla ice cream are served. Fortunately her mother, here on a visit, helps with the housework.

FASHION DESIGNER

HALIFAX (CP) — Eydi Caines-Floyd, talented fashion designer from Nonya Point, Nfld., recently showed her first European collection of original designs here. A 1969 graduate of the Nova Scotia College of Art and Design in Halifax, she spent last year studying history of fashion in the Victoria and Albert Museum in London, and later designed fashions for boutiques in Amsterdam. She plans to return to Europe for further study and work.

Barbara Brethour, wife of NDP Candidate, Elridge Brethour for Hastings Riding is unable to participate in her husband's campaign, as her family is still young. When she feels it's important; she attends a political gathering. They live in Bancroft and have two children, Debbie, 9 and Darryl, 7. They discuss the issues at home and she helps her husband write his speeches.

"Debbie is quite enthused about her father's and other members' campaign," said Mrs. Brethour. "In fact, she saves clippings of all election news stories for the candidates.

The Brethours prefer the person - to - person encounters.

"Elridge has not had as much experience in talking to large groups. In the years we've lived here, he's been running his own personal business and that is the association he's had with people.

Phone calls are helpful as for each candidate's wife. But, all in all Mrs. Brethour has not noticed that much disruption in her household, except for her husband who is away so much. When Elridge is home, his favorite dishes are cooked and served for the family dinner.

Mrs. Brethour is a member of a local women's group and helps to cater to banquets and chaperones school bus trips.

Jean Ellis, wife of the Progressive Conservative candidate for the Hastings riding, supports her husband. Jack's political philosophies 100 percent but prefers her duties as a mother and housewife.

However she confides "I enjoy attending the various functions around the country with Jack and meeting the people.

"My husband is an 18-hour-a day person and I really do not know how he manages such busy days. He seems so full of energy; attending meetings, plant tours, rallies and taking time to socialize with everyone."

Jean has noticed a keen family enthusiasm throughout the campaign; although Faye, 20, is attending University, she tries to be present at as many political gatherings as possible. Connie, 18, and Ray, 12, are responsible for completing their homework and school assignments before attending the activities which are usually scheduled for evenings.

A family dinner is a must on Jean's list and the menu often includes Jack's favorite food roast beef and potatoes.

In the 22 years the candidate and his wife have been married, Jack has always been involved politically, so the campaigning and making public appearances has become a way of life for the Ellis family.

Jean noted an increased public interest through the number of phone calls to their home.

Aside from being an active member of the Women's Progressive Association, Jean canvasses for local community projects.

Hallowe'en Bazaar Held In Church

FRANKFORD — The Anglican Church Women held a tea and bake sale Wednesday evening in the parish hall with a Hallowe'en theme.

Mrs. Charles Staples and Mrs. G. Mildred Anderson, ACW greeted guests at the door. Mrs. Mary Mackey and Mrs. Mary Farrow accepted the entry fee. The hall was decorated in the Hallowe'en theme with many tables of interest to be seen. Members of ACW supplied all baked goods. Servers were: Mrs. Olive Lawson, Mrs. Dorothy Carson, Mrs. Maryanne Strike and Mrs. Mae Lockyer.

A pumpkin tree decorated with little pumpkins concealing numbers on the back to correspond to wrapped gifts donated by the members provided a popular attraction. There to assist was Karen Mike and Jane Rose.

The sewing table had a large quantity of handicrafts and knitted articles made by ACW members. There servers here were: Mrs. Rose, Mrs. Mrs. Dorothy Von and Miss Schaeffer.

The tea convener was Mrs. Millie Black with Mrs. Pearl Rose, Mrs. Pat Welch, Mrs. Beth Schafer assisting.

WEDDING

Rev. Arnold Dunlop performed the recent wedding ceremony in St. Margaret's-on-the-Hill Church when Deborah Aileen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Grier of Belleville exchanged vows with John Garfield Cole, son of Mr. and Mrs. Angus Cole of Belleville. Bill McAtee was the organist.

The bride gives in marriage by her father wore a full length crepe glace gown adorned with overall daisies, long sleeves and a stand-up collar. A three-tiered net lace veil fell from her headpiece of cultured pearls encrusted on a crown. The bride carried a cascade bouquet of red roses, carnations and lily of the valley.

Mrs. Karen Gayton, as her sister's matron of honor, was attired in a floor length pale green gown of chiffon over crepe. She carried a bouquet of green snowballs and yellow carnations.

The bridesmaids, Mrs. Shirlie Blakely, sister of the bridegroom and Mrs. Cathy Tanner were dressed similarly except in yellow. Each carried a bouquet of yellow snowballs and green carnations.

Miss Lisa Burgess, the flower girl, was dressed similarly to the bridesmaids except in pale mauve and carried a bouquet of mauve snowballs and yellow carnations.

Best man was Wayne Tanner while ushers were Dennis Gayton, Johnny Blakely and Wade Grier. Master Brian Grier was ring bearer.

The bridegroom's mother was attired in a turquois dress and lace overall coat enhanced by a corsage of yellow carnations and rosebuds.

For the wedding trip to Montreal and Quebec, the bride donned a mauve and white crimp dress completmented by a corsage of pink mums and ivy of the valley.

Upon their return, Mr. and Mrs. Cole will reside at 19 Isabel George Sq., Apt. 2, Belleville.

MR. AND MRS. JAMES HENN

Henn – Stephens

Father J. McGillivray performed the recent wedding ceremony in The Church of St. Michael the Archangel when Norman Jean Stephens exchanged vows with James Edward Henn. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Stephens, of RR 5 Madoc and the bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Doris Henn, Belleville and the late Mr. Edward Henn. The organist, Miss Dorothy Grant rendered traditional wedding music and accompanied the soloist, Robert Burke.

The bride given in marriage by her father selected a long white satin gown which featured a high neckline, an empire waist, long sleeves and a full cathedral train caught at the waist. Her lace headpiece of mother-of pearl design was attached to a tiered elbow length veil. The bride carried a cascade of red sweetheart roses intermingled with ivy and baby's breath.

Mrs. Patricia Stevens as the matron of honor was attired in a coral polyester crepe floor length gown of long dark brown velvet skirt. She carried a cluster of coral sweetheart rosebuds with fern and baby's breath attached to a white prayer book.

The bridesmaids, Miss Lynne Henn and Miss Stephanie Stephens were attired identically to the matron of honor except in floral crepe blouses. Each carried a cluster of talisman rosebuds with fern and baby's breath on white prayer books.

For the reception held at the Belleville Shrine Club, the bride's mother received guests wearing a dark green velvet pant suit accented with a silver braid trim, silver accessories and a corsage of green tinted mums.

The bridegroom's mother assisted wearing a matching coat and dress ensemble of grey and maroon crimplene. Her outfit was complemented by black accessories and a corsage of maroon tinted mums.

For the wedding trip to Niagara Falls, the bride donned a mauve pant suit accented by mauve accessories and a mauve tinted corsage.

Upon their return, Mr. and Mrs. Henn will reside at 183 Marysville, Apt. 2, Belleville.

OCTOBER'S HALLOWE'EN

"According to ancient, sacred custom." — Jean Racine (1639-1699).

* * *

Upon meeting an elderly gentleman who makes a hobby of gathering data concerning the story behind the celebrations, folk, local and world-wide, we enquired about October's party — Hallowe'en.

"Where did the name Hallowe'en come from?"

"Hallowe'en," he answered, "comes from and means All Hallows Eve. That is, the night before All Saints Day. But Hallowe'en really has little in common with the Christian festival.

"What then did influence the mystique which surrounds Hallowe'en?"

"The historic culture that had a great influence had to do with pagan customs and superstitutions of the ancient Druids."

"In what way?"

"Around the beginning of November, the Druids had a celebration known as the Vigil Samhain, god of the dead. Samhain, was believed to summon from bodies of animals, who had died within the last year, their disembodied creatures.

"Also, since the Druids believed many women sold their souls to the devil this was a time when the traditional witch rode the skies on her broomstick."

"What did the Druids do, then?"

"The Druids believed they could appease the spirits playing havoc with mortals by, frightening and hurting them and their property, and playing tricks, by setting out dainty food and cakes.

"Did this really help?"

"Evidently. Another way to appease the spirits, they thought, was to pretend to be one of them. And so that is why we have masks, strange gowns and costumes, going 'out-of-doors, and the trick or treat threat."

"Was that all the people did?"

"Well, many sang and danced. Others lit great fires to frighten the spirits away. Still others wore hideous masks, and would leap wildly through the flames as if possessed by the spirits, and these other-worldly

Ann Landers

Hysterectomy Can Cause Psychological Problems

Dear Ann Landers: I am a woman of 50 with a very troubled mind and an unhappy husband. Ten years ago I had a complete hysterectomy. After the surgery I took hormone shots and the doctor said I would be fine. Well, Ann, I lost all desire for sex after that operation and my life has been far from fine.

My husband has done nothing but complain. He says it's all in my head. He went to my doctor and had a talk with him about my lack of interest in sexual relations. When my husband came home he said: "Well, the doctor backed me up. He says your physical condition is excellent and there is no reason why you can't be as good a bed partner as you were 20 years ago."

I don't know whose neck I'd like to wring first, my husband's or the doctor's. Please tell that sex mantiac I am married to that it is normal for a woman to lose interest in sex after this kind of operation.—Winston-Salem

Dear Win: I'm afraid you're going to want to wring my neck, too. I can't tell your husband any such thing. I hope you will go back to your doctor and talk with him. It may be that you need a little counseling to help you get back on the track. The psychological effect of a hysterectomy may be responsible for your lack of interest, but there is no physical reason for it.

Dear Ann Landers: I know you are not running a Bureau For Missing Persons or a Bulletin Board For Broken Families, but I do hope you will print this letter for the benefit of the thousands of young people who left home and whose parents do not know where they are.

Please, Ann, tell these kids that if they would just drop a postcard or send a collect telegram or place a collect phone call, or have a friend who is passing through town, give us a ten word message, "I'm OK," it would make all the difference in the world.

To every runaway boy or girl who left without saying goodbye, I say this:

We would not insist that you come back, or even ask you to if you didn't want to. All we need to know is that you are alive and well. It would be like a ton of stone lifted from our hearts. Please let us hear from you soon.—Mother And Dad

Here's the message—and I hope and pray it provides the little share that some of those kids need.

Dear Ann Landers: I had to laugh when I read that letter from the woman in Tucson who said cat-haters are not to be trusted—that there is something creaky and under-handed about them. The writer also went on to say a cat-lover should never marry a person who does not share his love for cats. She added: "Cat lovers should marry each other and they will have a good life together."

The reason I found this so funny is because my aunt and uncle were both cat lovers. They never had any children, but they had 11 cats in the house. When they travelled they hired a person to stay in their house and look after the cats. After 15 years of marriage they separated. The result was the bitterest divorce on record . . . and the biggest problem was settling the custody of the cats.

If one had been a cat lover and the other a cat hater it would have been easy. So it appears the advice from Tucson was wrong. At least it didn't work in Dayton.—Witness To The Mess

Dear Wit: Thanks for my laugh for the day. I'm with you.

Smokers Usually Get Away With Slow Strangulation

By DORIS CLARK

If some ape put his hands around your throat you would resist with every muscle in you. Such an immediate threat to stop your breathing gets an instant reaction from you.

Yet if you are a smoker you allow a very small ape to cut off your wind slowly. Your oxygen intake is reduced by 10 percent with every drag of smoke, and your innards accumulate a coating of guck. The tar on your taste buds is so thick that you can't tell cabbage from boiling rubber except by sight.

The action of that small while ape is slowly choking you. The tar-in-suspension you call smoke crowds out the oxygen your heart and lungs need.

You might be a member of an anti-pollution group, yet all the while your own lungs have a smoke density that wouldn't be tolerated in a back street poolroom.

If you are an incurable masochist, this subject will leave you cold; but come to think of it, your smoke habit can leave you colder. Robert Ludwig

Dear Doris: I was good friends with this group of girls until I started going out with this guy, and then we gradually drifted away. For a while my friends and I had all contact until recently we started to speak when we met.

The thing is that I was friends with them for several years and I have finally realized what good friends mean to a person. I would like to have them as friends again. Is it up to me to make the first move?

It is my fault that we lost contact and it's not as though I'm proud — I really don't know what to do. — Regretful.

Dear Regretful: It's not the first time. Plenty of girls before you have felt so puffed up about the attentions of a steady — especially if he's their first — that their girl pals were merely part of a dull world they no longer lived in.

Now the Big Break has broken contact; you slip off Cloud Nine and land on earth with a dull thud. Where is everybody?

Probably you can pick up where you left off but you certainly have to make the first move. Have a ben party, complete with rock and roll records and some of the games on my "Party Games and Refreshments" leaflet. If this sounds like too much, call up one of the girls and go for a walk with her down to a hamburg stand.

Next time you start dating, don't look down on the girls. They are likely to be steadfast friends for a longer time, than any boy you are going to wind up to for the next few years.

Dear Doris: When a bride sends out acknowledgements for gifts at a bridal shower, whose signature appears? I have been told that when acknowledging wedding gifts, both bride's and groom's names appear, whereas with shower thank you's, only the bride's name appears.

Dear Uncertain: Thank you notes for both shower and wedding gifts are correctly signed with the bride's name only.

Are music lovers extremely sociable?

FEELINGS not extremely so, but people who enjoy music do appear to mix more easily at meetings and parties. Even more sociable are those who can play a musical instrument. It is not that everyone likes to be entertained either. Many amateur piano players, for example, seem to have gained from their music skills a confidence that carries them past the barriers that can keep others from being as sociable as they would like to be.

Should parents squelch a tattletale?

NO; but they should not encourage him either—after all they don't need an undercover agent in the family. Yet parents should be careful how they handle their child who is always coming to them with tales of the other kids' behavior. The tattletale may not really be only spoiling on his brothers and sisters; he may be telling his parents more about himself and the needs he feels deprived of than he and they realize.

Can a broken engagement be 'fixed'?

YES; if a man and woman find they still love each other despite their split-up, they have as much chance at happiness as any other couple who never called off their engagement. In fact, an on-again-off-again engagement might result in a more extremely smooth marriage. The man and woman might have settled most of their fears about each other before they made a definite commitment that many newlyweds don't attempt until after the honeymoon.

Physically Handicapped Girl Writes TV Script

HALIFAX (CP) — It was a thrill for 25-year-old Gwyneth Matthews when her script was accepted for a Marcus Welby, M.D. television show.

Mrs. Matthews, confined to a wheelchair since she suffered a severe case of spinal meningitis nine years ago, based her script on her life.

We'll Walk Out of Here Together, televised Sept. 26, tells the love story of a physically handicapped college girl determined to overcome her affliction and a truck driver determined to live within his limitations.

Mrs. Matthews, whose hobby has been writing "since I was knee high to a grasshopper," says a pre-metrical course at university created an interest in medical drama.

She decided to try writing her own story for the Welby show because it deals with emotional aspects of illness in which she is specially concerned.

Saigon Forces on Alert

SAIGON (AP) — The Viet Cong pledged today to "absolutely respect and carry out all provisions" of the Paris peace agreement worked out by the United States and North Vietnam, and said there would be "no liquidation" of opposing forces in South Vietnam.

At the same time, President Nguyen Van Thieu placed South Vietnam's armed forces on general alert as Communist troops launched a land-grab drive in anticipation of the ceasefire going into effect soon, officials said.

In its first official statement on the peace package, the Viet Cong's Liberation radio said responsible Viet Cong representatives "will immediately conduct negotiations with the present Saigon administration to settle in concert together the internal problems of South Vietnam.

"These will be settled on the basis of equality, mutual respect, and non-liquidation of each other.

"We have every goodwill attitude necessary to end the war, restore peace, eradicate all hatred and anger, realize national concord, and together heal our war wounds, unite with each other, love and care for each other, and to live together for happiness and prosperity."

The pledge to abide by the terms of the Paris agreement came at the end of a long statement that started with a declaration that the United States must sign the pact if it wanted an end to the Vietnam war.

The statement also accused both Saigon and Washington of threatening the entire question of peace in Vietnam," and said unless the agreement was signed by Tuesday, military attacks in South Vietnam would be intensified.

Ships Move

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) — Foreign ships began moving through the Welland canal at 8 a.m. today as Canadian pilots resumed work after being off work since Thursday in a contract dispute.

Pilots began navigating nine ships waiting to proceed through the canal from Lake Ontario to Lake Erie and as other 11 foreign ships waiting to go in the opposite direction a spokesman for the St. Lawrence Seaway Au horrity said.

Canadian shipping in the canal had not been affected.

The holdup came after the Corporation of Great Lakes Pilots, which represents 56 Canadian pilots working the Welland Canal and upper lakes, stopped work to discuss negotiations with the Great Lakes Pilotage authority for a new contract.

Crop Crushed

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) — This year's grape crop in Ontario is estimated at 53,000 to 55,000 tons, well below the record crop of 84,000 tons last year.

Harvesting ended this week and Keith Matthe, secretary-manager of the Ontario Grape Growers Marketing Board, blamed poor weather for the crop reduction.

Dropouts Up

WATERLOO, Ont. (CP) — University dropouts rather than fewer freshmen are the main reason for the declining trend in university enrolment, Jack McNie, Ontario's minister of colleges and universities, said Friday.

Mr. McNie, who opened a $3.8-million addition to the University of Waterloo's chemistry building, said dropouts this year accounted for 75 per cent of the decline in enrolment.

The remaining 25 per cent resulted from fewer Grade 13 students going on to university, he said.

One Nabbed

ROCKLAND, Ont. (CP) — Robert Garneau, 24, of Hull, Que., arrested when he attempted to cross a road near Castelman, about 20 miles southeast of here, was charged Friday with armed robbery.

Playing God?

HAMILTON (CP) — A United States specialist in breast cancer surgery said Friday that "it's time we stopped playing God and gave women a choice of what operation they want" for treatment of the disease.

Dr. George Crile, senior consultant at the Cleveland Clinic Hospital in Cleveland, Ohio, was addressing the joint regional meeting of the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons of Canada and the American College of Physicians.

Dr. Crile said there is no evidence in medical literature that less radical surgery has poorer long-term results than major surgery in the treatment of small breast tumors.

The specialist explained five surgical procedures for removal of tumors, ranging from removal of the whole breast to partial mastectomy, in which various amounts of affected tissue are removed.

"The time has come when women are going to have to exercise their choice," said Dr. Crile. "It's her privilege even if the risk is slightly increased, and I don't think it is," he said, referring to a less radical mastectomy in which only tissue affected by the tumor is removed.

Cemetery Full

GETTYSBURG, Pa. (AP) — Gettysburg National Cemetery, dedicated in 1863 when President Lincoln delivered his famous address, opened its last new grave Friday for the burial of Andrew Lightfoot, 20, of Detroit, a First World War veteran. He died Oct. 18 while visiting his daughter in Philadelphia. Lincoln delivered the Gettysburg Address at ceremonies dedicating a part of the Civil War battlefield as a graveyard. Now it's full.

Pilot Drinking

NEW DELHI (Reuter) — An autopsy on the chief pilot of a Japan Airlines DC-8 which crashed near New Delhi last June killing 87 persons showed "positive indications of alcohol," an Indian court of inquiry was told Friday.

Girl, 10 Found Dead

ROLPHTON, Ont. (CP) — The body of Heather Lynn Barnett, 10, was found by searchers in a wooded area near this Ottawa Valley community Friday.

Police said the girl had been murdered, but they would not disclose the cause of death until an autopsy has been performed.

Inspector R. W. Perrin of the criminal investigation branch of the provincial police said the girl left her home in Rolphton Thursday afternoon to go to the store. When she did not return, her parents reported her missing.

Newspapers Improving

FREDERICTON (CP) — Are Canadian newspapers better or worse than they used to be? A publishing company executive, called as an expert on journalism, disagreed with another expert on this point at the Irving newspaper monopoly trial Friday.

St. Clair Bellfour of Toronto, president of Southam Press Ltd., said he does not believe a statement made by Eric Wells, former editor of the Southam owned Winnipeg Tribune, that there has been a steady deterioration" in the quality of Canadian papers.

"I think there has been an improvement in the quality of newspapers," he said.

Mr. Belfour was the fifth witness called in the crosbiee trial which concluded nine days of testimony in New Brunswick Supreme Court Friday. Mr. Justice Albany M. Robichaud adjourned the case until Nov. 6 at Moncton, N.B. With at least seven more witnesses to be called by prosecutor William Hoyt the trial could last another week or more.

Southern Press Ltd. is also involved in broadcasting, commercial printing and exhibitions. It controls the largest newspaper circulation in the country.

Discussing the trend toward greater group ownership of newspapers, he said that is not necessarily a bad thing. Joining a group often improved a paper by providing it with greater resources.

The charges now being tried against the four Irving Companies were laid after K. C. Irving, New Brunswick industrialist, bought the Fredericton Gleaner, the province's fifth English-language daily.

Now Irving in Bermuda, he also controlled Saint John radio and television stations.

Chryslers Recalled

DETROIT (AP) — A possibility that a brake hose may be rubbing against the frame has caused Chrysler Corp. to recall 13,302 Plymouth Satellites and Dodge Coronets and Chargers.

In Windsor, Ont., a spokesman for Chrysler Canada Ltd. said Friday night that slightly more than 1,000 of the company's 1973 models are being recalled in Canada.

The spokesman said there have been no reports of accidents caused by the problem in Canada.

Priest Wants King Made Saint

LONDON (CP) — At 80 years of age, Rt. Rev. Clement Henry Parsons says he has little time left for lost causes.

Perhaps that partly explains the fierce intensity with which this Roman Catholic scholar drills his daily classes in Greek language and mythology at St. Edmund's College about 40 miles north of London.

Certainly, he says, it provides the motive for his devotion to King Henry VI. He and many others wish to see Henry recognized as a saint.

"This is not a lost cause in any sense," Msgr. Parsons said in an interview. "Outsiders tend to become skeptical at the fact that Henry's canonization has been an off-and-on phenomenon for 550 years or so. But I believe it's more alive now than ever."

For nearly 10 years, Msgr. Parsons has headed Britain's Henry VI Society, dedicated to the cause.

Backed not only by Roman Catholics but Anglicans and even some agnostics, the society has made a fresh appeal to John Cardinal Heenan, Archbishop of Westminster, for a resumption of the movement.

The path to canonization has been a long one for the English king who founded the schools of Eton and King's College, Cambridge.

He was born Dec. 6, 1421, and murdered May 21, 1471.

The question of his sainthood was considered during the reign of five popes and was almost completed in the 15th century when King Henry VIII broke with the Church of Rome.

"Cardinal Heenan is waiting until we can show that there is widespread public devotion to Henry before he acts," said Msgr. Parsons. This may take a long time but time is not essential in this context.

Those who espouse canonization know, he said, that although a life of sanctity is a necessary element, the real test comes after death when miracles associated with the candidate must be proved.

This has been done to the satisfaction of the Sacred College of Cardinals in the Vatican. Some 155 miracles are attributed to the king and set out in a massive work by a Jesuit scholar, Rev. Paul Grosjean of Brussels.

Msgr. Parson's society now is concentrating on collecting signatures throughout the world from devotees of Henry in order to present them to Cardinal Heenan in the hope that he would then formally recommend canonization to Pope Paul.

The revived movement has provoked a spate of letters to The Times as well as one disparaging editorial in the newspaper arguing that Henry's weakness as a king made his canonization dubious.

Msgr. Parsons counters that despite Henry's ineptitude, his qualifications for sainthood are unimpeachable.

Shakespeare, in his play, Henry VI, refers to the monarch as "base, fearful and disparaging . . . faint-hearted and degenerate king."

Among the miracles attributed to Henry are the revival of a four-year-old boy who was drowned Aug. 21, 1441, near a watermill. When his body was recovered, neighbors gathered and the boy was restored to life following communal prayers to the dead king.

Manuscripts documenting the miracles are stored in dusty corners of the British Museum. One tells of a case in 1486 when Thomas Symns of Portsmouth ran into formidable difficulties. Eleven members of his family had the plague, two of his horses were sick and three pigs stolen.

Thomas prayed to King Henry and not only were his relatives cured, but the horses recovered and the pigs returned as well.

Henry himself had a dispute record with the encyclopedia Britannica officials when he was [illegible] hapless of monarchs . . . religious observances and study were his chief occupations."

He became king when he was less than a year old following the death of his father, Henry V. A few weeks later, on the death of his grandfather, Charles VI, Henry also became king of France.

In his early years, things went reasonably well on both sides of the [illegible] English lost ground in France steadily after [illegible] were defeated by Joan [illegible] later canonized—before Orleans in 1429.

At home in England, Henry's forces were defeated by those of Edward of York in 1461. Skirmishes continued for the next 10 years but Edward won a final victory at Tewkesbury in 1471 and proclaimed himself King Henry, who has been dominated by his wife Margaret of Anjou since his marriage in 1445, was imprisoned in the Tower of London and later murdered by a cousin of Edward, the Duke of Gloucester.

Will Barefoot Sanders Become U.S. Senator?

WASHINGTON (CP) — Will a man named Barefoot Sanders win a seat in the august United States Senate? Will the House of Representatives undergo one of its biggest shakeups in recent memory? Is there room for two Governor Rockefellers once more?

The answers will be provided in the Nov. 7 elections and in each case the answer may be yes.

As usual during a presidential election year, the campaign for the White House tends to overshadow all the other electoral contests going on at the same time—thousands of them for national, state and local office.

And as usual, these other races include many that are important or interesting in their own right.

Thirty-three of the 100 U.S. Senate seats are up for grabs this year, as are all 435 seats in the House of Representatives. In addition, 16 of the 50 state governorships are at stake.

These other races, many expected greatly affected by what happens in the presidential voting.

The political coat-tails of both Richard Nixon and George McGovern are thought to be unusually short, with neither man providing much help or comfort to fellow Republican or Democratic candidates.

Nixon's steamroller campaign rarely acknowledges that he is a Republican and his backing for some Republican candidates in the South—against conservative Democrats who have traditionally supported Nixon legislation has been decidedly timid.

The Democrats now control both the Senate and House, as they have with one brief exception since the 1930s, and political observers generally feel their control is not seriously threatened. The Democrats' margin is 55 to 45 in the current Senate and 254 to 177 in the House, where four seats are vacant.

There is an element of uncertainty in the current House standings, however, due to the unknown future of House Democratic Leader Hale Boggs of Louisiana and Democrat Nick Begich, Alaska's lone House member, who have been missing since their plane disappeared Oct. 16 in Alaska.

Of the 33 Senate seats at stake this year, 19 have been held by Republicans and 14 by Democrats. Eight incumbents are not seeking re-election, including the much-admired John Sherman Cooper, a Kentucky Republican, and liberal Democrat Fred Harris of Oklahoma.

One of the most interesting Senate races is in Texas, where bizarre politics are commonplace and where Barefoot Sanders, a 47-year-old Dallas lawyer and protege of Lyndon Johnson, is seeking to unseat Republican John Tower, an arch-conservative Republican.

The Democrat, whose honest-to-gosh name is Harold Barefoot Sanders Jr., but who finds it an advantage in Texas to drop his first name, is reported to be in a close race with Tower.

In Alabama, veteran Democrat John Sparkman is being threatened by former postmaster general Winton Blount while in Oregon, 72-year-old Wayne Morse—defeated in 1968 after 24 tempestuous years in the Senate—is trying for a comeback against incumbent Mark Hatfield, a popular former Republican governor of the state.

Claiborne Pell, the Democratic senator from Rhode Island, is closely opposed by John Chafee, who resigned as Nixon's secretary of the Navy to make the race. In Illinois, liberal Republican Senator Charles Percy is said to be in a tough race with Roman Pucinski, a conservative Democrat who served 14 years in the House.

Attention on the contests for the House has focused largely on that body's over-all complexion, since few congressmen can claim the same wide renown as a senator.

With 53 members not seeking re-election, the House is already guaranteed an exceptionally high turnover, regardless of the future of Boggs and Begich. Eleven congressmen are running for Senate seats or other offices but a surprising number have simply decided to go on pension.

Among those not running again are six chairmen of the powerful House committees and 17 chairmen of various sub-committees—all of them Democrats—as well as nine of the most senior Republican members.

In a body that rewards political durability more than merit, and where a 10-year veteran is still something of a newcomer, the loss of so many senior members will bring some younger men to positions of influence while leaving the elderly in effective control.

For instance, Mississippi Democrat William M. Colmer is retiring at the age of 82 after 40 years in Congress. He will probably be replaced as chairman of the important rules committee by Ray Madden of Indiana, who is a mere 68.

As for the governorships, considerable attention is being paid to West Virginia where 35-year-old John D. (Jay) Rockefeller IV, who has been the state's Democratic secretary of state, is seeking to overthrow Republican Governor Arch Moore, who scraped into power four years ago.

Rockefeller, who is thought to have national ambitions, is a nephew of Governor Nelson Rockefeller of New York. Another uncle, Winthrop, was beaten in 1970 when he ran for re-election as governor of Arkansas. Both Nelson and Winthrop are Republicans.

In Washington state, former Democratic governor Albert Rosellini is trying for a fresh chance against incumbent Republican Daniel Evans.

But most of the big names among the governors—Nelson Rockefeller, Ronald Reagan of California and George Wallace of Alabama, for example—are not up for re-election until 1974.

Trudeaumania Alive And Well in Trenton

By IAN ROBERTSON

Staff Reporter

TRENTON — For a period of approximately 20 minutes last night, Trudeaumania swept through downtown Trenton, forcing the halt of the Prime Minister's motorcade, brought about by the press of bodies on all sides of his open convertible.

Planned as a mainstreet swing through Trenton en route to Northumberland-Durham riding in Port Hope, the Prime Minister was unable to leave his car to speak to the more than 2,000 who lined the main street here.

Local Liberal party organizers, who Friday had given last - minute confirmation of a change of plans from a quick drive through town to a brief stop at the former post office site, watched as heavy-ing masses of predominantly young people, made it impossible for Trudeau to leave his car.

At one point in the downtown swing, his convertible was brought to a halt for several minutes. Several RCMP and town police rushed to his car in order to free it from the press of people.

Cars and buses from surrounding communities packed the downtown area for several hours prior to his expected arrival. All was orderly at first. Good - natured waving and campaign signs for all three party candidates could be seen.

But as soon as the first police car in the procession pulled into the Dundas Street - Main thoroughfare, a wave of humanity surged forward. Progress was completely blocked.

Many who wanted to stand their ground were forced to move. Several were trampled although none seriously.

Police and security men physically removed spectators from the path of the PMC car, others simply attempted to keep the crowds back.

At one point, several people at the rear of the convertible bearing Trudeau and Prince Edward - Hastings Liberal candidate George Cunningham, found themselves moving with the crowd, their feet several inches from the pavement, carried along by the press of bodies.

Eventually, police efforts, plus those of one cavalcade driver, cleared a path, and the Prime Minister's car was able to proceed at a slow, but regular pace.

Onlookers were dumbfounded at the response to Trudeau's visit. "We never expected anything like this to happen," was one statement repeated several times.

The Prime Minister's jet was delayed several minutes after 7 p.m., adding to the impatience of the crowd. Shortly before his arrival downtown, reporters who had preceded him from his landing at CFB Trenton, could feel a growing enthusiasm among those present. This so-called Trudeaumania, reported not as prevalent during this election campaign as that of 1968, was evident among not only Liberal supporters, but banner - carriers for the other candidates as well.

Among the hundreds of Liberal red, Conservative blue and NDP green and black signs, was one large poster placed at the end of Dundas. It read, Welcome to Hees Country, Pierre, referring to Conservative George Hees, member of parliament seeking re-election.

When met at the airport, Mr. Trudeau was presented with a bouquet of roses for his wife Margaret, by 19-year-old Cathy O'Neil, daughter of Liberal campaign manager Hugh O'Neil.

Friday morning, local organizers announced Mrs. Trudeau would accompany her husband on the Trenton, Port Hope and Cobourg trip. However, Mr. Trudeau told those gathered at the airport, she had remained behind in Ottawa.

Following his brief meeting with Northumberland - Durham riding Liberal candidate Russell Honey, after leaving Trenton, the Prime Minister quietly returned to the Canadian Forces Base. He departed by jet at 10.30 p.m.

Big Night for Liberals

Pattern of Elections Changing

By HARRY MULHALL

Staff Reporter

At times, it's been so quiet you could almost hear a ballot drop.

Typical of the entire contest, without fuss or furor the 1972 federal election campaign is moving to a close in the Quinte ridings.

Candidates now are starting to cross fingers on the hands that eagerly greeted so many voters as they await the electorate's response to six weeks' hard labor.

There's a good reason for such suspence. The outcome is still imponderable — for this has been a campaign distinctive from other years, the Quinte politicians agree.

Contrasted with flashbacks of earlier federal contests, the election scene has been less lively, even dull by times.

It could spell apathy, even more: cynicism, claims one campaigner.

But others have a less somber explanation:

The election has seen the evolution of a new political campaigning style, a reflex to changed attitudes among the electorate.

The traditional bread-and-circus formula, which saw big rallies replete with free food, banners, bands and buntine used as an organized voting spur, is gone.

Instead, campaigning has quietened, with the emphasis more on personal confrontation between the candidate and the constituency's voters, candidates agree.

The sound, often fury, of other elections can't be heard even as echo where the candidates are scheduled to seek out the people directly — on main streets, plodding door-to-door, rushing from rural dances or suburban coffee parties to open-line broadcasts.

George Hees, a veteran of national politics now fighting his 10th election, and Progressive Conservative incumbent in Prince Edward - Hastings concurs that the days of big rallies and hoopla are done.

Mr. Hees doesn't believe the election is as "apathetic as it looks. I think it's a different kind of campaigning that's come about.

"There's no doubt about it. Nobody, but nobody, comes to the sit-down platform type of event now," he says. "The only ones that come would be your own tried and true supporters."

The rallies organized in big city centres are the result of "tremendous" organization by the parties, busloading supporters to the scene.

Such events now lack "spontaneity" with "no people coming to hear because they want to learn from the other side".

Instead, his campaign this election has included smaller meetings with a social emphasis, such as dances where "a lot of people get up and talk to them personally and answer questions".

The media also siphons off campaign participation. With newspapers, radio and television "people can make their minds up in their own living rooms," says Mr. Hees.

Reaching out to a more quiescent electorate— whether it be on main street or the house-to-house circuit means more footwork for the politician, other candidates agree with Mr. Hees.

It's terrific right and day— the work for the candidate is a steady go. You've got to work harder than the old days," says Frank Follwell, another political veteran whose first federal campaign go back to the late 1940s — when he won the now-abolished South Hastings riding for the Liberals.

Mr. Follwell says there's been "nothing apatetic at all" about the campaign that he can see, and describes his drive for Hastings as the "most active and enjoyable" campaign he's run.

But the days of crowded meetings as an election booster are gone, with the emphasis on personal campaigning — "one-to-one meetings" as Mr. Follwell describes them.

His Conservative opponent, Jack Ellis, former Belleville mayor and a newcomer to senior government political jousting, says a candidate is maybe the wrong person to assess campaign responses, since he's too close to the action.

Nonetheless, the trends are changing.

"The traditional things like advertising campaigns, sign posting still is being carried on. But the main thing is talking to the people."

The problem is to reach a sufficient number personally before the election deadline cuts out contact.

"I know that another time, I'd change my campaign to include more and more meetings with groups of people. It's impossible to get to everyone door-to-door."

Still, in larger urban centres, meetings may not draw the crowds. But in rural areas such events are successful, since "everybody likes to come out and get a crack at the candidate," believes Mr. Ellis.

"Meeting people personally now is the main thing — whether it's at coffee parties, going house to house or mainstreeting. I always figure if I can talk to somebody I can gain a vote."

But in Prince Edward-Hastings, Richard Lane, New Democratic Party contestant, claims to have detected a "fair amount of cynicism, or at least skepticism," among voters.

He agrees there may be a certain apathy but adds: "I may be wrong. We can only see when they count the vote."

But the style of election politics is changing significantly, he believes.

In future, campaigns will be more confrontation than cavalcade — a transition which is taking place now.

"And I think that'd be a very good thing," says Mr. Lane.

The compelling aspects of open-line broadcasts — which give a candidate both personal, if unseen, contact with the masses of an audience—spread to both Quinte ridings for the first time in a federal election.

Radio station CJBQ gave candidates equal air time and the station's management obviously felt the events sparked widespread interest. The station intends offering the same facilities to candidates in Belleville's upcoming mayoralty campaign.

Milk Johnston, who was host for the call-in sessions, says, for those specific nights the station's lines "were never idle."

While some of the questions were obvious plants by party supporters, the "vast majority were spontaneous".

He sees more restricted air still busy — mode of campaigning that seems evolving out of this election has also lessened tension, one political party worker in Hastings believed. If it has taken political time off the platforms and among the public, it also means while speaking to the people they have less chance to talk about each other.

Hence in this campaign, "nobody is getting upset and on a soapbox . . . running down each other."

"And 8 scents it's this way all across the country," he says. "It was never good politics anyway. It turned votes off."

Man Killed, Two Hurt

ROSSMORE (Staff) — One man is dead and two women are being treated for serious injuries following an early morning two-car pile-up here today.

Thomas Kelly, 35, of RR 2 Consecon died at the scene of the accident just south of the bay bridge shortly before 8 a.m. when the car he was driving came into collision with another automobile operated by Miss Cassandra Dymock, 19, of 86 Rollins Drive, Belleville.

Miss Dymock had received her Grade 13 graduation certificate Friday night at Belleville Collegiate's commencement exercises. This morning she is being treated for a fractured left leg and scalp lacerations at Belleville General Hospital.

Wife of Thomas Kelly, Mary, a passenger in the Kelly car, is also at BGH for medical attention.

The Kellys were on their way home from Field Party gatherings in Trenton last night, when the mishap took place.

Picton detachment OPP which investigated the occurence says both vehicles will likely be beyond repair.

1,300 at Follwell Rally

The event, stands as the largest gathering of the local campaign.

Follwell was ushered into the hall by a placard - carrying contingent of young Liberals for his introduction to the crowd of local workers by Mayor J. Russell Scott. Scott was introduced by former MP Robert Temple.

The Liberal candidate took the opportunity to thank his campaign workers for their efforts, expressed his personal confidence but cautioned all to keep working down to the wire.

During the evening the crowd heard a taped message of greeting from Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau that went on to make favorable comments about Mr. Follwell.

The Prime Minister made a personal request for Liberal support in Hastings, saying that Follwell is a man of experience with sound credentials.

Stanfield In and Out

TRENTON — Interest in Conservative party leader Robert Stanfield's brief stop at the Canadian Forces Base here Friday night, was completely overshadowed by that of Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, just over one hour later.

In fact Mr. Stanfield spent so little time here, neither local Conservative campaigner showed up in time to meet him. Hastings riding Conservative candidate Jack Ellis arrived several minutes late. Prince Edward-Hastings MP George Hees was unable to attend.

Looking extremely tired in this, the last few days before the Oct. 30 election, Mr. Stanfield was met by base commander Col. William Paisley, local Conservative Association members Ted Parker and Douglas Whitley, three party supporters and three members of the press.

Accompanied by his wife and 16-year-old daughter Judy, Mr. Stanfield stood on the airport tarmac just long enough for greetings all-round, several photographs, and then the party was off, en route to Kingston.

There was divergence of opinion among governors as to whether the board has a moral responsibility to provide adequate parking facilities.

Ald. Enos David said he feels the neighboring residential streets are too wide anyway and can bear being used for curbside parking.

Mr. Bateman disagreed.

Mr. Rickard said ideally the hospital should have 875 spaces for car parking. It now has 200.

Staff are being charged $5 a month for parking spaces and there is a waiting list. Only 150 spaces are set aside for a staff of 1,000.

Mrs. J. C. Ellis cautioned the board against rushing to build a pay-to-use parking garage. She said she had the impression most people would not use it if they had to pay.

Park for Parking Is Hospital Plan

In a bid to solve the car parking problems at Belleville General Hospital, the board of governors of BGH Friday resolved to request the City of Belleville to lease or buy bayshore parkland as an interim hospital parking area.

The board also set aside up to $2,000 to pay for consultant who will be asked to study long-term solutions.

Governor Carl Bateman suggested the city provide land immediately south of the hospital. "The city has a green belt approach but they have to share the responsibility," he said.

Ald. Gerald Joyce told the board it will not be possible selling job before the city traffic committee and a greater use before the park board.

Joyce recommended the hiring of consultants to make a cost proposal for the most satisfactory remedy. The hospital's executive director, Philip Rickard estimated price of a new parking garage is about $2,000 - $3,000 a car.

Returning Offices Busy

Mounds of polling reports, election return directories and ever-increasing pile of telephone messages filtering through keep the staff at a constant busy state.

The number of polls in the riding has increased since 1968. For the last federal election, there were 168 polling stations. This year, the figure was increased to 173 with addition of five nursing home polls, and finally up to 195 when 22 of the stations were made mobile polls.

Even the number of voters has increased, with 8,865 more voters eligible to cast their choice in the Monday federal election. Many of them are young people 18 to 21 voting for the first time.

These figures are made up of 8,900 urban and 37,198 rural in this year, as against 6,869 urban and 30,364 rural in 1968.

All of Prince Edward-Hastings riding is classed rural area with the exception of Trenton, listed as urban. Both Picton and Campbellford fall in quality as 'urban' centres because they do not have 5,000 voters.

People in rural areas, who have been left off the electoral rolls, may have their names added by swearing their eligibility before the deputy returning officer and vouched for by an elector whose name appears on the official list of electors for the rural polling division. This is not posible in urban areas.

Mrs. Grace Radcliffe, returning officer for the riding, said in an interview Friday, she and fellow headquarters officials have been spending every spare minute training the 168 enumerators and 195 deputy returning officers in the riding. The final class, today, is in Trenton.

For the 1972 election, there are a total of 777 officials workers involved in supervising both advance and regular voting days, plus tabulation of the results.

Only one important printer's error has occurred in the lists of polling stations. For the area west of Belleville, in the RR 5, district, a polling notice for Wesley Church should be changed to read Westminster Church.

Airport Get-together

Conservative party leader Robert Stanfield meets Prince Edward-Hastings riding Conservative Association hierarchy at CFB Trenton shortly before 6 p.m. Here, he chats briefly with Douglas Whitley, campaign manager for MP George Hees, and association president and Trenton councillor Ted Parker. Mr. Stanfield arrived earlier than expected, en route to a final pre-election rally at Kingston. He stayed on the airport tarmac just long enough to shake hands all-round.

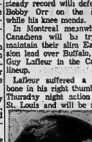
Leafs Lead League In Injury Department

By THE CANADIAN PRESS



The National Hockey League season is just three weeks old today but already some clubs are being hard hit by injuries.

Toronto Maple Leafs, chronic sufferers the last few seasons, appear to be leading the sick parade again and they have few healthy, experienced players to send against Boston Bruins this evening and Philadelphia Flyers at Philadelphia Sunday night.

In Montreal meanwhile, the Canadiens will be trying to maintain their slim East Division lead over Buffalo, without Guy Lafleur in the Canadiens lineup.

Lafleur suffered a cracked bone in his right thumb during Thursday night action against St. Louis and will be riddelined about a week.

GUY LaFLEUR

At Oakland Friday night, the Seals won only their second game in nine starts, led by Walt McKechnie's two goals and one assist and the goaltending of Gilles Meloche.

The Seals never fell behind although the Penguins tied the game 3-3 late in the second period after goals by Eddie Shack, Ron Schock and Lowell MacDonald.

Joey Johnston, Hilliard Graves, Pete Laframboise and Gary Croteau beat Penguins rookie netminder Denis Herron for the other Seals goals to give the crowd of 3,298 the first California home victory of the season.

Gary Sargent scored twice in game against Minnesota.

Lundigran may see some action in place of Brian Glenday who is out with a bruised shoulder—also suffered against Minnesota.

And rookie Errol Thompson is likely to see more ice time in place of left-winger Denis Dupere who suffered a shoulder separation in Thursday's practice session.

Marlies Nip Knights

Toronto Marlboros edged London Knights 3-2 Friday night to protect first place in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A league.

In other action Peterborough Petes held to stage a third period rally to defeat Kitchener Rangers 5-1, the Petes remain one point back of the front running Marlies.

Elsewhere, the hometown Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds downed Ottawa 67s 4-2 and Hamilton Red Wings and Oshawa Generals edged Windsor Spitfires 4-3 in Sunday.

In London, Paulin Bordeleau scored twice for the Marlboros scored twice for the Marlboros and 3-1 after two periods. Gebi Gadsup scored the other Toronto goal.

Dennis Vevergaert and Denis Marvel replied for London.

In Kitchener, the Petes were blasted in three unanswered third-period goals. Bob Neely counted twice for the winners while Bob Gainey scored the other. Joe Portanski scored for Kitchener.

Peterborough took nine of the 15 penalties and Kitchener outshot the visitors 38-29.

Greyhounds Friday was the answer for the Greyhounds as they kept the fire bottled up in their own end. Dan O'Donnovue, Gary Farelli, Tod Campbell and Rick Nelson scored for the Sault while Derek Smith and Jamie Masters scored for Ottawa.

The win was only the Greyhounds third in 10 games while third place Ottawa have seven win in 11 starts.

In Sudbury the teams were tied 2-2 at the end of the first period and Hamilton held a slim 3-2 margin at the close of the second.

Sweet Smell of Success

Orillia Terriers, Barrie Flyers and Galt Hornets came up smelling like roses Friday.

The three teams came up with decisive victories in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A League and are now locked in a three-way tie for first place.

Orillia dumped Owen Sound Downtowners 7-3 in Orillia, Barrie trampled Brantford Foresters 10-0 in Barrie and Galt downed Belleville Quintes 9-6 in Belleville.

In the other game Friday, Oakville Oaks knocked over Kingston Aces 6-4 in Kingston.

Oakville's win was the first in seven starts, and Hank Monteith led the way with two goals. Other Oaks scorers were Gary Dyer, Bob Pendleton, Dave Macdonald, Bob Weller and Ron McNeil.

Kingston was leading 3-2 at the end of the first and 4-2 at the end of the second before the Oaks broke loose.

Action resumes tonight with Belleville in Galt.

Orr's Example Helps Buchanan Drills Oilers

Back in the early 1930's, Ron Buchanan and Bobby Orr combined to make Ottawa General a threat in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series.

Orr quickly became the National Hockey League's top-ranked defenceman but Buchanan had to wait eight years before getting his chance for recognition with the World Hockey Association.

Buchanan, a lanky centre for Cleveland, scored two goals and assisted on two others Friday night to lead the Crusaders to a 6-0 victory over Alberta Oilers while Gerry Cheevers provided the shutout goaltending.

In other games Friday, Philadelphia Blazers scored their first victory of the season with a 5-4 decision over Los Angeles Sharks while Winnipeg Jets downed Chicago Cougars 4-3.

Buchanan, a 27-year-old Montreal native, now leads the Generals with five goals and nine assists in nine games and shows promise of becoming a scoring star such as he was with Oshawa.

In his last two seasons with the Generals, from 1963 to 1965, Buchanan had 202 points, including 102 goals.

After a scoreless first period at Cleveland Friday, Buchanan went to work and helped set up

GERRY CHEEVERS

Skip Krake and Gary Jarrett each scored one first goal and first goalie Ken Drewn as the Crusaders romped to a 4-0 lead at the end of the second period.

Defenceman Ray Clearwater and Ted Hodgson got the other Cleveland goals while Cheevers recorded his second shutout of the season before a crowd of 4,793.

Cleveland's victory gave them a four-point lead atop the East Division while the Oilers' loss meant they failed to keep pace with Winnipeg atop the West.

A goal by Andre Lacroix early in the third period at Philadelphia gave the Blazers their first victory in eight games, and it came with player-coach Johnny McKenzie, centre Derek Sanderson and goalie Bernie Parent all on the sidelines.

Sanderson is out with a shoulder injury and Parent is sidelined with a broken foot but their replacements got the job done.

The Blazers called up goalie Yves Archambault and forward Bob Leiter Friday and Sam Gaillard from Roanoke of the Eastern Hockey League Friday.

Cahill Plans Pair of Wins

TORONTO (CP) — Never mind what Montreal Alouettes do in Regina Sunday, Leo Cahill plans to win his Eastern Conference playoff berth here today and in Hamilton next Saturday.

Head coach Cahill and his Toronto Argonauts face Ottawa Rough Riders here today and the Tiger-Cats in Hamilton the following weekend and victories in both matches would assure Argos of third place in the EFC regardless of what the Alouettes do in their final game against Saskatchewan Roughriders Sunday.

"This is the only situation I want to be in," says Cahill. "We have to win our last two games and those will be against Ottawa and Hamilton, the leading contenders to represent the East in the Grey Cup.

"If we don't win those games, then we're not good enough to be in the playoffs."

Good enough or not, the Argos could get in the back door with only one win in their last two games, provided the Als lose Sunday.

Should that weekend action the Als occupied third spot in the East with four wins and nine losses for eight points while Argos were 3-9 for six points. All Argos need to do is beat the Als on points and they'll win third spot by virtue of a 2-1 record over Montreal during the season.

But, Cahill insists, the Argos will think when last two.

"I think when we win our next two games we will be in the playoffs and have improved our worth over the season despite everything that has happened to us.

"The three teams that should be in the playoff's should be the Big Red East," says Cahill, "not at the beginning of the season, not in the middle of the season, but at the end of the regular schedule.

"We've had a very good last year and some people think that should automatically put us in the playoffs. Well, circumstances dictate standings and we've been struggling since game one.

JACQUES PLANTE

In other games tonight, Pittsburgh Penguins, who lost 6-3 to California Golden Seals in Friday's only game, move on to Los Angeles to meet the Kings while Buffalo Sabres visit Montreal Canadiens, Chicago Black Hawks take on the Islanders at New York, St. Louis Blues play host to Detroit Red Wings, Atlanta Flames visit Vancouver Canucks and Philadelphia faces the North Stars in Minnesota.

Other Sunday action has the Islanders at Boston, Minnesota at Buffalo, Montreal at Detroit and Chicago against the Rangers in New York.

Leafs general manager Jim Gregory sent an emergency call to Tulsa of the Central Hockey League Friday and came up with goalie Jim McRae and defenceman Joe Lundigran.

McRae will likely back up fellow-rookie Ron Low in the Leafs goal while veteran Jacques Plante nurses a broken finger suffered in Wednesday's

Bears Bounce Pembroke

Smiths Falls Bears broke Pembroke Lumber Kings' winning streak Friday, downing them 6-5 in the Central Junior Hockey League.

Brockville, meanwhile, romped to a 10-2 victory over last-place Nepean Raiders.

John Robertson scored three goals to lead the Bears, with Trenton's John Gravelle getting two more and Des Allen one. Steve Croucher and Randy Mohns scored early for Pembroke and Terry Woermke started a third-period rally in which Dana Newman and Tom Newman also scored in a vain attempt to retain a tie.

Pembroke remains in first place ahead of Ottawa Rangers.

Steve Keech of Trenton and Dave Dixie each scored three times for Brockville, Bob Mulcahy tied two goals and Silver McCosham and Maurice White one each. Paul Millman and Don Langill scored for Nepean.

In games Sunday, Nepean is at Pembroke and Smiths Falls is in Hull against the Festivals.

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — For the second time in as many weeks, slump-ridden Arnold Palmer held the lead after two rounds of a major golf tournament.

"This time," the 43-year-old master said: "I just hope I can keep it going for two more days."

The comment was a reference to last week's Kaiser International when he led by two strokes after 36 holes, then lost with two poor rounds on the weekend.

Toronto's George Knudson, who won the Kaiser event, had a share of the first-round lead here, dropped one stroke back Friday.

It was the fourth time this season Palmer had here in position to win and had failed, and it extended his victory drought to some 15 months.

But Friday, he put together a solid, two-under-par 69 for a two-round total of 134—eight under par.

Seniors Sight For Sore Eyes

By ERIC EMERSON
Sports Editor

Friday's Senior 'A' hockey game was a sight for sore eyes.

For the 1100 spectators in the Belleville Memorial Arena, the eye strain could be attributed to flashing goal lights—15 of them to be exact as the Galt Hornets fashioned a 9-6 win over the Quinies.

For Dave Jones, however, the most painful part of the spectacle was watching fundamental mistakes committed by the Belleville seniors. The former Senior "A" player and coach was called upon to assume bench duties following the death of Wayne Brown's father Friday morning.

"We were out of position," he snapped. "What did they have . . . 47 shots on goal?

He was particularly irked by the Quinies' inability to win face-offs, particularly in their own end. "They beat us clean-ly in our own end on two of their goals and it should be the easiest thing in the world to present a centre from getting a clean draw. Our centres just weren't down."

He was pleased with the work of the George Godson, Lorne O'Donnell, Al Ferguson line who accounted for five of the losers' six goals, but noted that, "we're a one-line hockey club."

Ferguson continued his scoring rampage with a hat trick that gave him 11 goals in seven league games to date. "Al's a good all-native player, and he isn't going to hurt you defensively," said Jones of the right winger. "He goes out and works at practice. He scores goals in practice and he scores them in games. Some of these guys don't even score in practice!"

For the first period, at least it appeared as though the Quinies might keep their unbeaten home record intact, getting goals from O'Donnell, Ralph Plane and Godson to shrink Steve Degurse's lo-o marker.

Goalie Ron Jury gave the club a lift when he beat John Nickerson on a penalty shot, getting a piece of the puck as the Galt forward attempted to go high to his stick side. As a whole, however, the game wasn't one of Jury's better efforts. Some line stops such as the one on Nickerson and another on Vance Miller's second period breakaway were offset by some soft Galt goals. At the other end of the rink, Sonny Pennington was equally inconsistent even though his team held a 47-27 shooting margin.

The second period proved disastrous for the Quinies as they were outscored 5-1 during that space of time to allow the Hornets a 6-4 lead. Belleville carried the play during parts of the final period, however, as Ferguson narrowed the lead to 7-6 on one point, with a pair of goals.

The big winger could have picked up a couple more tallies, hitting the post with a labelled drive and driving the puck into Sonny Pennington's pad from the slot position a few minutes later.

The Hornets assured themselves of a win when Bill Nway's low 30-footer slipped between Jury's spread pads at 18.20 of the third to make it 8-6. The final Galt goal went into an empty net with the Belleville goalie lifted for a sixth attacker.

The two teams will meet again tonight in Galt.

Goal by Godson

'In Senior "A" hockey at Memorial Arena last night, Belleville's George Godson beat Galt defenseman Steve Hunt deflecting a Bob Edmund's point shot from past goalie Brent Pennington. Desnite Godson's efforts which gave Belleville a 3-1 lead at that point, the Quinie's were stung 9-6 by the Hornets. Galt remained tied for first place in Ofla. Senior "A" competition, on the strength of the victory. The two teams meet again tonight in Galt.

Deft Duck Hunter

I'll admit to being one of the world's worst duck hunters, not for lack of trying, but certainly in the bottom ten.

In eight long years of unsatisfactorily marksmanship, I've been able to bag exactly two ducks and chase, were we obviously old, blind and stone deaf; filling prey for nature's "survival of the fittest" law.

I proved my fitness superiority over them by crawling through ten miles of bush, stones and spent magnums, then ambushing the old duffers when they had their spectacles off.

The problem with duck hunting is that nobody involved will take a sensible approach to the whole business. Getting up at ten in the morning, digesting last night's hunting yarns over some hot coffee and then going out to scan blue, birdless sky just isn't good enough for the boys with bulging game bags. They rise at three in the morning, preferably a cold and windy one, to stumble into a clammy marsh on some ridiculous theory that ducks wake up earlier than people.

It was a sincere pleasure, then, to finally meet a real duck hunter.

Mel Dempsey seemed like an honest, straightforward fellow and not the type of sportsman who'd send a rookie pitcher to the bullpen for a bucket of steam. Still, I have to admit to a few misgivings when a man sits on his living room sofa and tells me candidly and clearly that he can decoy 13 fat mallards into my lap any old time of day.

My doubts about Mel's duck hunting ability increased, to say the least, when I saw his equipment. One battered pail of scratch corn to decoy 13 wild mallards? Sure Mel.

By now it should have been clear, even to a sportswriter, that he was off on a wild duck chase. But since I had my 12-gauge Yashica, an itchy trigger finger and only a second's stroll from his house to their Oak Lake stomping grounds, I figured that I'd tag along on just a million-to-one chance that he could bring these alleged ducks into focus range.

The trip was worth it.

As the Oak hills campground owner had promised, 13 mallards filled my camera lens with a brown and green flotilla almost as soon as he began clanging the old dinner bucket.

Of course at this stage of the game, the only thing "wild" about these birds was their table manners, shouldering one and other aside to climb aboard the Dempsey dock and take a full load of scrubed Golden Bantam right in the old breadbasket.

They had been found, by Mel, as a dozen six-week old ducklings in Port Hope area marsh and are believed to be all from the same brood. That, according to the Ingasne Conservation authorities, is entirely possible. The 13th member of the flock was added when the mother decided to stand and fight rather than desert the ducklings. She was escorted with them to the Sheraton Dempsey, which is disguised as a barn, where they spill accommodations with two horses.

"We kept them in a pen for the first few weeks because the pike and turtles might have eaten them if they'd been out on the lake," said Mel. Since then they've shared Oak Lake's aquatic facilities with boaters, swimmers and water skiers, and apparently shared dining fare with a number of neighboring cottagers.

"I wasn't sure at first whether or not people would bother them, or try to shoot them, but now I think everyone kind of likes them," explained their caretaker. "They visit the cottages around here and people feed them scraps," added Mel's wife Ella Mae.

Any help with the food bill is gladly accepted as the flock consumes about 100 pounds of scratch grain and corn every three weeks. Mr. Dempsey had kept tame ducks and fowl on a farm, near Port Hope which he owned previously and looks after most of the caretaking duties. These have included placing a splint on a broken leg of one of the ducklings whith is now, "just as strong as the others."

The couple plan to board the flock in their barn this winter, unless of course, they answer the call of southern migration. "We had a flock of geese land on the lake one day and they didn't show any interest in following them, so I think that they'll stay," said Mr. Dempsey.

"I enjoy the outdoors, hunting partridge and deer, although I may do most of my hunting with a camera this year," said Mel Dempsey of his outdoors interests.

He is not, however, a duck hunter. "No," he agreed, "it would be a little bit like shooting an old friend."

Soccer Struggle Monday

The struggle for the high school COSSA soccer championship Monday afternoon appears to be a wide- open affair.

The BCI Juniors with an unblemished 6-0 record will take on Bayside Juniors, while BCI's Seniors, also with a clean slate, will go against Centennial.

In the other two games Monday, Moira Jrs., hoping to repeat Tuesday's victory, lock horns with Centennial's Jrs. The senior game should prove an interesting match between Trenton (3-3-0) and Centre Hastings (4-1-1), two teams yet unmet.

Cavaliers Can't Find Baskets

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Cleveland Cavaliers learned first-hand Friday night that you can't win at basketball if you don't put the ball in the net.

The Cavaliers were limited to just four field goals and 10 points in the second period of their game against Boston and the unbeaten Celtics won 125-97.

The victory was the ninth straight for the Celtics and kept them 1½ games ahead of New York in the National Basketball Association's Atlantic Division. The Knicks, who have lost only one game this season, hung on for a 92-88 victory over Baltimore Bullets.

In other NBA action, Houston Rockets defeated Detroit Pistons 130-118, Chicago Bulls rapped Portland Trail Blazers 118-95, Golden State walloped Los Angeles Lakers 119-91 and Seattle SuperSonics topped Phoenix Suns 120-115.

In the American Basketball Association, New York Nets topped Denver Rockets 117-112, Dallas Chaparrals topped Virginia Squires 108-103, Carolina Cougars edged Kentucky Colonels 114-112, Indiana Pacers ripped Memphis Tams 118-102 and Utah Stars downed San Diego Conquistadors 122-107.

Boston led by only five points, 27-26, at the end of the first period but then the Celtics completely bottled up Cleveland's attack in the second period and by the time the teams had reached the half, the Celtics were up by 54-38.

Filion Hired

QUEBEC (CP) — Maurice Filion Friday agreed to coach Les Nordiques of the World Hockey Association for the remainder of the 1972-73 season.

Paul Racine, president of the Quebec City club, made the announcement at a news conference, but did not announce contract terms.

Filion was hired as chief scout by the WHA club on its formation, but has been behind the bench for five of the team's seven games so far this season.

He succeeds Maurice (Rocket) Richard, the National Hockey League star, who was forced to resign because of severe nervous strain after his first two games as coach.

Racine said Richard will continue his connection with the club as a member of the team's executive council. Under Richard's guidance, Les Nordiques recorded one win and one loss. The club now has 2-2 won-lost record.

Filion coached Quebec Remparts of the Quebec Major Junior A Hockey League two seasons ago when they won the Memorial Cup as the best junior team in Canada.

Jackie Buried In Brooklyn

NEW YORK (AP) — Jackie Robinson came back through ghetto streets to Brooklyn Friday, for burial in the borough where he attained baseball immortality 26 years ago as the first black man in the major leagues.

His funeral cortege left Riverside Church in upper Manhattan—and headed for Cypress Hills cemetery in Brooklyn, by way of Harlem and Bed-Stuyvesant, the city's two largest black enclaves.

Gov. Nelson Rockefeller headed a list of honorary pallbearers at services that drew several thousand to the Gothic church with its nearly 40-storey spire overlooking Grant's Tomb from 122nd St., and Riverside Drive.

Also on hand as pallbearers were team-mates of Robinson on the old Brooklyn Dodgers—"The Boys of Summer," Roger Kahn called them in his book of that name.

They gathered six times the acre of autumn to pay tribute to their old second baseman, whose skills on the diamond were matched by the courage he displayed in his lonely role as a trail-blazer across the color line of sports.

Amg the pallbearers was Pee Wee Reese, the white Southerner who played shortstop beside Robinson back in the 1940s and 1950s. Robinson recalled in his soon-to-be-published autobiography that he was being taunted by white members of the old Boston Braves team during infield practice.

"Pee Wee walked over," Robinson wrote, "and put his arm around my shoulders as if to say, 'This is my team-mate whether you like it or not.'"

Robinson's grave in Cypress Hill adjoins that of his son Jack Jr., killed last year at 24 in an auto accident after overcoming heroin addiction.

Thousands filed past the bier in advance of the funeral, first at a Harlem funeral parlor and later at Riverside Church.

From 122nd St., the cortege made its way to 125th St., and thence east through the heart of Harlem, with its population of 250,00 0.

Some 30 blocks uptown was the site of the old Polo Grounds, where Robinson so often notched his skills against those of the Dodgers' most heated rivals, the old New York Giants. Both teams have long since moved to the West Coast, and the Polo Grounds, beneath Coogan's Bluff, now is the site of apartments.

Latin American Censor Casting Large Shadow

NEW YORK (AP) — The censor is casting a longer shadow across Latin America.

Formal imposition of censorship, or other moves toward restraints on the presentation of news, have gained strength this year in major Latin-American countries. Both rightist and leftist governments are increasing their efforts to control what the people can read and hear.

The trend is shown in a survey taken by The Associated Press.

Brazil: Editors and broadcasters operate under what is called self-censorship.

When censors detect a subject they consider politically or morally offensive they tell editors not to divulge it.

Newsstands can be raided and publications seized.

There have been recent incidents of newspapers being confiscated and journalists charged under the severe National Security Law. Movies, plays and books are heavily censored.

Chile: There is no official press censorship, but officials have been increasing pressure on newspapermen.

A foreign ministry official warned an international news agency recently: "This is the last time we'll tolerate that sort of thing." He was complaining about an article that described shortages of food and other goods.

A week later a cabinet minister called in the reporter and complained about the same article, saying: "We won't allow this country's image abroad to be tarnished."

The going has been rough for people working for Chilean news media which oppose President Salvador Allende politically.

The Allende government in two years has filed 120 or more lawsuits against newspaper men or publications. Some persons have been jailed pending trial.

Argentina: The military government of Gen. Alejandro Lanusse incorporated press censorship into law Aug. 22. The government says that leftist guerrillas and others "notoriously dedicated to subversive activities" should not have access to the media.

Government spokesmen say they are at war with the half-dozen guerrilla groups operating since 1969 and the media should not be impartial.

Publication of guerrilla communiques, or any information that can be directly or indirectly traced to "terrorists or subversives," is punishable by six months to three years in jail.

The government closed the weekly news magazine Primera Plana and issued a warrant for the arrest of its director.

Primera Plana is accused of "inciting openly to subversion and deforming facts with the undisguised purpose of destroying the prestiges of the government and cabinet institutions."

It was owned by radical followers of the popular former president, Juan Peron, and sharply opposed the government.

Under press censorship, most of the Argentina public never learned that the terrorists who kidnapped a Dutch industrialist in early September were Montoneros, self-proclaimed followers of Peron.

The Argentine Publishers' Association, at its recent annual meeting, asked the government to cancel the new censorship law as unconstitutional.

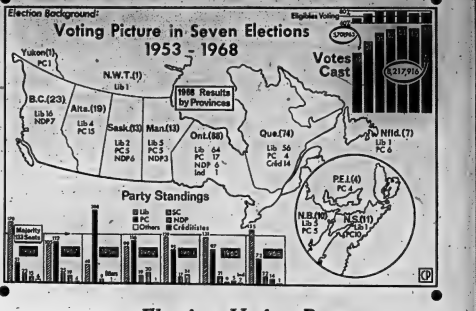
Uruguay: Since 1967, the Montevideo government has practised press censorship, giving itself special powers under a state of siege to restrict publication of news involving the Tupamaro urban guerrillas.

Almost all the news published inside Uruguay about the Tupamaros has been from government sources.

A state security law enacted this year provides jail sentences for reporters, editors, broadcasters or publishers responsible for news stories damaging to "Uruguayan prestige."

Paraguay: There is no formal censorship under President Alfredo Stroessner, but the media practises self-censorship.

The president's office frequently phones to say what should or should not be published. When par from correspondents for foreign news agencies try to transmit a controversial story, they are advised that the circuits are interrupted due to technical problems. The interruption can last for days.



Peru: The military government in Lima asserts the press is free to print anything so long as accuracy prevails. However, strong pressure for self-censorship exists through enforcement of the Freedom of the Press Statute decreed in 1970.

The government holds 51 per cent ownership of television stations, but TV reporters generally agree there's little if any pressure on news programs.

Panama: A government-appointed censor decides what will be published in the dailies.

Mexico: Government ownership of the newsprint monopoly has led to a form of self-censorship over the years.

Recently, however, papers have begun to criticize the government more openly. One or two are taking a fairly firm line of criticism. President Luis Echeverria said he welcomes that.

Young Coaches

LISTOWEL, Ont. (CP) — The coaching staff for Listowel's tyke hockey teams will be mainly teen-agers this year. "As much as I hate to say it," said Derek Nind, an organizer of the tyke league, "you just can't depend on most fathers to be there."

Bell Stolen

HURKETT, Ont. (CP) — The bell tower in the 55-year-old St. John Eudes Church is silent, after thieves made off with the bell that had called worshippers to the quiet structure since pioneers built it in 1917. The local minister said, "The bell was as sacred as the church itself."

Forgiveness

LONDON (CP) — Forgive and forget—but not right away. This seems to be the motto of Iris Humphreys, 55, who has agreed to marry Joseph Meichel, 45, next month when he finishes a five-year jail sentence for cheating her out of $10,000.

Play The Markets?

If you are less than satisfied with your present position in the market why not consider investing in the speculative land purchase as a new form of investment. An enterprise which is recently completed an issue of over the past six years has shown an increase of 20 to 25% in the 1000 percent over a five to ten-year investment period. About $1.00 per share. Now is the time to enter the stock market. If that is your story, if interested in long-term capital load investments phone 968-8156.

What the Stars Say

By JEANE DIXON

SUNDAY, OCT. 28

Aries (March 21-April 19): You're a strong influence for getting things together. Bring friends and relatives along as you explore hobby or sport interests.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Make it a pleasant day at home, with due thought for possible improvements, thrifty habits, reflection on causes of past relations.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Be up early and on the go—pursue creative projects, lively entertainments.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): You have enough outstanding details to cope with, so called as you can, without launching any new ventures.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): New contacts promise leverage on current and future obstacles. Be willing to explore an unaccustomed path.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Use today's relative quiet for problem-solving, extricating yourself from connections which yield poor results.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Make mind and body, particularly in the neighborhood rounds for a response to adversity or imposed limitations.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Beware pretending to know anything you don't, as this is easy for such games. Let financial speculation wait.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Family concerns require extra thought. No simple answers are available. Much of today's stress has been there for a long time.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Trouble-shooting is in order. Get backlog routine out of the way in preference to plunging into new enterprise projects.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Decisions on what to do take endless rounds of discussion in which you may not be comfortable. Keep trying!

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be on the alert for incomplete information, mixed figures. Note books, checklists are preferable to depending on memory.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Comment observers or mislead as much as it clarifies. Slide near your regular base and on your accustomed rounds.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Avoid final commitments, stall for time, seek verification of details. Evenings bring insight.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Circumstances have changed since you last checked on facts and figures. By tonight you have much to reconsider.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Today is good for wrangling, ongoing negotiations, questions, but not for commitments or closing discussions.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Things withstanding critical tests are unexpected. You must revise your information.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Conserve your time and strength by letting go the past and its inequities, ignore petty criticisms and annoyances.

Mother Tongues

LONDON (CP) — St. Teresa's maternity hospital has such a large international clientele that it's having to go multilingual in its nursing care. Teresa's has a room cards to its patients explaining medical procedures in a variety of languages ranging from French to Chinese. "Some patients were getting a bit nervous when they couldn't completely understand what we were telling them," said a hospital official.

To Your Good Health

One Should Know What One Eats

By G.C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: You characterize vegetable gum as fiber. Isn't it a carbohydrate substance." They are not so to everybody. I am seriously allergic to karaya gum. This was discovered in a routine allergy test.

I assume that since allergists test everybody for this gum, they have found somebody allergic to it. It made my life miserable for several years, causing sharp gas pains and cramps in the chest.

If you get severe! letters like this, would you mention it in a future column? The Teresa's has a department of health and welfare is at least moving briskly in the direction of specific food labelling, but those of us who suffer from hidden food additives need all the ammunition we can get.—Mrs. J.H., Ontario.

Since I live in the U.S., I hesitate to poke my nose into the affairs of the good neighbor to the south. It is not my intention that the following few remarks can apply on either side of the border.

First, it seems rudimentary to me (not to say alimentary!) that people have a right to know what they are eating. So I say, "Right on!"

I'm not, as you are doubtless aware by now, a fanatic on the topic of food additives. Some folks are, but I would say the majority is for granted that there's a reason for most additives, for freshness, keeping quality, moisture, texture. Be ver, color or whatever. And that, generally speaking, food processors don't use things they know to be harmful.

I don't think that, because some people are allergic to certain materials, they should be prohibited. If I took that position, then to be logical I would have to object to the use of anything that could cause allergies, including milk, milk, green peas, nuts, citrus fruits and crabmeat. And that's just a small part of the list.

But I gather that you and I have a basic fair agreement. Don't ban additives but do give the allergic individual a label so he knows what he is getting.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Two teachers in different schools have taught my children that blood is blue until it hits the air. Most of the other children I've agreed with me already I knew this. I had taught my children that blood is always some shade of red. Please help me clarify this.—Mrs. E.B.

Either the children misunderstood, or the teachers are confused, because you are correct. Blood is red.

As it leaves the heart, it is bright red; as it flows through the body nourishing the tissues and picking up impurities, the blood gives up oxygen, among other things, and picks up carbon dioxide and wastes.

By that time, instead of being bright red it has become somewhat darker—but still red.

The idea of blue blood (aside from the aristocratic figment of being a "blue blood") doubtless arises because on the surface of the skin veins look bluish. But I suspect that those veins is really a rather dusky red.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What is eosinophilic granuloma?—Mrs. L.L.

It's a tumor of bone containing a certain type of white blood cell called an eosinophile, so named because it stains readily with a dye called eosin.

The tumor is not malignant but it does cause local bone destruction.

Removal of the tumor constitutes a cure.

Israel Angry

Arabs Freed To Save Plane

Three Games Killers Let Go

MUNICH (AP) — The Israeli government expressed "astonishment and disappointment" today at West Germany's release of the three Munich Olympic terrorists to Arab guerrillas who threatened to blow up a German airliner with 20 other persons aboard, Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban asked for an explanation from Bonn.

Eban told the German ambassador to Israel, Jeuro von Puttkamer, Bonn's "surrender" to the Arab guerrillas "constitutes a weakening of the international stand against terror."

"My government does not accept the expression 'surrender,'" the ambassador told reporters after the meeting. "We are not in a state of war, and my government must act in accordance with the constitution and international law."

Israeli newspapers called Bonn's compliance with the hijackers' demands shameful dangerous and disgraceful. But a West German spokesman said Chancellor Willy Brandt's government felt the Israeli reproaches were "absolutely unjustified."

The Lufthansa Boeing 727 jet was expected in Frankfurt today after delivering the three freed terrorists and the two hijackers to Tripoli, the Libyan capital. The 13 other passengers and seven crew members were reported unharmed.

A senior Israeli cabinet minister called the West German government's capitulation to the hijackers a "dreadful, unforgivable act," and the Israeli air force raided four guerrilla bases within terror miles of Damascus this morning. But an Israeli military spokesman said the air attack was not necessarily in retaliation for the hijacking.

Two Arabs, who took over the Lufthansa jet early Sunday on a flight from Beirut to Ankara, Turkey and Frankfurt, demanded release of the three terrorists who survived the attack on the Israeli team at the Olympics and ordered the pilot to fly to Munich to pick them up.

The plane reached Munich but the hijackers refused to let it land, apparently because of the police cars, ambulance and other vehicles at the airport. They ordered the jet back to Zagreb and made the pilot circle until the Germans flew the three prisoners to Zagreb.

Robbers Hijack Jetliner

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — One airline employee was killed and another wounded in the hijacking Sunday of an Eastern Airlines jetliner from Texas to Cuba. The FBI identified two of the sky pirates as a former U.S. commerce department executive and his teen-age son.

The father and son named by the FBI were Charles Tuller, 44, and Bryce Tuller, 19. The FBI said the two also were wanted in connection with a Virginia bank holdup in which a police officer and a bank manager were killed by bandits last week.

The FBI identified a third hijacker as William Graham, 18. The fourth man was not named. All four skyjackers reclaimed in Cuba when the jetliner, carrying 23 passengers and a crew of seven, returned to Miami from Havana.

A burst of shots as the airliner was commandeered at Houston early Sunday took the life of an Eastern ticket agent, Stan Hubbard, 36, of Humble, Tex.

Planes Hit Guerrillas

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israeli planes bombed and rocked four Arab guerrilla bases in Syria today, all within a seven-mile radius of Damascus, the Israeli military command announced.

The air raids came as Israel seethed with anger over the release of the Munich Olympic terrorists, flown to safety in Libya Sunday night with Arab hijackers.

Millhaven Guards Remain on Job

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Guards at Millhaven penitentiary decided Sunday to remain at work pending the outcome of negotiations between six of their number and Paul Faguy, commissioner of penitentiaries.

A spokesman for the guards said after a meeting of more than 200 members of the Public Service Alliance that if the talks, aimed at improving security and working conditions at the institution, are not successful, the guards may begin booking-off sick again.

This action was taken last week, leaving as few as 15 men on duty to guard the penitentiary's 365 prisoners.

The guards have complained that the maximum-security institution is poorly designed and built, inept ly administered and easy to escape from.

Russia Changing Rules

JERUSALEM (Reuters) — A group of Jews given exit permits to emigrate from the Soviet Union have been told to leave by Nov. 5, a Jewish scientist in Moscow told Israeli radio in a telephone interview Saturday. Dr. Daniel Raginsky was quoted as saying Soviet authorities planned to introduce new procedures for granting exit permits Nov. 5.

Escapee Caught

HAMILTON (CP) — A Hamilton youth, who escaped two weeks ago from Warkworth penitentiary near Peterborough, Ont., was captured by police here Saturday night. Dietmar Holzer, 18, has been charged with carrying a concealed weapon, possession of a weapon or imitation, dangerous and careless driving and car theft.

Naval Action Curtailed

SAIGON (AP) The U.S. 7th Fleet has drastically curtailed its naval operations against North Vietnam and withdrawn its cruisers and destroyers well below the 20th parallel in a move to improve the climate for ceasefire negotiations, informants said today.

All naval bombardment of the coast above the 20th parallel has been ended, and cruiser and destroyer strikes against the rest of the North Vitnamese coast have been limited, it was learned.

The Oldtimer--And The Newcomers

With franchise age lowered to 18, today's election brought out a contrast in generations at the polls in Quinte ridings. Casting ballot in Prince Edward - Hastings at Hastings Manor for senior citizens, on Belleville's outskirts, was 91-year-old Charles London, (right), Trenton native who says he's voted in every election since the 1900s. Representing youth in Hastings, Colleen Jacques, 18, leaves ballot booth as fellow Ontario School for the Deaf student Stephen Beattie, 19, waits to vote for first time.

Election Day Weather Ideal in Quinte Region

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Crisp and sunny as a campaigning candidate's greeting, federal election day 1972 dawned as ideal voting weather in the Quinte ridings.

Its influence on the outcome may only be guessed at until voting volume is revealed after the polls close tonight at 7 p.m.

Up to noon the volume patterns of early-morning voters was not easy to discern in the Quinte constituencies of Hastings and Prince Edward-Hastings.

Elsewhere, a Canadian Press survey showed mixed response in early voting as the polls opened in the Atlantic provinces. In Newfoundland, half an hour, in time over the rest of the Maritimes — and where the first polls opened — voting was brisk. In Nova Scotia, voting was reported heavy in Halifax, less in Sydney.

In the Quinte area the early polling picture was blurred.

In Prince Edward-Hastings, the office of constituency returning officer Grace Radcliffe said there wasn't "any idea" how the early-day vote compared with the 1968 campaign, since deputy returning officers in the riding's 198 polls were busy with election processes and were not being queried on voting comparisons.

In Hastings, returning officer Reg Dunham said he had checked only three of the riding's 190 polls and reports indicated a light early vote.

"But I imagine the voters will get out tonight," he added.

Whatever else went awry during the complexities of conduct for Quinte-area candidates, the least predictable element of all — weather — came through reliably on the most critical day of the two-month campaign.

Mr. Dunham described it as "ideal for voting."

The duty forecaster at Canadian Forces Base was predicting such weather would continue through the day — sunny with cloud and cool temperatures.

The six Quinte candidates—Incumbent Progressive Conservative George Hees, Liberal George Cunningham and Richard Lunn, New Democratic Party in Prince Edward - Hastings: Progressive Conservative Jack Ellis, Liberal Frank Folwell and Elridge Brethour, NDP in Hastings — were among 1,117 candidates counted across Canada by The Canadian Press awaiting tonight's electorate verdict.

The travel-weary party leaders, their throats sera chy from coast-to-coast arguments, all summed up their cases Saturday and Canadians pondered their decisions until the polls opened at 9 a.m. local time today. The 12,750,886 eligible voters were to have until 7 p.m. local time to deposit their ballots in the 29th Canadian general election.

All parties appeared edgy about the outcome with the various pre-election public opinion polls showing huge numbers of undecided voters whose decisions couldn't be forecast. The polls, carried out by a variety of organizations, invariably showed the Liberals in front, but in some cases the margin wasn't enough to guarantee anything.

At dissolution, the Liberals held 147 Commons seats, the Conservatives 84, NDP 29, Social Credit 15 and Independent 2. There were four vacancies.

First Time Since 1842 Bars Open Voting Day

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Yes, you can get a drink tonight after polls close at 7 pm.

"Since there have been elections there have been 'Closed' signs above tavern doors," said a local proprietor.

Relaxed legislation, coming after the last federal election of '68, makes the election the first to be a "wet" one.

"Wet" elections in 1842 brought an end to open bars for Hastings County when troops had to be brought by boat from Kingston to handle sword-wielding, gun toting voters who were a little too wet and attempting to obstruct the voting process.

In those days Belleville had the only polling booth for the county and it remained open for six days.

Candidates would ply voters with liquor to assure the vote went in the right direction.

Today, after prohibition, legislation came closing the bars.

Agnew Sees Peace Delay

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice - President Spiro Agnew says the United States won't be ready to sign a Vietnam peace agreement by Tuesday, but doesn't think this will prevent an agreement "in due course."

"There is no question about the principal parts of the agreement," Agnew said Sunday. However, he added there "are just a few matters to be made 'crystal clear' between the parties before it can be made final."

South Vietnam's foreign minister, Tran Van Lam, said today his government won't sign until North Vietnam withdraws its troops from the South and until there is agreement on the exact role of a proposed national council of reconciliation and concord which is supposed to maintain a ceasefire and supervise elections.

A tentative peace agreement to end the long war was worked out in Paris in negotiations between presidential adviser Henry Kissinger and North Vietnamese emgoys. North Vietnam is demanding that it be signed in Paris on Tuesday, Her agreed on that date.

The proposed agreement does not provide for withdrawal of North Vietnamese troops from the South, although U.S. forces would be withdrawn within 60 days after the agreement is signed, and prisoners in locatinngs the United States confinedhins would be released in the same 60-day period.

Kissinger has said one additional negotiating session of three or four days will be required to work out a few details, before the agreement can be signed.

A statement today by Hanoi's official newspaper said the United States has only "two choices," to sign the agreement worked out in Paris, or face intensified war. Viet Cong forces have mounted widespread new attacks throughout the South in recent days.

25 Killed As Trains Collide

CHICAGO (AP) — At least 25 persons were killed during the morning rush hour today in the head-on collision of two suburban Illinois Central Gulf Railroad commuter trains on Chicago's South Side, authorities reported. More than 100 other persons were injured, some seriously.

Officials fear the death toll may rise as more than 125 firemen work to reach commuters, still trapped in the wreckage. Yet hospitals reported many of the injured were only "shaken up."

The injured were being taken to two local hospitals—Mercy and Michael Reese—which immediately sent out disaster calls for doctors and technicians from all over the city. The collision occurred at about 7:45 a.m. only two blocks from Michael Reese Hospital.

Eight Die In Car Crash

ST. BASILE le GRAND, Que. (CP) — Eight persons were killed and another eight injured in a three-car accident near this town 15 miles east of Montreal Sunday.

The eight died in a two-car, head-on collision.

Seconds after the pile-up, a third car swerved to avoid the wreckage and went into a nearby field.

Five persons were injured in the first collision, three more in the second accident.

Seven IRA Guerrillas Flee Military Prison

DUBLIN (Reuter) — Police hunted today for seven Irish Republican Army guerrillas who escaped Sunday night from a top security detention centre after digging a tunnel from a cell to the prison compound.

The seven were all members of the militant Provisional wing of the IRA, and four of them came from Northern Ireland where the IRA is fighting to end the province's ties with Britain.

They escaped from the Curragh military detention centre 30 miles west of here, where some 40 members of the IRA, a banned organization in the Irish republic as well as in the North, are being held.

The escape came as the IRA's legal political wing, the Sinn Fein ("Ourselves alone") was cooling a two-day conference in Dublin to discuss future tactics in its struggle to unite the two halves of Ireland.

The seven escapees overpowered a military policeman as he came after emerging from their tunnel, sealed a 15-foot wall and were driven off in vehicles that had been waiting for them outside. Four others who tried to get away with them were caught.

Time for Children

Young Karim Hajiani beams with delight in the arms of James Swaisey as Amina Mawani jokes with the toddler. To the right is Anis Mawani holding a pensive Sanjii Manku.

Ugandans Are Settling In

Balbir Manku has a job.

The first of the Ugandan Asians to settle in the Quinte area begins work today as an accountant for a Belleville firm.

James Staveley, assisting the new arrivals for Canada Manpower, says Mr. Manku's success in securing employment has bolstered the confidence of the other Asians. There are now a total of 28 adults and children in the area.

The new Canadians were guests Saturday at a reception given for them at the Belleville Family YMCA by the Quinte Indo - Pakistani community.

There were warm words of welcome from the local Asians and gifts were given to the host families.

Several Ugandan Asians commended the way Canada has coped with the processing of immigrants out of Kampala. Mr. Manku spoke of the efficient and thoughtful approach to the evacuation taken by the Canadian team in the Ugandan capital.

"I don't think we had seen anything quite like them before.

Well, the new families find local shopping facilities adequate for their needs and are favorably impressed with the road system.

As far as weather is concerned some feel it will be one of the few things they may miss occasionally about Uganda. However, the children, most of whom have never seen snow, are awaiting the first snowfall with great anticipation.

Among the recent arrivals are a competent fleet mechanic, a teacher who was head of a science department, secretaries, former merchants and wholesalers. All are distinguished by their fluent English and a common desire to be successful in their new careers.

Rome Revisited During Banquet

A group of Quinte Secondary School students enjoyed a brief sojourn in the classical period of Roman history Saturday night as they held their third Latin banquet.

The theme of the banquet was the Satyricon of a poet by Julius Caesar (Latin teacher John Cernic) in honor of one of his generals, Paulus Conglianus. The guests were assorted aristocrats (grade 12 and 13 students) in elegant togas and stolas of the period. Slaves (grade 10 and 11 students) dressed in slave tunics served, working in three shifts to permit each slave to participate in part of the festivities.

Other head table guests were Principal John Hayman in robe role of high priest, vice principal Robert Graham as praetor and language department head Ralph Correy as consul.

Guests reclined on couches and cushions at specially set up tables to eat the three meat dishes — a whole trout, chicken and a hole ripple pigiet. Candlelight was the only illumination.

The banquet was a key word at the banquet. Tables were covered with elaborate floral and flower arrangements, candalabra, and wine (fruit juice) coolers.

Murals, depicting the grandeur of Rome at its height 2,000 years ago covered the walls. One, of the Circus Maximus, was 10 by 30 feet in size and represented 54 hours of work by the students.

Included in the entertainment was wrestling, quarter stave fighting, dancing by girls from the eastern part of the Roman Empire and a skit entitled the Golden Apple, a parody on the tale of the Golden Apple.

Latin Luxury

The lost world of classical Rome was recreated Saturday night at Quinte Secondary School as Latin students participated in a Roman banquet. Among he head table dignitaries who lolled on cushions, Remus style, throughout the feast were Latin teacher John Cernic as Julius Caesar, Miss Ada Adams as a roving matron and Quinte vice principal Robert Graham as praetor.

PUT SOME LIGHT ON THE SUBJECT

Never, never, take ANY medicine in the dark! — Always turn on a light so you can see what you're doing and check to make sure that you're taking the right medication. A lot of medicine bottles are similar in design and can be easily interchanged with one another if you're not paying attention to what you're doing.

It never makes sense to take unnecessary chances and avoidable risks. In fact, it's downright foolish! Today's drugs are potent compounds, and accidentally taking the wrong one instead of the right one can lead to serious — and perhaps fatal — consequences. You can't be too careful when it comes to using medicines, and we hope you will exercise the necessary precautions.

Campaign A Long One In Prince Edward-Hastings

By KENNETH SMITH
Staff Reporter

The race between George Hees and George Cunningham didn't start with the calling of the election two months ago. The campaign has been going on since Canada went to the polls the last time in June '68.

Cunningham became Liberal standardbearer only moments before the Trudeaumania sweep four years ago and waged the campaign as effectual unknown.

Hees, too was not as familiar then as now but had a national reputation going for him.

Doug Whitley, one of the Conservative organizers, says Hees, a former trade and commerce minister, has met the challenge of making himself known in a personal way to his constituents.

"He has been active in community events throughout the riding — in constant attendance at civic functions," Whitley concludes.

Richard Lunn of the New Democrats, who makes his home at RR 2 Hillier, has been well with the makeyourself - known problem, too, on a less formal basis.

The articulate journalism instructor at Toronto's Ryerson Polytechnical Institute has knocked on thousands of doors throughout the riding, while still putting in his hours in the Ryerson lecture theatres.

While pundits credit the NDP with its most attention-grabbing campaign in Canadian electoral history, Lunn has helped to develop solid foundations for the party in the sprawling Prince Edward-Hastings riding. His signs vie for attention with those of other candidates even in more out - of - the - way areas like Wangoma Point on Prince Edward's southeast shore.

Hugh O'Neil, campaign manager for Cunningham, says things have really changed that Cunningham, with four years of leg-work behind him coupled with an active campaign, is well known and well received.

Doug Whitley expresses modest confidence in support from the rural areas but is less certain about the outcome in Trenton and Middleton Park.

What about the youth vote: Cunningham, a Trenton High School teacher, has considerable support at THS and a large number of committed first - time voters.

The New Democrats feel they have a good chance with the youth vote but then so do the PCs. Whitley says there are strong Young Progressive Conservative organizations in Prince Edward and in Campbellford.

The Liberals, according to O'Neil, are fairly balanced in the riding than any time before. "More people have confidence in our campaign and have contributed money to support it."

There were more Liberal advertisements, more radio spots and then there were the visits of cabine: ministers and the visits of the Prime Minister himself, to Picton last fall and to Trenton last Friday.

However, Doug Whitley, feels Liberals may have overestimated the impact of Trudeau's most recent trip. He says there were more PCs along Trenton's Dundas West carrying Hees signs than there were banner - waving Liberals.

With extensive campaigning by all three candidates, a host of young workers and a sound roster of candidates, the election today in Prince Edward-Hastings is a race to be watched.

New Voters Create A Mystery

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

It's been called a quiet campaign.

But there's reason for lively interest in tuesday's federal election results in Hastings.

For instance:

The contest is without an incumbent; and the number of new voters are almost triple the victory edge of the winner in 1968.

Then there's Belleville.

The city's urban electorate represents about 55 per cent of the total vote in Hastings riding. The unrevised enumeration total was 22,934 compared with 18,148 in the riding's rural polls.

So slim a margin may be insufficient to assure the candidate who wins the Belleville block of total victory.

Nonetheless, it's wide enough and the vote to tightly concentrated—to make it a possible key factor.

Not that political party organizers readily admit to it.

"The whole riding is the key," says Gerry Brennan, who is managing Progressive Conservative Jack Ellis' campaign in the city.

Fothwell can't be placed on any one area in the constituency, he says.

Ian Reilly, Belleville New Democratic Party organizer—working on behalf of party banner - bearer Deirdre Boyce — agrees the city vote could be a key sector.

"I'd say the candidate who does best in Belleville has the best chance of winning," he says — then adds the qualification: "But it's not an impossibility to win Belleville and still lose the riding.

In an election in which contrasted with previous campaigns — public response appears low-key, the city may have added an extra dash of enigma.

Despite the presence of more than 4,000 new voters, advance polls — for voters out of town election day — had a Bellevillean balloting than in the 1968 election: 423 compared to 621.

Rural polls held steady — 229 east advance votes against 225 in 1968.

Whether this has any significance for today's turnout at the city polls cannot be defined.

"It's either apathy, or people are not going away. And students can only be gone," says Mr. Reilly. "A lot of strange things are happening in this election. It's so quiet it's hard to know.

"I wouldn't want to predict as does the Liberal party organizer.

Mr. Brennan says; however, there is no apathy.

And, as coincidental aside to the urban factor, two of the candidates in Hastings — Jack Ellis and Frank Fothwell are former mayors of the city.

But for all Hastings voters this election is seasoned with an added dash of expectancy.

Retirement from parliamentary politics last month of Lou Grills, who held the seat almost continuously for the Conservatives from 1957 during which it was redistributed from the old Hastings South area — makes this election a whole new ballot game for local political parties.

Mr. Ellis, his party successor, with a background in local government politics as councillor and mayor of Belleville in the late 1960s, is in the national arena for the first time.

Mr. Fothwell, "stepped up from the Belleville mayoralty in the late 1940s to become member of parliament for Hastings South — until his defeat by Mr. Grills.

Eastern Riding Issues Clear Cut

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

A. Douglas Alkenbrack, outspoken Progressive Conservative candidate for the riding of Frontenac-Lennox and Addington, is pinning his election hopes on his stand on bilingualism and his criticism of conditions at the Millhaven maximum security prison in the south part of the riding.

The fiery PC candidate has been a House of Commons member since 1962 when he was elected to the former Prince Edward - Lennox riding. He won his present riding for the Stanfield party in 1968 when he obtained a 1,948 vote plurality, defeating three other candidates, one of them a former Conservative running as an Independent.

This time around, Mr. Alkenbrack is facing only two opponents — Liberal Peter MacKinnon, a Bath area farmer, and a New Democratic Party candidate Mrs. Mary Lloyd-Jones of Sydenham.

Mr. Alkenbrack has been loud in his criticism of the Liberal party's methods of introducing bilingualism into the federal civil service.

And during the election campaign he has been extremely critical of prison conditions and lack of inmate discipline.

At a recent all-candidates meeting Mr. Alkenbrack produced what he claimed was a secret report on the Millhaven prison where 14 inmates escaped last summer.

But Liberal Peter MacKinnon says the document contained only information known by community members for months and is a ploy to publishing new.

This is the first attempt at federal politics for Mr. MacKinnon but he has lengthy experience in agriculture organizations and in community service.

New Democratic Party candidate Mrs. Lloyd-Jones has a varied background and is a former member and deputy reeve of Loughborough township council on which she served for six years.

Listed as a volunteer and social worker, Mrs. Lloyd-Jones and her husband also operate a drug store at Sydenham. It is her first attempt at federal politics but last year she was the NDP candidate for Kingston and the Islands in the provincial election.

Woman Injured

MOUNTAIN VIEW (Staff)— A Belleville woman, Riverta Landing on 212 Farley Ave., was taken to Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital Saturday afternoon following a one-car collision at Mountain View. She was treated for broken ribs after her car struck a hydro pole. Damage to the vehicle was estimated at $500 by investigating Constable Donald Watt of the Picton Detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police.

Grills Still on Job

His final pay cheque as a parliamentarian was in the mail from Ottawa as Lee Grills set out for his neighborhood poll this morning.

For the first time in seven federal elections he wasn't voting for himself.

And his ballot may, or may not, help elect his successor as Member of Parliament for Hastings.

But whatever the outcome of tonight's poll in the Belleville - area seat he held 12 years for the Progressive Conservatives, he figures his parliamentary chores won't end for about another 10 days.

"Between tonight's victory and the formal swearing-in to office of the new Hastings MP, Mr. Grills says he'll have an eye on tap to help some of his old constituents" — who have been since today's federal vote was called.

In fact, he has plans to return to his old Parliament buildings' office, maybe by tomorrow.

For the burly 58-year-old Mr. Grills — whose retirement threw the Hastings election results wide open — there is no sense of clinging to the illusion of office after the reality has departed. It's just being practical, he indicates.

Although no longer legally an MP since nominations — to run down his Ottawa office — a period in which he'll still have a secretary on duty and take any calls from his one-time constituents.

Such calls, he figures as he readies at his East Bridge St. home for the polling station shortly after it opened at 8 a.m. have been running about 300 a month. It's a volume which partially underlines the mounting pressure on MPs since he first won a federal election in 1957.

Damage $2,500 In Accidents

Damage to the car totalled $1,500. There were no passengers.

Earlier in the day, Thomas Norman McLeod, 21, of Ottawa, escaped injuries when he lost control of his 1972 Plymouth while southbound on Highway 37 just above Tweed.

Damage to his car was $1,000.

Community Initiatives

Belleville Rotary Club, already in the community's debt for such enterprises as the Science Fair and Hobby Show, the Music Festival and exchange programs for overseas students, is currently completing plans for a Skatathon this winter.

Next year will see yet another venture — establishment of a youth concert band. Behind this initiative is Doug Aselstine and the word is that applications will be circulated throughout the city shortly.

This is an excellent prospect. As an extension of this and an idea for continued effort in this direction, we wonder if a youth choir might be formed as well. Both band and choir could accomplish much for the city, with performances locally and farther afield. They could bring together the best of the excellent talent in the community, as exemplified by past performances in the music festival.

Meanwhile in Trenton we observe another fine achievement by the community that has already achieved distinction with its Sing-Out group. The high school's newly-formed cheerleading team has taken top honors in the Ontario Soccer Tournament cheerleading championships. Fifteen or so strong, these pretty girls have done a fine job.

Now, if only in addition to cheerleading we could see more participation in competitive sports by the girls in our high schools. Cheerleading is fine — but is it enough?

How about table tennis for example? We see that Canada's top woman player, Violet Neukaditis is on a country-wide tour and she was in Kingston recently for exhibition play and coaching in the schools. It seems incredible to learn that a game which for years has been so popular in other parts of the world, from Britain to eastern Europe to China to Australia and New Zealand is only now beginning to have some impact in this country — thanks in large measure to the recent "ping-pong" diplomacy between Canadians, Americans and Chinese.

Health Costs

Ontario Health Minister Richard Potter's warning about health costs should be the concern of every citizen. He says ways must be found to reduce the "staggering" cost of providing health care in the province.

But for the immediate future — and for the action that must be taken to effect cost reductions — we must look to the new health councils that are being established, as well as to hospital administrators.

Can we wait, though, until the health council is functioning adequately? As of now there are only five in the province — at Ottawa, Sudbury, Hamilton, Thunder Bay and the Niagara region — and Dr. Potter has admitted it may take two or three years for the system to be extended throughout the province.

Thus for the moment we cannot rely altogether on the new councils. That leaves us with local boards, administrators — and hopefully the people in public. There must be more emphasis on the kind of fitness programs mentioned recently by Prime Minister Trudeau. We are told that even a saving of two per cent in the nation's health heart disease would represent a saving of about $34 million. But unless Governments — and especially individuals — take seriously the warnings of doctors regarding lack of exercise, the sedentary life, and the effects of smoking, there will be no such saving. Instead it is likely we shall see an even higher health bill in the years ahead.

If the province and the federal government really mean business and want to promote a healthier population then it will indeed encourage the necessary programs, including, we suggest, anti-smoking programs in the schools. Indeed we already have a good example with the sports and fitness programs being offered at Queen Victoria School's community program, not to mention the "Y" and other groups.

Another factor regarding cost which is worrisome is Dr. Potter's statement that government attempts to stem rising costs by experimental projects such as home care programs and self-care units (like the Queen's self-care unit on Dundas Street) have so far merely resulted in these becoming additional services rather than a substitute for costly active-treatment beds.

Ways "must be found," Dr. Potter says, to curb health costs. We believe there is scope for such measures in the areas we have mentioned.

PCs Most Affected

Election Failed to Attract Many New Candidates

By FARMER TISSINGTON
From The Intelligencer's
Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Most of the major disappointments of the election campaign was the failure of all parties to attract any great number of outstanding new warriors to the political battle. True, there were some outstanding men and women who sought election for the first time in all the parties, but nothing like the number hoped for to give a needed new, fresh look to an often jaded political scene.

In fact, some of the brighter new candidates who won successes in 1968 pulled out of this contest deciding, for a variety of personal reasons, to return to private life.

At one time it was contended that politics at the national level failed to attract enough high calibre people because the financial rewards were not great enough. Since that excuse was made parliament saw fit to increase the salaries of MPs substantially and to protect them with what must be one of the most generous pension plans in existence. Even this was not enough to attract large numbers of younger, intelligent people who made a success of their own vocations and who obviously have a worthwhile contribution to make to public life.

Perhaps this failure is most noticeable in the Progressive Conservative party which seemed to be the only possible alternative to the ruling Liberals after Oct. 30. Granted, Tory hopes were bolstered by the entry of people like Claude Wagner in Quebec, Allan Lawrence in Ontario, Peter Bawden and Bert Hargrave in Alberta and John McDonald in British Columbia, to name a few. But the party as represented in the Commons in the last Parliament was short of front bench and cabinet material and was badly in need of a massive transfusion of new minds and personalities.

In too many instances the party had to settle for candidates who were not very well known in their ridings and whose careers and personalities have not exactly earned national or even regional attention. In the case of Quebec one observer familiar with that province contended that, on the average, the Tory candidates in this election were weaker than in 1968.

While saying this it is only fair to note that sometimes the most effective members of Parliament were virtual unknowns before entering the Commons. Conversely, some of the most successful business and professional people can turn out to be political misfits, and only too happy to return to their own more familiar world after one go-round in Ottawa.

Readers may not be aware that several thousands of dollars in extra pay ride on the outcome of the general election for four candidates. These special payments, and above the normal salary of an MP or of a cabinet minister, go to the leaders of the parties.

The prime minister receives an extra $25,000 annually plus $2,000 for a car allowance in addition to his $18,000 plus $8,000 tax free expense allowance as an MP and the $15,000 as a cabinet minister. Whoever winds up as the leader of the party with the second largest number of seats becomes the leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition and is entitled to an extra $15,000 plus $2,000 tax free allowance to compensate for the additional work and expense the position entails.

Leaders of the other opposition parties are given bonuses of $4,000 annually each but only if their party elects 12 or more MPs. In the last parliament, Social Credit leader Real Caouette was just comfortably under the wire as there were 15 members of his party in office, one more than the required number to qualify the leader for the extra pay.

Another Pay Raise May Be on MPPs' Minds

By DON O'HEARN
from The Intelligencer's
Queen's Park Bureau

Next item of business — a raise in pay?

With the federal election out of the way, it will be back to the old routine here.

Which means there will be a session sitting soon, probably in the next few weeks.

(Politically this year time has passed quickly. Actually it is four months since the last session broke off. It hardly seems so.)

And which, in turn, means a good many members will be thinking of their pocket-books.

It would be unfair to say this will be the only thing on their minds, of course.

A good number of the private members have been working hard on select committees during the summer break, and, as has been mentioned here before, the members of this particular legislature generally take up as quite a responsible group.

But it now has become almost standard practice that there is an increase in members' indemnities at the second sitting of a new legislature.

This will be that second sitting.

And the members would be less than human if they weren't looking for their raise and wondering how much it will be.

Actually they could end up a bit disappointed.

They certainly will. (If only because of that first rule of politics that everything always goes up and nothing ever comes down.)

But they may not get it as soon as they expect.

For a new factor has been added to the process of indemnity boosting.

This is the committee of inquiry appointed last June to study the role of the members of the legislature.

The government almost certainly won't act on an increase until it has the recommendations of this committee (Dalton Bales and Farquhar Oliver).

And the committee has not been tied down to any firm timetable.

When he announced the appointment of the group, Premier Davis hoped it would report within a year and certainly withinsome life of the legislature. That was all.

So there is no compulsion for it to make a recommendation now.

However the committee has been buddling with groups of members the last few months. One of the prime matters it has been discussing has been remuneration.

And is probably can make an interim recommendation now. In fact may have already done so.

'Cambridge' Won Over Scots Name In Gali-Preston-Hespeler Ballot

Kitchener-Waterloo Record

Between the two famous English universities, Oxford and Cambridge, the straight-line distance is 60 miles. Here in Canada, despite our talk about our big distances in every land but such the tight little island, we will not the two much closer together.

As one result of the vote to choose a name for the new city which is to merge Gali, Preston and Hespeler, we are to have a city named Cambridge. From its western city limits to the eastern limits of Oxford county will be only five miles. An athletic student on a bicycle will be able to be in both Oxford and Cambridge within 15 minutes.

It is a minor surprise that the voters, faced with a choice between a Scottish name, Blair, and English names, Cambridge, went against the Scottish origins of the pioneers of the area and chose the English name. They lock the River Clam which flows through the English university city, but a city without the Grand River will always have plenty of justification for the "bridge" part of its name.

It is more surprising that they did not bother to retain the name. A total of 23,301 ballots were cast for the three candidates in the unsyndicated poll won by Mayor, Claudette Miller of Preston. Everyone entitled to vote for mayor was also entitled to vote for a city name, but the 9,229 ballots counted for Blair added to the 7,328 for Cambridge come to only 21,627.

At least 1,674 people who voted for a mayor did not bother to vote for a name or spoiled their ballots. Can we guess that there were that many die-hards who, if they could not keep Galt as a name, didn't care what the name would be?

Waterloo County's only previous vote on a name change was almost completely ignored by the voters. On June 28, 1916, the voters in Berlin were eligible to cast a ballot for one of seven names to replace the German name. Only 822 dignified the election, 346 voting for the name Kitchener, and the result was greeted with silence by the community.

The wartime vote, as it was reported by the press was the result of "strong prejudice created throughout the British Empire against the name Berlin and all that name implies."

Fortunately, the bitterness an viciousness of that vote was missing in Waterloo South.

Letters to the Editor And One Who Speaks Up

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I have been an Intelligencer reader for some time. I have watched and read Mr. Hockley's letters to the Editor as well as those of the few others who write in.

While I do not always agree with his views, I must give him credit for standing up and saying what he thinks.

It should be remembered that Mr. Don Clements, together with Mr. Ray Corbett and many others worked very hard to promote the development of the Bowl-A-Mat Lanes on Bell's Hill, despite the resistance of other vested interests in Belleville. The Mall benefits the people. Thank you, Mr. Hockley and the many others.

I think it would be fair to say that the residents of this area, Belleville and its environs) care enough to examine events and make their views known by writing in the Editor.

I can only believe that the vast majority of our citizens could not care less about most things, except critical things, who have a contribution to make. We can only be critical unless one is ready to make positive and constructive suggestions for improvement. Mr. Hockley constantly offers such suggestions.

I would also like to point out that Mr. Hockley is unemployed and has considerable time on his hands while Mall Bowling Alley," they (The UIC) could provide him along with many others. It is interesting that the majority of those who are supporting the re-election of the Liberal Government — the same Government which laid him off.

Widespread Unrest

Dr. Allende's Marxist Experiment on Rocks in Chile

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

In Chile, the world's first elected national Marxist government is in deep trouble. The same middle class which helped much to vote in Marxist President Dr. Salvador Allende Gossens in September, 1970, now is boycotting, striking against and passively resisting Allende' erratic-bound regime.

Dr. Allende's extremist partners in his coalition, the Socialists and Communists are selling him the only kind of Marxist government which can work in an authoritarian one.

However Chile has been one of Latin America's few working democracies and Dr. Allende fears the spectre of civil war would become a harsh reality if he tried to circumvent the Chilean Congress.

The Christian Democratic opposition party and their allies control Congress where the next congressional elections will not take place until March, 1973.

Dr. Allende's impatient Communists and Castroite supporters want a so-called "Assembly of the People," a uni-cameral body made up of elected members. Such an experiment would mean the end of Chilean democracy.

Even if he hasn't been able to win elected Marxist political methods, President Allende has introduced all kinds of economic tests. The predictable result has been a dwindling in foreign trade, severe inflation in a country long inflation-bound, food shortages, rationing of gas and fuel oil as gas station attendants join truck drivers in a nationwide strike.

In short, electric Marxism, brought to power with only 40 per cent of the Chilean popular vote in 1970, isn't working. Foreign critics of Dr. Allende blame it on his nationalization policies. These have resulted in the complete takeover of all new industries beginning with the vital copper mines. Chile's main source of income and extending to banks, pulp and paper mills, chain stores, auto plants and farms.

The fact is Chile was highly socialized before Allende's 1970 victory. Former Christian Democratic president Eduardo Frei had introduced a gradualistic legislation to nationalize the copper mines by the mid-1970s, but with a cash compensation formula for the big U.S. owned companies.

Much of Chile's economic development had been conducted through CORFO, the Chilean State Development Corporation, founded in 1939 and absorbed into the Allende administration to do more of the same thing. However CORFO today is more concerned with persuading Communist-bloc industrial countries to participate in the Chilean economy.

The big question mark in Allende's labor, food and economic troubles is the Chilean Army. It has almost never intervened in the electoral process—a unique phenomenon in a continent where the army almost always intervenes when civilian governments lose control.

On the other hand, the Chilean Armed Forces have always supported each constitutionally-elected president—including Dr. Allende. And they are doing so now in Santiago and the stormy Chilean civil provinces, aiding police and militia in arresting small scale acts of violence by trucker strikers and boycotters.

Dr. Allende, the once high-living, bon vivant surgeon, who is in many ways so classically bourgeois, now is accusing "the petty bourgeois" of trying to sabotage his regime based on the "values of the future."

Petty bourgeois are of course the classic opponents of Marxism, the small land and property holders who resist change, cling to what the capitalistic system has given them.

The fact is President knows it was enough of these who felt he would bring change who elected him. He can talk tough, but not yet act tough.

That threat of outbreak-of-civil war is all-inhibiting for him.

Dog Show Is Growing

FRANKFORD — For three days this past weekend, Frankford Community Gardens was a virtual hive of four-legged and two - legged activity. For this, the third year of Belleville and District Kennel Club championship dog show, marks a period of serious change for the club.

At first, club spokesman Jim Tinlin said, the show and competitive meet was held in Belleville's Ben Bleeker Hall. However, so enthusiastic was the shoulder-to-shoulder response, that organizers had to turn their thoughts to a larger centre.

The arena here was chosen but Mr. Tinlin, of RR1, Codrington, says the slightly less than 1,400 entries this weekend illustrates his point that "the Frankford Community Gardens may soon be too small for our needs." He says the future sports centre proposed by the Belleville Yardmen may be an answer to their requirements.

Dogs of every size and description were on hand for obedience, grooming, breed and poise trials. There were entrants from across the province, plus those from several U.S. states.

Shaggy sheep dogs shared floor space with slightly less hairy bulldogs, hounds and Utilhaulsean Irish Wolfhounds and Great Danes looked down from their lofty heights on tiny, three to four-inch high Japanese Shih Tzus and Yorkshire Terriers, and Bassett Hounds took in the whole proceedings with their usual sad-eyed visages.

The sounds and odors common to such displays were much in evidence, and added to the general over all atmosphere as owners primped and curried their purebred charges, ready for the judge's careful scrutiny and gentle touch.

Not only did entrants come from afar, but so did many judges. Mrs. Pat Randall came from Victoria, BC and Alva Rosenburg, at 82 considered a dean of Canadian-American Kennel Club judges, came from Wilton, Connecticut.

For the first time, the 128-member Belleville and District Kennel Club employed the services of a professional organizing association to help contact prospective entrants and generally take away some of the headaches of organizing a show of this size. Local club members from Belleville, Trenton, Frankford, Stirling, Brighton, Codrington and Picton, were able to devote efforts to the program, running the bar and lunchroom plus showing their own charges.

Officials were very enthusiastic following the Sunday close of this, one of the largest championship dog shows held in the area.

Only one dark shadow marred the event. The club-sponsored dance on Saturday night at the community centre was closed when a group of rowdy local youths began battling among themselves and finally took to fighting with guests.

Apparently some of these youths had shown up on Friday, making nuisances of themselves among exhibitors and in the grounds of area. Some who returned on Saturday were enlisted as assistants and experienced a change of heart, pitching in to help. Others, described as "local hoods," returned that night.

Tight Fight Seen Between Veterans

By ROY PEACOCK

Former Ontario cabinet minister Allan Lawrence who last year narrowly lost out in his bid for the provincial Progressive Conservative party leadership, is seeking to win the Northumberland - Durham riding for the Conservatives in today's federal election.

Mr. Lawrence, who resigned his cabinet post as Provincial Secretary for Justice to become the PC standard bearer for the Northumberland riding is opposed by Liberal Russell C. Honey, Port Hope lawyer, and New Democratic Party candidate Wilmer "J." Hill, of Hampton, who is a department head at an Oshawa college.

Mr. Honey, who was deputy speaker for the House of Commons in the Liberal government, is seeking re-election after winning the 1968 riding election by a comfortable 2,556 vote margin.

But the Conservatives, with the former provincial cabinet minister as candidate, have high hopes of winning the riding back for the Stanfield party.

Mr. Lawrence was defeated in last year's provincial PC party leadership race by Premier William Davis. His candidacy in the federal election could result in a tight race for the riding immediately to the west of Hastings.

Both Mr. Lawrence and Mr. Honey are experienced campaigners, while New Democratic candidate Wilmer Hill also has the benefit of previous campaigns.

Mr. Hill was the NDP candidate for Northumberland in the last federal election, losing out to Mr. Honey - and the Progressive Conservative candidate.

This time around both the Progressive Conservatives and the New Democratic Party supporters have high hopes for an upset in the riding.

Crafts to Get A Push

After years of struggling alone, Ontario craftsmen are beginning to see the dawn of co-operative endeavor ahead.

That became clear at Loyalist College this weekend, as more than 150 artists and craftsmen from Belleville to the Quebec border and all points north gathered to exchange views at the annual conference of the Eastern Ontario Craft Council.

Representatives of the provincial department of industry and tourism acknowledged that crafts are an industry that the department wants to develop through better design and marketing procedures.

And craftsmen on their part demanded a clearing house that would serve them with information on sources of craft supplies, wholesale outlets and publicity that would acquaint the public with their products.

The burning need of craftsmen is a clearing house for information on sources of supplies, the group decided.

The result was the decision of Charles Morgan, marketing service division, ministry of industry and tourism, to call a conference of craftsmen, suppliers and wholesalers at both Kingston and Ottawa to iron out difficulties and get crafts as an industrial resource on the road to commercial success.

The two - day conference was a showcase of talent in the eastern Ontario region.

Five craftsmen demonstrating their arts were from the Quinte district. Mrs. Lillian Peddle, an instructor with the recreation department, showed her rug hooking techniques. Mrs. Joanne Cunnington demonstrated pottery making and Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Nuscombe from Prince Edward County displayed the art of spinning and weaving. Ron Vandervelde demonstrated jewelry making and Mrs. Grace Hawkins showed her chair caning.

From Kingston Berdie Loates brought his leather-craft work in the form of purses, vests, skirts and men's suits. His partner in his Kingston business, Mike Slaughter demonstrated painting with the use of several different media in one canvas. A professional wood carver, S. Thornley, who had worked on the restoration of Manchester and Winchester cathedrals demonstrated his ancient art and the use of medieval themes in wooden jewelry.

Student Advocates Marks and Exams

A young man, who Moira principal E. J. Shipton called "a walking embodiment of personal involvement," advocated a retention of examinations and marks in the schools during his valedictory address at Moira Secondary School Saturday.

Wally Swain, 18, now a student of mathematics at the University of Waterloo, said he had concluded "some kind of big stick is needed to keep things on an even keel."

He questioned whether as much would be achieved by students, if they did not have such factors as marks "to maintain control."

Swain said that even in communes, where a considerable degree of freedom exists, checks have to be applied to ensure that work gets done.

Fourteen Ontario Scholarships were awarded during the evening at Moira. Recipients were John Arthur, Steven Bodley, David Cheesman, Alfred Cooper, Ann Hilborn, Melodie Kunetsky, Donna Lawrence, Francis Lenk, Peter Levick, Wally Swain, Gregory Thomson, Lynn Walton, Susan Wannamaker and Nancy Wormald.

The Intelligencer Scholarship of $100 was presented to Steven Bodley, while the $100 Kinsmen Bursary went to Janet McCabe.

The Hastings County Board of Education prize of $100 was awarded to Allan Bender, the St. Julien Chapter IODE Bursary ($100) was presented to Susan Rossi.

Peter Hart took the $505 SASfgyil Chapter IODE scholarship, Jennifer Short the Alexander vending award of $50.

Both Janice McAlpine and Blair Wardman won $50 Corby Distillery awards.

Restrictive Bylaw Worries Breeders

FRANKFORD (Staff) — Members of the Belleville and District Kennel Club have offered their assistance to any community facing decision on passing bylaws to restrict the number of kennels and dogs in their communities.

James Tinlin of RR 1, Codrington, north of Brighton, told The Intelligencer this weekend, his club is very concerned with the positions being taken by local township councils.

As a spokesman for the club, he said if Murray Township passes its animal control bylaw, soon to be presented for final reading and approval, it could "literally wipe out kennels in this area."

Township council drafted its bylaw some time ago in light of complaints registered by residents of Barry Heights, near Trenton. It would severely restrict the number of dogs allowed within an urban, built-up centre, directly aimed Mr. Tinlin believes, at kennel operations.

Residents had complained about one kennel in particular, but under the proposed bylaw, the present owners would not be affected. Their kind would simply be listed as a non-conforming use. It would, however, restrict any kennel developments of the future.

Mr. Tinlin said shows such as their championship display at the Frankford Community Gardens this past weekend, are not only for their own and the public's enjoyment, but a chance to show that show dogs are not a nuisance.

He said as members of the Canadian Kennel Club, local organization members must live up to a high code of standards. This includes keeping their kennels and animals properly controlled and cared for.

The club is prepared to present a case to any council now making for Murray's decision. He feared several would follow suit once Murray's is passed. During the interview, Mr. Tinlin put forward the club's suggestion that all kennel licences issued by municipalities, should only be given to kennel club members who are in good standing.

He agreed "there are some thoughtless people who would let their dogs become nuisances, but was quite emphatic in his stated that "none of these are association members."

Top Dog, to Judge

Dean among Canadian - American Kennel Club judges and the oldest judge at the Frankford dog show Saturday was Alva Rosenburg, 82, of Wilton, Conn. He casts an expert eye over Canadian Champion Marbilland's Miracle Man, an Ezglish Setter owned by William Shillington of RR 1, Trenton.

Trucker Hurt

NAPANEE (Staff) A rear end collision on Highway 401 between two tractor trailers sent a Port Credit man to hospital this morning.

Earl MacLean, driver of the rear vehicle, suffered chest injuries and several fractures after his four-day-old truck slammed into another truck one mile east of here. He was rushed to Belleville General Hospital before being moved to Kingston General.

Provincial police and passing drivers took nearly an hour to free MacLean from the crushed cab of his truck. Th cab, valued at $30,000 was totally demolished.

Driver of the other vehicle, John Dobson of Scarborough, was taken to hospital with a stiff neck. Only damage to his truck occurred to the rear of the trailer.

Constable Fred Huizenga of Napanee OPP reports traffic on both sides of the highway was held up for an hour and a half while wreckermen cleared away metal sheets knocked off the MacLean truck.

The accident, in the east-bound lane, occurr d at 4:15 a.m.

Club Activities

TWEED SENIOR CITIZENS CLUB NO. 229

TWEED—The regular meeting of the Tweed Senior Citizens Club No. 229, met at St. James' Hall, Tweed on October 15 with 49 members in attendance.

Mr. Harris Jenkins, president, opened the meeting with a new song. My Shepherd is the Lord, Nothing Indeed Shall I want."

The president then reported on his recent visit to Ottawa, where he was at John Munro's office, and received extensively about the New Horizon Program for retired Canadians. Alfred Wright, past-president reported on the Senior Citizens' Dance in Tweed.

There was a 50 donation given by the seniors to the Anglican Church Women to send books to Labrador. The two door prizes for the day were won by Mrs. Stanley Kring and Mrs. E. Falla. The members were reminded of the Pot Luck supper to be held in St. James' Hall, on Friday, November 14, from 6 p.m. and there will also be dinner. The regular meeting, date, which falls on Wednesday November 5, will take the form of a social hour when members are invited to attend as usual. There will be no business.

Money Raised For Europe

TWEED — The students of the North Addington Education Centre's Education Europe received a very generous donation recently from Mrs. Olive Hook, of Cloyne, winner of the Lion's Club's raffle of $1,000.

Mrs. Hook's donation of 3100 and her other efforts for the group are extremely appreciated by everyone concerned.

Fund raising is still in process with a large sum of money still to be earned. On November 14, the students are sponsoring Boys' COSSA volleyball at the school and a victory dance in the evening. Everyone is welcome.

A car rally intended for November 5, at 11 o'clock from NABE is also being organied. Members of the Denbigh Women's Institute have offered a homemad quilt for Education Europe to raffle in the community.

Bazaar a Success!

MARMORA — The Sacred Heart Church Bazaar was held recently. A turkey dinner was prepared by the women.

A fish pond provided entertainment for the children while adults found many attractive articles at the home baking table, candy stall and the sewing sections.

James Scanlon of Welland was the winner of $50, and the soller, Mrs. John Scanlon, received $10. Two oth r pries of $20 and $20 were won by Ted Bedore of Marmora and Wayne Nice of Peterborough. Mrs. Manley Lavender was the lucky winner of a Christ-

Africa Shown

MARMORA — Mr. and Mrs. James Green of Napanee, former missionaries working through Inland Missions, were guest speakers at the recent St. Andrew's UCW meeting held in the Christian Education Centre.

They described their personal experiences during the past decade in Africa, Mrs. Green participated at the mission field in Kenya and Tanzania as mechanic and nurse. Slides and curios were also shown to supplement their address.

The worship period was taken by Mrs. S. Demarest and Mrs. G. McCormick.

Mrs. James Cook reported on the progress which has been made for the bazaar in November.

Mrs. Walter Potts concluded the meeting and an African mas cake, the basket of groceries went to Mrs. S. A. Stephens and a 5 pound block of cheese was won by Bill Boster.

Church Celebrates

Special events included a combined church service with Mr. Don McBride, Campbellford as guest bagpiper; a musical concert of sacred music with "The Ambassadors" of the Wesleyan Methodist Church in Belleville; "The Bailey Family", Cooper; Mr. Ken Brunson, Tweed; Miss Cathy Burnside, Madoc; Mr. Bob Meeks, Roslin; Miss Ann Ketcheson, pianist, Roslin.

A Friday family potluck supper and Sunday School variety program and art display by the children were also on the program.

The week long celebrations were completed at Thomasburg Church anniversary with guest minister Rev. Dr. H. M. Davis, Belleville, and special music from the choir.

MR. AND MRS. JAMES ELLIOTTE RAMSKI

Ramski – Ashton

MADOC — Kathryn Ann Ashton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ashton, Madoc, was recently united in marriage to James Elliotte Ramski of Ottawa, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Kocherzberger, Pulpoque, N.Y. in a double ring ceremony performed by Rev. James H. Thompson at St. John the Baptist Anglican Church, Madoc. Miss Adela Zamojski of Ottawa rendered organ music and solo selections.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was attired in a floor length white brocade gown of Victorian styling with a high ruffled collar, long sleeves, ruffled bodice and back. Her veil was of tulle with lace and seed pearls at the crown. She carried a cascade of red roses and stephanotis.

Miss Faye Galloway, the maid of honor and Mrs. Loyda West, Miss Kristen Hall, the bridesmaids, were dressed alike in long A-line jersey gowns in floral designs of mauve, pink and yellow.

Kenneth Morrison was best man. Ushers were: Peter Welsch and Bruce Lord. The flow bearer was Deryck West.

For the reception held in the home of the bride's parents in Madoc, the bride's mother received guests wearing a long pink sheer over nylon taffeta gown with long sleeves and accented by a cordage of deep pink sweetheart roses.

The bridegroom's mother was attired in a long mint green crepe gown trimmed with white lace and completed with a corsage of pink sweetheart roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Ramski are residing at 127 Second Ave., Apt. 9, Ottawa.

Hallowe'en Preview

Witches, goblins, cowboys, pirates and captains wandered through the doors of Nicholson Catholic College Saturday evening. A full house of mothers, fathers and children joined in the Hallowe'en celebration, "Fun Night' which was hosted by St. Michael's CWL. Reported a complete success, another "Fun Night" for those concerned about Hallowe'en safety.

WEDDING

SNIDER PARKS

TWEED — Bethel Pentecostal Church, Kaladar, was the scene of a double ring wedding on Saturday, October 7, when July Helen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Parks of Kaladar, was united in marriage to Berton Churchill Snider, son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Snider, of Cloyne. Reverend Ronald Orr officiated.

Wedding music was played by Miss Dawn Thompson, cousin of the bridegroom. Soloist was Mrs. J. Newton, wife of the minister of Northbrook and Kaladar Pentecostal Churches.

The bride given in marriage by her father wore a floor length gown of white nylon organza designed with long sleeves and a wedding ring collar. Wide lace trim and a rose of daisy buttons decorated the bodice, and a full length train fell from the back of the gown. Her shoulder length veil was gathered to a cluster of daisy white flowers. She carried a bouquet of red roses and white 'mums.

Mrs. Gladys Deguire was at her sister's matron of honor, and wore a green velvet gown with a bodice of light green chiffon and carried a bouquet of yellow and white 'mums.

Bridesmaids were Mrs. Vera Yanch, sister of the bride and Mrs. Cheryl Snider, sister-in-law of the bridegroom. Mrs. Yanch wore a blue velvet gown featuring a bodice of light blue chiffon, and carried white and blue tinted 'mums. Mrs. Snider wore a similar gown, but in purple velvet, with a mauve chiffon bodice. She carried mauve and white 'mums. Miss Beky Snider, niece of the bridegroom was flower girl. She wore a white satin gown with green velvet trim and carried a basket of yellow and white 'mums.

The buffet style supper was held in the community hall in Kaladar, where the mother of the bride received guests wearing a dress of green knit with braid trim, black shoes and purse with a corsage of yellow 'mums. Assisting, the bridegroom's mother wore a white dress with silver thread, silver shoes and she carried a blue picture corsage of white 'mums completed her ensemble.

An evening reception was held in the Town Hall, at Cloyne, where lunch was served and dancing was enjoyed.

For the wedding trip, the bride donned a two-piece green suit, black accessories and a corsage of white 'mums.

The couple will reside in Oshawa.

Gifts Given

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kirby (nee Catherine Smith) were honored at a social evening in Bloomfield United Church Sunday School Hall recently.

Many friends and neighbors came to congratulate Catherine on her recent marriage to Charles Kirby.

Rev. Nathan Bowering, Catherine's minister for many years, voiced the appreciation of her church for Catherine's loyal work and Reeve Allan Anderson expressed good wishes from the community.

Mr. Donald Baxter was master of ceremonies for the program and presentation.

Miss Sarah Pearce pinned an orchid on Catherine and a boutonniere on Charles. Mrs. Jack Stenning gave two readings, one very humorous and the second on a serious note.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Kidd presented the story of the "Kirby Courtship" in song and music.

Before the presentations, Mr. Baxter spoke of Catherine's contribution to her church, her community and the library.

Miss Ruth Bowerman, Mrs. William Mitchell, Mrs. Oscar Parks, Mrs. Harold Thompson and Mrs. Lorraine Scott presented gifts.

After admiring these gifts, Catherine graciously thanked everyone. Charlie also expressed his thanks for the gifts and the warm words of welcome.

Anniversary Celebrated

Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Elliott, RR.4, Corbyville and Mr. and Mrs. Carl Kelly, Belleville, recently co-hosted a noon hour buffet for about 48 relatives in honor of the 25th anniversary for Mr. and Mrs. Carl Green.

In the Elliott home the dining table was centred with a three - layer cake, flanked with silver tapers.

On arrival, Mrs. Green was presented with a lovely corsage by their only daughter, Janis. Also present was the Green's only son Richard, his wife Judy and their two children, Stephanie and David from Barrie.

Mrs. Eva Fennock, Bancroft, and Mrs. Harry Green, Belleville, mothers of the celebrants, poured from the silver service and nieces Mrs. Keith Donahue, Stirling and Miss Carolyn Kelly, Belleville assisted with the service. Mr. Lewis Bronson, Pembroke proposed a toast to the happy couple and Mr. Simon Brownson, Bancroft, offered a blessing before the meal.

In the afternoon, presentations were made to the honored couple. A special "This Is Your Life — Norma Green" album was also presented. Carl expressed their thanks for the happy occasion.

On Oct. 25, 1947 Norma Evelyn Bronson was united in marriage to Carl William Green, in Holloway St. United Church, with Rev. C. Perkins, Rev. J. S. A. Spearman and Mr. Simon Brownson, officiating. Attendants for the occasion were Miss Nora Bronson (Mrs. Lorne Elliott) the late, Mrs. Harry Bronson, and Mr. Burton Green, now a Toronto resident. Nine years ago, the Greens left Belleville and took up residence in Barrie, Ont.

Ann Landers

Bad Complexion Annoys Reader

Dear Ann Landers: The letter from "Miss Mess," the girl with the lousy complexion, could have been written by me. I am 16 and miserable just as she is, only worse.

My personality is good. I have a sharp sense of humor and I enjoy music and sports. I have pretty eyes and hair and a good figure. But my skin is so terrible I turn guys off. I haven't had a date in six months.

I've tried all the creams, soaps, diets, and even that miserable salt water treatment that hurts like blazes, but still I look gross. Girls who have nice complexions don't know what it means to wake up in the morning and see a new crop of blackheads, red heads and pimples, and all those blistering bumps. I'm so depressed I want to go soak my head in a rain barrel.

I think it's rotten that boys can't see what's behind a girl's face. Why should a girl's skin be THAT important? Don't give up on me. Any medical advice, Ann. I'm not dumb at it. Just tell me how to live in a world where a girl with a bad complexion might as well be dead.—Another Mess

Dear Mess: No point in trying to get through to you, honey. Maybe this next letter will break the sound barrier.

Dear Ann Landers: Please tell "Miss Mess" that 12 years ago I was where she is now. No girl had a more hideous complexion than mine. It's still far from seashes and cream, but I've learned how to think about the old expression, "Beauty is only skin deep," was invented by someone who had to feel good about herself.

First, I put myself in the hands of a good dermatologist. He pointed out that I broke out when I was unhappy, frightened or angry. I also picked at my pimples when I was upset. This made them worse. He got me to go to a counsellor who helped me forget about my skin and go to work on what was UNDER it. ME.

I soon realized that I was running around in a circle—that I had been blaming a lot of my unhappiness (and failure) on my complexion. A real eye-opener was the fact that I saw people around me with bad skin who were doing fine. I had to ask myself, "Why them and not me?"

Today I have a good marriage, a successful career and two daughters. Both girls, unfortunately, have inherited my bad complexion. But I'll know what to tell them if they get to feeling like loners. I'll just read them this letter. Thanks, Ann. —Skin Game

Dear S.G.: It's a good letter for anybody—male or female—who is depressed about the condition of his skin. And thank you for pointing out the emotional aspect. You did my work for me today.

Dear Ann Landers: This is a funny problem, but no one in our family is laughing. Tell us what to do, please. My uncle and aunt were married for 10 years. They fought like a couple of jungle cats and finally got a divorce. Three years later they decided to try again. They didn't remarry but they are living together. This arrangement has been going on for seven years.

They are giving themselves a 20th wedding anniversary party, ignoring the fact that they have been living in sin for the past seven years. What should we do? — Ashland, Ohio

Dear Ash: Go to the party and have a good time.

Calcium Shortage Causes Teeth Loss

A widespread shortage of calcium in the average human diet may be responsible for periodontal disease and loss of teeth, according to a scientific paper presented recently at the annual meeting of the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology.

Calcium deficiency has been a subject of intense interest on the part of the National Dairy Council and the Cornell research unit has stepped in, both by a 1970 NDC research grant.

The answers pointed out that the average American diet does not provide sufficient calcium to meet recommended allowances. Two glasses of milk supply nearly three-fourths of the calcium recommended daily for an adult.

They point out that many product evangelists have been declining in milk consumption has been somewhat lost. This overlooks the excess intake of phosphorus which results in how it is in experimental animals.

1 10-ounce can salmon
12 white bread slices
1/3 cup butter
1 10-ounce package frozen peas, cooked and drained
¼ cup minced onion
1 10-ounce can condensed cream of mushroom soup
4 eggs
2 cups milk

About 1½ hours before serving: Preheat oven to 325 deg. Bake. Brush melted butter on one side of each bread slice; arrange 6 slices, buttered-side up, in baking pan. The pan must be well buttered and about 13 by 9 inches or larger.

In medium bowl, with fork, flake salmon; stir in peas and onion; spread evenly over bread slices in baking pan. Cut remaining bread slices, butter side up, in another bowl beat undiluted soup, eggs and milk until well blended; slowly pour over and around bread. Bake one hour or until a knife inserted in the custard portion comes out clean. Serve at once. Makes 6 servings.

Successful Living

Share Your Thoughts and Keep Happy

By DORIS CLARK

I have seen successful marriages between people of different denominations and races: yes-this is a difficult hurdle to jump. If a couple shares one another's thoughts about a philosophy of life they will get to know each other's deepest thoughts and enjoy them.

Besides giving a sense of security, a shared religious philosophy sets the stage for happy family living. It can provide a frame of reference when there are subtle questions of right and wrong.

It can develop for both partners habits of kindly thoughts and deeds for each other. Sherwood Eddy challenged the couples who came to him to read the four Gospels together and to come to know that great humanist, Jesus Christ.

"The family which prays together stays together" is no idle statement.

Dear Doris: Glad you like my poem, "Dual Personality".

Sometimes I write for CCB Outlook (Magazine of the Canadian Council of the Blind) and Sadie Bending information that she and Kay Pfohl, her assistant editor, will retire this month. Sadie has had a remarkable career for even a sighted person. I think blind people like her are a great inspiration to us all with their wonderful philosophy of "We shall overcome".

My husband and I have turned 39 and from now on both of us will be living on borrowed time, as they say. Our life together for nearly 19 years has been a great love story with a mixture of romance, tragedy, joy and sorrow.

We feel sorry for all those young people who shun this for the promiscuous life. They will die young because they have no roots. — V.A.

Dear V.A.: Many readers have written in for "Dual Personality" and we were glad to be the means of sharing it.

We will miss Sadie's gems of philosophy, which have appeared in our column from time to time. As for that rot about borrowed time, you are entitled to all the time you can use effectively before you move on.

And — yes, we all need roots before we can blossom effectively.

Confidential to Heartbroken Mother: You, your husband and your daughter all need counselling. Seek it at once through the Family Service Bureau in your city. This child is in for an unhappy life unless you all work together to help her.

I could have sent you a private detailed reply, and reached you far sooner, if you had given me your proper name and address, and a stamped envelope. My letters and replies have to be prepared several weeks ahead of publishing date.

There is helpful Canadian literature which may shed light on your problem. Write to Doris about it, in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for your reply.

Regional Shifts Give Trend Keys

OTTAWA (CP) — The voice of the people in the federal election will be heard in a crescendo rising from the east as results are announced tonight.

You can be your own trend watcher, competing with the pundits and computers, by keeping an eye on any regional shifts in party fortunes and watching some key seats that have switched around or produced tight results in the past.

Because of differing time zones and strictures in the electoral law against announcing results from a region where the polls have closed into another where voting is still under way, trend watching is less fun the further west you live.

Although some U.S. border stations broadcast results without regard for the electoral law, a would-be trend watcher in Edmonton, for example, will get from Canadian sources a rush of results from points east at soon as his polls have closed at 7 p.m. MST.

If the results in the east go decisively one way, the Albertan would be told which party is forming the next government even before Alberta ballots are counted.

Starting with Atlantic-region results, the trend-watcher should be alert for any over-all shift in party standings. Conservatives held 25 of the 22 constituencies in the four Atlantic provinces, Liberals the other seven.

Should results tonight give Liberals a series of gains in the Atlantic area, that would be a preliminary indicatio of re-election for the Trudeau government.

Unless the national results were to be unusually close, the Quebec and Ontario ballots—61 per cent of the national total—would be decisive.

The thing to watch for in Quebec's 74 constituencies is any variation from the previous standing of 56 Liberals, four Conservatives, 13 Social Credit and one independent.

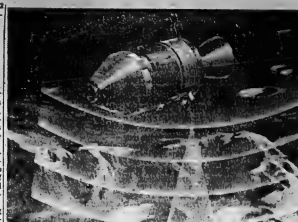
The pattern of pre-election campaigning has shown that party leaders regard 88-seat Ontario as the keystone. After the 1968 election, the Liberals held 61 of those constituencies, Conservatives 19, New Democrats seven and Conservative Speaker Lucien Lamoureux the other one.

For example, should the Liberals hold their own east of Ontario, they would still need to retain a substantial share of their seats in the big central province to be assured of re-election with a majority.

For a majority, the winning party needs 133 of the 264 Commons seats—132 if unaffiliated Speaker Lamoureux were re-elected.

Without retaining about three-quarters of their Ontario seats after standing pat in the east, the Liberals would need significant gains on the Prairies and British Columbia.

In the last Commons, the 45 New Democrat seats were split 25 for the Conservatives and 10 each for Liberals and New Democrats. The 23 B.C. seats were divided 15 for the Liberals, eight NDP, while the Yukon seat was Conservative and the Northwest Territories Liberal.



The trend-watcher may find other clues in certain bellwether constituencies selected by reason of a history of changing direction, standing results in the past or reports from organizers of at least two competing parties that they were likely to be close contests.

They include Cape Breton-East Richmond, N.S., Tately Conservative; Northumberland-Miramichi, N.B., Liberal; Sherbrooke and Quebec East, both Liberal; the Ontario seats of Oshawa, Whitby, NDP, Lambton — Kent, Conservative, and Toronto-Broadview, NDP; Dauphin, Man., and Swift Current-Maple Creek, Sask., both Conservative.

Ottawa West and Halifax-Wentworth in Ontario, both Liberal last time, may also toss up straws in the wind.

Quiet Ontario Drive Ends Liberal Campaign

BURLINGTON, Ont. (CP) — Grey drizzle and muted crowd receptions dampened the final day of Prime Minister Trudeau's campaign for re-election.

A motorcade tour of southern Ontario Saturday was the last official event of the Liberal campaign. But instead of a rousing finale, it turned out to be anti-climactic after the loud confrontation Mr. Trudeau had the day before with separatist protesters at a Chicoutimi, Que., shopping centre.

The southern Ontario crowds were relatively quiet, and even partisan audiences of Liberal supporters in Brantford and Stoney Creek did not refuse to interrupt the prime minister's remarks with the applause usual at party rallies.

About 500 persons were sparsely spread on the concrete ice surface of Brantford arena with the high roof surrounding seats vacant.

Despite the presence of young infiltrators carrying signs favoring New Democrat Derek Blackburn, who held the Brant seat in the last Parliament, the crowd was noticeably quiet as Mr. Trudeau repeated his basic campaign themes.

The Liberal candidate in the riding is Dick Mundy.

Concentrating on his theme of national integrity, Mr. Trudeau said the Liberal government had saved the unity of Canada at a critical time in national development.

"It is only just in time that we pulled ourselves together," he said.

"We have created a strong Canada, a Canada that is no longer looking for its identity."

He also aimed an appeal at the Indian vote of the riding, the location of a large Six Nations reserve. There is as much concern in his government for Indian and Eskimo minorities as for any other, he said.

The department of Indian affairs would be disbanded as soon as the native population wants, he said.

A similar speech and mild reception marked his appearance at a Stoney Creek legion hall.

Then, at a rally here for Norman McGuiness, Liberal candidate for Halton-Wentworth, the speech was again repeated for a crowd of Saturday shoppers mobbing the inside mall of a shopping centre.

Lewis States Supermarkets Charge Over Double A Pair

THUNDER BAY, Ont. (CP) — New Democratic Leader David Lewis tossed some last-minute punches at supermarkets Saturday as he ended his campaign for Monday's federal election.

He said a study done in Ottawa last summer points up "the scandalous way" supermarkets have of dealing with housewives.

He said the study shows that in many instances the stores apparently try to hike the shopper by charging more for two items than they do for one.

The study showed Dial soap selling at Loblaws with a single bar at 29 cents or two bars for 47 cents.

At A and P, Green Giant cream corn sold at 25 cents a can or two for 57 cents.

Mr. Lewis said the same effort for coffee. A few more pennies from the shoppers is apparent in merchandising the so-called regular or king size packages.

At IGA, for example, a 12 ounce package of Velveeta cheese was priced at 51 cents, or 4.29 cents per ounce. In the same store, the 16-ounce "king size" was priced at 86 cents, a cost of 5½ cents an ounce.

It is conceivable, Mr. Lewis said, that all this pricing was done by employees who are "bad at arithmetic."

"But don't you for one moment think that this is so."

This kind of activity was so widespread that it had to be deliberate.

That was why the NDP had been telling the public about "the corporate rip-off."

The party hadn't cooked up the issue. It was there, plain to see once it was drawn to the attention of Canadians.

Mr. Lewis predicted it will be impossible for any future Canadian government to give corporations this kind of freedom "because we have exposed it."

The New Democratic leader gave an hour-long speech to about 300 persons crammed into the Arrow Hall as he ended his last western swing of the campaign. He then headed for Toronto for some last minute pep-up appearances with workers in his York South riding.

Caouette Predicts Double Socred MPs

ROUYN, Que. (CP) — Social Credit Leader Real Caouette ended his election campaign Tuesday night at his home riding of Temiscamingue with an appeal to the people to vote down the "old regime."

Calling upon local voters to help him reform the current economic, social and monetary systems, Mr. Caouette predicted his party would double its standing in the House of Commons in today's voting.

The Social Credit party held 15 seats when Parliament was dissolved. They were all from Quebec.

It's a prediction Mr. Caouette has made many times during a 35-day, two-month campaign, tirelessly devoid of traditional electioneering trappings.

For Mr. Caouette there were no bands, slick promotional films on television, chartered planes or corps of advance men, personal aides and press secretaries.

Bob McKenzie went home from the Quinte Trap and Gun Club'f posj seasonal shoot Sunday afternoon with the Kelly High Overall Trophy under one arm, the John Labatt Ltd. Trophy under the other, and a problem.

"With the small one bedroom apartment I've got," McKenzie said jokingly, "I'll probably have to sell some of my furniture to make room for these." Bob, whose win is his first in five years with the club captured the Kelly Trophy with a respectable 125 of 150 bird shots, and the Labatt Handicap with a 45 of 50, beating Duke Pringle by one bird.

The Don Bell Sport Shop Trophy for the 18 yard single shoot, went to past president Bert Burgess with 46 of 50 birds, while the Charlie Kammer Doubles Trophy went to Graden Rodgers with 40 of 50.

Jack Rottian took the Stewart Werner Trophy for the year's highest 25.2 percent average in singles, while Norris Cunningham received the Ralph Nelson Memorial Trophy as most improved shooter of the year.

During the shoot, the members elected the club's new executive. George Genereux becomes the new president; Al Smith, vice; Doug Johnson, secretary-treasurer and A. M. Tyrrell, directors. Bob McKenzie and Brian Cooper, directors.

B's Still Unbeaten

Bobcats Paw Panthers By 5-2 Count

Goalie Bob Moore performed outstandingly for Belleville in Metro Junior "B" play last night, helping to maintain the Bobcats' no-loss record with a 5-2 win over Pickering. While fellow Cat's spent 12 minutes of the second period in the penalty box, Moore batted away 14 shots, keeping the Panthers scoreless.

Despite the penalties, Belleville shone in the second period, putting three past goalie Louis Dingley.

Mike Wall, assisted by defenseman Tim Yohn, fired the first one through. Then at 7:50 Wayne McGeachy deflected a Yohn shot from point. Less than a minute later, Robb Foster, who banged in Belleville's first period goal, added the third.

With fine penalty killing by defensemen Wally Dalnard, Dave Flesch, Neil Turner and Rick Meagher and Mark Coates throughout the second period, the Bobcats descended onto the Panthers in earnest in the third.

The Cat's gave goalie Bob Moore a rest in the third, as they outshot Pickering 11-4, keeping the puck in the Panther's end for most of the period. Belleville's centre Rick Meagher scored the only Belleville goal in an unassisted effort when he stole the puck from a Panther forward, swooped around defenseman Bill Belzun, and neatly put the puck by Dingley's stick side.

Too Late for Tally

Bobcat winger Robb Foster wait s for a rebound off Pickering goalie Louis Dingley's stick, but Wayne McGeachy's second period goal had already lit the red light for a Belleville lead of 3-1 in Metro Junior "B" play last night at Memorial Arena. Belleville defeated the Panthers 5-2.

Last Shot Decides

It was a "matter of inches", deciding the "A" division winners of the Quinte Curling Club's Mixed Opening Bonspiel.

Chris Drives Up a Storm

Thourh officially it was Brockville Day with a Brockville drivers invitational pace, Chris Storms thundered into the picture with a rare triple win at Frontenac Downs Sunday. Storms, the third driver in two weeks to score a triple, came up with a nose victory over John's Prince and Shadydale Racy in the featured ninth.

Bill Stinson's Montague Doll in the first and Clarence Carson's Gaiety's Jule in the sixth pulled Storm across the wire for his other two wins.

The Brockville Carriage House Hotel Invitational went in a time of 2:14 3-5, to Gord Byers behind his four-year old Wee Scotch.

Imperials Ousted

Home town Blake Kerr Imperial Midgets were defeated in Kingston 6-2 Sunday. Mike Crawford and John Murphy put Belleville's two onto the board, while Kingston's Don Marshall contributed to his team's scoring total.

The Trap and Gun Club's Mixed Opening Bonspiel, that's the amount of margin that Vern Goodwin had to slip a counting rock between two guards and force extra ends with Don Moore's foursome. Goodwin's takeout shot caught one of the guarding rocks, to give the Moore rink a 12-9 win in the "A" final.

Moore's rink was composed of his wife Bev, along with Barb and Ivan Hilborn. The losing foursome was made up of Vern and Gloria Goodwin, Sandra Pycock and Paul Dunnan.

The rinks were among 136 vying for top honors in the event which got under way last Monday and finished Saturday afternoon.

In "B" division play it was Ross Booth's foursome taking top honors, while the "C" event trophy went to Frank Morrell.

Plane Paces Quintes to Galt Win

GALT (Special) — Belleville Quintes' captain Ralph Plane led by example Saturday night, and Greg Marchen followed his example to the letter. The result was a 5-4 win over the Galt Hornets who had beaten Belleville 9-6 just 24 hours previously.

Plane scored two goals, including the eventual winner while Marchen also tallied two key counters to lift the Quintes' record to 4-4 for the season.

Marchen also helped by tying up the Galt centreman with a face-off in Belleville's end with only three seconds remaining in the game. Face-offs had once again proved to be a problem for the Quintes, who lost one in their own end with 18 seconds remaining that allowed Howie Deitrich to pull the Hornets to within one goal of Belleville. The home team had lifted goalie Brent "Sonny" Pennington for a sixth attacker in an effort to overcome a 5-3 deficit.

Marchen brought Belleville back from a 3-2 deficit when Pennington misplayed his soft point shot. The big rearguard tallied again at 19.50 of the second scoring an unassisted marker from the face-off circle.

Lorne O'Donnell scored the other Belleville goal, while Plane's first marker, also on a rebound had opened the game's scoring at 2:06 of the first.

Steve Degurse, Vance Millar, Mac Westgate and Deitrich scored for the Hornets. The losers drew a total of six game's nine minor penalties Ron Jury faced 31 shots in goal for the Quintes while Pennington was called upon 35 times.

Gravelle Gets One

Sunday was a red-letter day for Bull Festivals of the Central Junior Hockey League. They finally won at home.

To the delight of 700 fans, the Festivals dumped Smiths Falls Bears 3-1 in a game that also included 19 minor penalties.

But the win didn't help the Festivals much in the standings of the six-team league where they still are ranked fifth, ahead of only Nepean Raiders.

The Raiders did nothing to help their standing Sunday, losing for the seventh time in eight starts. Dix time 2-0 to league leading Pembroke Lumby Kings before 900 Pembroke fans.

The win moved the Kings two more points ahead of Ottawa Rangers, who have a three-point lead on Club ban Brockville Braves, idle with Ottawa, are fourth in the standings.

Perry Hennigson, Dave McQuarrie and Terry Nielsen handled the Hull scoring with John Gravelle the only Smiths Falls goal getter.

In Pembroke, the Kings got two goals from Tim Young and one from Mike Nixon.

University of Ottawa Gee Gees sloshed for some long runs Saturday as they defeated University of Toronto Blues 28-13 to win the Eastern Division of the Ontario Universities Athletic Association football circuit in a playoff game.

The two teams posted identical 4-2 records after regular-season play.

In other weekend action, University of Windsor Lancers clinched first place in the Western Division by nipping University of Western Ontario Mustangs 18-17; Waterloo Warriors 44-8, and York University Yeomen kicked University of Guelph Gryphons into last place in the west by shooting them 30-17.

The weekend games mean Ottawa and Waterloo Lutheran meet in one playoff game at Ottawa and Western plays at Windsor in the other.

In Ottawa, the Gee Gees, playing on a rain-soaked field, got 10 points from fullback Ted Lumsden who had two field goals, Two converts and two singles.

Wayne Terry intercepted a Toronto pass from Toronto quarterback Wayne Bridge and ran 60 yards for one touchdown and Conrad Kramer ran a Mike Sotoudnin punt back 65 yards for another. Ottawa's other touchdown came on Jim Colton's 40-yard run.

For Toronto, Bob Bloshm fell on a blocked Lumsden kick in the Ottawa end zone and Cor Dorel scored an 85-yard pass-and-run play.

Dunkley was good on one convert.

Leo Can't Believe It: Argos Blow Another

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Argonauts may be stunned but they're still alive to keep the Eastern Football Conference playoff picture in doubt for another week.

"Unbelievable," said Argo coach Leo Cahill after he watched Ottawa Rough Riders score two touchdowns in the final four minutes Saturday for a 21-16 win over Toronto.

"They catch lightning out of the days of late. I feel . . . I feel like somebody took a ball bat and hit me in the face."

So, while the Argos failed to win the two points needed to catch Montreal Alouettes for third spot in the EFC, the Als stood still by dropping a 29-3 decision to Saskatchewan Roughriders in Regina Sunday and now it's on to Hamilton next Sunday where Argos could still gain the two points to catch Montreal.

But the Tiger-Cats will also have plenty of motivation as they battle to maintain first place. The Riders' victory here Saturday moved them into a tie with Hamilton and the Riders have another game at home Saturday against Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

If the Tiger-Cats and Riders finish in a tie, the Ticats would take first place by virtue of a 10-7 record over Ottawa. Also, if the Argos win their last one and Hamilton, they take third place by virtue of a 2-1 record against Als who wrapped up their season with a 4-10 won-lost record.

A capacity crowd of 33,135 sat through a steady drizzle Less than a minute later, Less than a minute remaining, Ottawa quarterback Rick Cacasa completed a 60-yard touchdown pass to Hugh Oldham. Organ converted the touchdown and his single on a missed field goal extended the quarter and left Ottawa trailing 16-14.

But with less than a minute to play, Cacasa set up on a last-gasp, third-down gamble and again hit Oldham for a 50-yard touchdown.

On the final score, Oldham leaped high for the pass and was hit by defender Jimmy Dye as he came down. But in what Ottawa coach Jack Gotta called "the greatest play I've seen in my 17 years in Canadian football," the Rider receiver landed on his feet, bounced off defensive back Rick Thornton and then scampered for the score.

"He made a fabulous catch," said Thornton, "a hell of a catch.

"I was caving in on him at about the 30-yard line, but he glanced off me just enough to keep running."

Up to the last four minutes, Argos had had the scoring but Ottawa had the advantage elsewhere, with a net offence of 417 yards and 20 first downs compared to Toronto's 271 yards and 11 first downs.

Cacasta gave up one interception while Argo leader Joe Theismann gave away five.

Argos scored touchdowns on Theismann's four-yard toss to Mike Eben midway in the first quarter and a 61-yard pass to Eric Allen late in the second.

Then MacMillan converted both Toronto majors while Organ also had two converts to go with his 26-yard second-quarter field goal, and two singles. Both sides conceded a safety touch to round out the scoring.

Cacsita completed 21 of 40 passes for 308 yards against 12 of 27 by Theismann for 170 yards.

Jonas' Legs Carry Bombers to First

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Winnipeg Blue Bombers invested the running of quarterback Don Jonas into their game plan Sunday and it paid off as the club won its first Western Football Conference regular-season championship in a decade.

The Bombers defeated Edmonton Eskimos 38-24 to clinch first place in the West before 25,210 fans. With one game remaining for each club, Edmonton will finish in a tie for first place but Winnipeg would get the nod as conference champion, having won the season series between the two clubs two games to one.

The last time Winnipeg finished first was in 1962, when the team last won the Grey Cup, nipping Hamilton Tiger Cats 28-27.

In another Sunday contest, Saskatchewan Roughriders pocketed Montreal Alouettes from clinching a playoff berth in the Eastern Conference, whipping the Als 29-3. In a Saturday game between the West's also runs, Calgary Stampeders demolished British Columbia Lions 28-3.

Winnipeg coach Jim Spavital said the game plan was for Jonas to run.

"We had to loosen them up a bit. They hadn't been respected for the run.

The Bombers' head coach said the decision to let Jonas run with the ball became "in a place but Winnipeg would get the nod as conference champion, having won the season series between the two clubs two games to one.

Hull is still waiting for a Philadelphia court decision, expected some time this week, which he hopes will break the National Hockey League reserve clause which Chicago Blacks Hawks insists binds him to the NHL club.

In other games Sunday, New York Raiders whipped Alberta Oilers 7-2 while Cleveland Crusaders and Los Nordiques skated to a 2-2 tie after overtime periods at Quebec City.

In Saturday action, Ottawa Nationals defeated Philadelphia Blazers 5-3, Los Angeles Sharks edged New York 4-3 and Alberta downed New England Whalers 4-1.

Ben Hanadin, with his sixth and seventh goals of the season, led the Winnipeg victory and his assist, goal of the night on a power play proved the winner before a crowd of 4,311.

Mill Black, Jean-Guy Gratton and Larry Hornung got the other Jets goals while Gord Labossiere, Duke Harris and Ted Taylor scored for Houston.

Bobby Sheehan and Ron Ward each scored twice to lead the Raiders over Alberta which dropped two points back of Winnipeg in the West standings.

Brian Morenz, Norm Ferguson and Mike Laughton accounted for the other New York goals before a crowd of 6,500 while Don Anderson and Ross Perkins scored for the Oilers.

Paul Andrea got Cleveland's first goal in the second period, Robert Guindon replied in the third period and Garry Jarrett put the Crusaders back in front before Renard Leclerc again tied it with his ninth goal in eight games.

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The rookie beat the old master, but again Arnold Palmer—misled in one of the most frustrating slumps of his legendary career—has no thoughts at all of calling it quits.

"Hell," snorted the 43-year-old Palmer after losing by one stroke to Lanny Wadkins Sunday in the final round of the Sahara invitational golf Tournament. "I'll still be playing when he's retired."

Toronto's George Knudson, winner of last week's Kaiser Open, was in contention throughout but fell apart with four bogeys and a double bogey on his final nine holes and finished in a tie for seventh place.

Wadkins, who collected $27,000 for his first tour victory, had a scrambling, two-under-par 69 in his final round on the 6,800 - yard Sahara - Nevada Country Club course and won with a 273 total, 11 under.

Palmer, who hasn't won in 15 months, also had a 69 for 274 as victory once again eluded him.

Fans Still Filling NHL Arenas, Martin Still Filling Enemy Nets

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

After the Canada-Soviet exhibition series in September gave hockey fans eight of the best hockey games they had ever seen, National Hockey League arenas were supposed to stand empty until the next international encounter.

But instead of leaving fans blase about the NHL, the September summit may have whetted their appetites even more, judging by some turnouts for weekend games.

A record 15,514 fans bought tickets in Philadelphia Sunday where the Flyers whipped Toronto Maple Leafs 5-2 while a record attendance of 16 161 was reported at Detroit's Olympia where the Red Wings led by a 2-1 count to Montreal Canadiens.

There were 17,500 tickets sold for Madison Square Garden where New York Rangers whipped Chicago Black Hawks 7-1. 15,091 for BostonGarden where the Bruins romped 9-1 over New York Islanders and 15,359 for Buffalo's Memorial Auditorium where the Sabres maintained their unbeaten record with a 2-1 win over Minnesota North Stars.

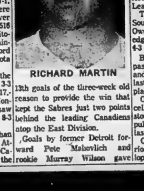
All but unbeaten are the Canadiens who skated to a 3-3 tie with the Sabres; before 17,507 fans Saturday night in Montreal while another 18,551 saw St. Louis Blues whip Detroit 8-3 in St. Louis.

Attendance was more than 15,000 at Vancouver where Atlanta Flames defeated the Canucks 2-1, at Toronto where the Bruins beat the Leafs 3-2; and Minnesota where the North Stars edged Philadelphia 2-1.

Even the fledgling Islanders drew 11,426 New York fans for their 4-4 tie with Chicago while 9,181 saw the Kings down Pittsburgh Penguins 5-2 at Los Angeles.

That's more than 180,000 NHL hockey tickets in one weekend.

Winger Rick Martin repaid the fans' loyalty at Buffalo Sunday by scoring his 12th and Montreal the victory at Detroit. Blight winger Rod Gilbert helped set up four goals as the Rangers pulled out of their early-season slump, romping over the Black Hawks to grab third spot in the East division, a point ahead of the Red Wings.



The Rangers' goals-a-game line of Gilbert, Jean Ratelle and Vic Hadfield was in high gear as Ratelle collected two goals and Hadfield one.

Johnny Bucyk became the eighth player in HL history to reach the 400-goal mark in career scoring as he scored his 399th and 400th for Boston against the Islanders.

Bruins rookie Gregg Sheppard scored three goals while centre Phil Esposito got his 749th career marker.

Rick MacLeish scored twice to lead the Flyers over the Leafs at Philadelphia.

The Leafs suffered their sixth loss and sixth major injury in 10 games. Defenceman Larry McIntyre suffered a separated shoulder at Philadelphia and joined defencemen Bob Baun and Brian Glennie, goalie Jacques Plante and forwards Norm Ullman and Denis Dupere on the sidelines.

Terriers Flex Muscle

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Orillia Terriers flexed a lot of muscle Sunday to remain locked in a first-place tie with Barrie Flyers in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A League.

Terriers walloped Owen Sound Downtowners 8-1 in Owen Sound, and the Flyers edged past Brantford Foresters 4-3 in Brantford.

Belleville Quinles slipped past Gait Golden Hawks 5-4 in Gait, and the Hornets slipped out of last week's three-way first-place tie into second place.

Oakville Oaks, alone in the cellar last week, downed Kingston Aces 6-4 in Oakville and pulled the Aces into a two-way last-place tie.

Orillia scored four second-period goals on their way to the lopsided win.

Mike Draper scored twice for the Terriers. Tommy McCarthy, Gary Marsh, Clare Alexander, Jim O'Brien, Grant Moore and Gary Milroy scored one each. Don Vipond scored for Owen Sound.

Action resumes Friday with Oakville at Brantford, Gait at Owen Sound, Barrie at Kingston and Belleville at Orillia.

Peters Produces For Tottenham

LONDON (CP) — England star Martin Peters produced the outstanding individual display in English soccer Saturday when he scored all four goals in Tottenham Hotspur's 4-1 away victory over trouble-torn Manchester United.

United, a one-time power, is struggling near the bottom of the standings despite spending more than $500,000 on players in the last year. Veteran Bobby Charlton scored United's goal.

Liverpool stayed in first place by one point over Arsenal, with both teams held to draws. Leeds United, 2-0 winner at Wolverhampton, moved into third place ahead of Chelsea, held to a 1-1 tie by Newcastle United.

Peter Cormack headed Liverpool into a first-half lead against Norwich City, but preserved its unbeaten home record when Terry Anderson netted a late goal for a 1-1 result.

Arsenal was held to a goal-less draw by Manchester City, at last showing signs of pulling out of its lean spell.

Leeds, whose championship hopes disappeared when before 2-1 by Wolves in their last match last season, gained revenge Saturday. Leeds got early goals by Eddie Gray and Peter Lorimer to carry off the points.

While Peters was sinking Manchester United, his former club, West Ham United showed no shortage of firepower as it crushed Crystal Palace 4-0.

West Ham moved into eighth place and kept Palace firmly pinned to last. Trevor Brooking, with two, John McDowell and Bryan Robson netted the Hammers' goals.

Adduono Adjusts Well

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Rick Addiuono, a black centre with St. Catharines Black Hawks, may miss Thunder Bay but he's right at home scoring goals in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A league.

Addiuono notched four goals during the weekend as the Hawks jumped into fourth place in the 10-team league with a 7-3 win over Peterborough Petes Sunday following a 4-2 victory over Oshawa Generals the night before.

In other Sunday games, Toronto Marlboros tightened their grip on first place by dumping Oshawa 6-2, Kitchener Rangers won their first game of the season with a 7-5 triumph over London Knights, Hamilton Red Wings nipped Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds 4-3, and Sudbury Wolves beat Ottawa 6?s 5-3.

Addiuono, who played with Thunder Bay Vulcans last season, scored his 11th and 12th goals Sunday in St. Catharines win as the Hawks got four-goals in the third period to break up a 3-3 tie with Peterborough.

Terry Casey and Jeff Jacques also scored twice for the winners and Dave Salvain added the other.

Bob Gainey, Doug Jarvis and Bob Neely scored for Peterborough who trail the Marlies by three points.

Lee Fogolin, another Thunder Bay product, and Peter Vandemark tallied for Oshawa.

More than 5,000 fans at Maple Leaf Gardens saw Paul Bordeleau notch his 15th goal of the season as Toronto coasted to its win over Oshawa.

In Kitchener, the Rangers, winless in 11 previous starts, scored three unanswered goals in the third period for their come-from-behind win over London.

Gerry Badiuk and Joe Fortunato paced the Rangers with two goals each and singles went to Mike Kennedy, Paul Evans and Mike McGregory.

Pat Hickey's goal with less than two minutes remaining to play gave Hamilton its win over the Greyhounds in Sault Ste. Marie.

Purple Gang Rides Again

The Purple Gang has been reincarnated, although Carl Eller believes that it's still a ghost of its former self.

After Minnesota Vikings demonstrated some of their oldtime defensive magic in beating Green Bay Packers 27-13 Sunday, their ringleader declared:

"We're not back yet . . . wherever we've been, we're not back.

The brawny defensive end referred to Minnesota's unimpressive 3-4 record and unimposing last-place position in the National Football Conference's Central Division.

Paul Krause and Wally Hilgenberg each intercepted a Scott Hunter pass and wheeled back for touchdowns and Eller and his bruising mates on that front four wall made life miserable for the Packers' gifted quarterback.

"I'd have to call this our best game of the season," said Vikings coach Bud Grant. "Now we've got to play them one at a time. I know that's a cliche, but I think it applies here."

Minnesota's victory spoiled a chance for Green Bay to take over possession of first place in the Central Division race. The Packers, who started the day tied with Detroit Lions, fell to a 4-3 record and a half-game behind the Lions.

Detroit meets Dallas Cowboys in an NFC game tonight.

The Cowboys, defending National Football League champions, fell 1½ games off Washington's pace in the East as a result of the Redskins' 23-16 victory over New York Giants Sunday.

In the other games, Miami Dolphins remained unbeaten as they trounced Baltimore Colts 23-6; New York Jets humbled New England Patriots 34-10; Cincinnati Bengals clouted Houston Oilers 30-7; Pittsburgh Steelers trimmed Buffalo Bills 38-21; Oakland Raiders hammered Los Angeles Rams 45-17; Kansas City Chiefs defeated San Diego Chargers 26-14; Cleveland Browns tripped Denver Broncos 27-20; San Francisco 49ers crushed Atlanta Falcons 49-14; New Orleans Saints stopped Philadelphia Eagles 21-3 and Chicago bears bombed St. Louis Cardinals 27-10.

Larry Brown ripped off 191 yards rushing in the best day of his pro career to lead Washington over New York. Brown scored two touchdowns, including a 36-yard run that broke a 9-9 tie in the third quarter. The Redskins added an insurance TD in the fourth period on Billy Kilmer's five-yard pass that proved to be the winning points.

Washington quarterback Sonny Jurgensen suffered a torn Achilles tendon that will sideline him for the rest of the season and possibly end his fine 16-year career.

Thompson Wins Third Tourney

ADELAIDE (AP) — Australian Peter Thomson, with a record-equalling 68, won his third Australian open golf tournament in a playoff-with David Graham at Kooyonga course Sunday.

Graham, with a disastrous seven on the first hole, never recovered and finished with a 74.

Thomson just missed a 12-footer on the 17th and lipped the cup on the 18th to miss the elusive birdie that would have given him the record.

Graham's 74 was his worst for the tournament.

REAL ESTATE FOR SALE

MAURICE H. ROLLINS CONSTRUCTION LIMITED

IT ISN'T TRUE

That only higher income families can afford to buy their own home. If you are in the $5,000. to $7,000. income bracket you can have your own two, three or four bedroom condominium unit. Monthly payments as low as $110.00 which includes interest, principal and taxes. Let us show you our furnished models.

BEAT THE RISE IN INTEREST RATES

See our many houses financed with mortgage bearing 8¼% interest. With a forecast of interests to 10%, the purchase of one of our units could save you nearly $20.00 monthly on payments. We have new houses in the West side in a furnished sub-division. Even the roads are already paved. Possession by 15th of December. Last few houses available in November.

TWO NEW SUB-DIVISIONS

Now is the time to select your lot for early construction in one of our new areas. One is on the West side and one in the East. Each has a couple of lots with large frontages. Act fast if you are serious about a bigger lot.

Afternoon University Course Held

WINNIPEG (CP) — The University of Winnipeg, which began a program of noon-hour courses for downtown office workers last year, is trying this fall to attract more housewives back to school.

The program is being initiated University At Two, offering credit courses from 2 p.m. to 3:30 p.m. at the downtown campus and in neighborhood locations throughout the city.

University officials, who call the program an effort to become closer to the community, say it is designed to attract housewives, senior citizens and shift workers who are unable to attend normal day or evening classes.

Classes are being held twice weekly from September to April.

Those Waiting At Deadline Still Can Vote

OTTAWA (CP) — People lined up outside polling stations when the evening deadline comes still are entitled to vote in the federal general election today.

A spokesman in the chief electoral office confirmed that the situation has not changed from previous elections.

When the 7 p.m. local standard time deadline arrives, people waiting to vote still can do so if deputy returning officers follow instructions, the spokesman said.

Sure Footing

LONDON (CP) — Chiropodist Harold Wildboore advises mothers to send their children barefoot in bare feet, especially on rainy days. Writing in the publication Mother and Child, Wildboore contends that "feet must not be supported to be healthy and strong." Too many shoes, he adds, are "dangerous". Once or two pairs at a time should suffice, as long as they're worn only for formal occasions.

Sheep and lambs 678: No sales.

Nixon Repeats Pledge No Amnesty Planned

WASHINGTON (AP) — Repeating in a radio broadcast the pledge he made to the mother of a soldier killed in Vietnam, President Nixon said Sunday: "There will be no amnesty for draftdodgers and deserters" after the war.

"As this long and difficult war draws to an end, it is time to draw the line on this issue once and for all." Nixon said, after raising the amnesty issue in a paid political broadcast centring on defence policy to "the most single important issue in this election."

The president added:

"Millions of Americans chose to serve their country in Vietnam. Many gave their lives for their choice. The few hundred who refused to serve or who deserted their country must pay a penalty for their choice."

With those words, Nixon repeated a pledge he had given Saturday to an Ohio patriot whose son was killed in Vietnam in 1969. The president has hailed his motorcade who's campaigning in northeastern Ohio when he saw a sign displayed by Mr. and Mrs. Fred Lorence, saying, "No Amnesty," and referring to their dead son.

In the radio broadcast from the White House Library, Nixon said America must maintain its military strength to preserve peace in the world.

Shortly after the president's broadcast, Vice-President Spiro Agnew gave what appeared to be a somewhat different version of the administration's position on amnesty.

He said in an interview:

"We do not flatly reject amnesty in the sense that it traditionally has been used in this country. . . . We won't reject the idea of amnesty boards."

George McGovern, the Democratic presidential nominee, in an interview following Nixon's broadcast, denied that he ever had approved amnesty for deserters.

He added: "But for those who on the grounds of conscience have gone to jail or into exile, I said peace the war is over, the prisoners home, the soldiers back, then we should have amnesty."

Man Dies In Collision

KALADAR (Staff) — A Northbrook man died instantly this morning after his car collided head-on with another vehicle on Highway 41 a mile south of here.

Carl Newton, 33, married, was the lone occupant of the northbound car. He was pronounced dead at the scene by Coroner Dr. W. S. Paterson of Kingston.

A passenger in the other vehicle, Kenneth Wagner, was taken to Kingston General Hospital with undetermined injuries. Driver Jack Libbye of RR4, Napanee, was not injured.

Constable R. A. Shaver of Kaladar OPP said both cars were completely demolished by the impact. The accident occurred on a bend in the road at 1 a.m.

Donations Stolen

The semi-dome held about $10 in coins intended for the Canadian Save the Children Fund.

What the Stars Say

By JEANE DIXON

Tuesday, Oct. 31

Your birthday today: Seek spiritual growth thru meditation and prayer, to balance the restless energies available to you. Personal relations become intense, provocative, require prudent reflection.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Get after the most important work items first. So much is going on you must select carefully.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Project a deep inner serenity; accept others as they are and strive to build cooperation, teamwork.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Newly arrived critics are valuable despite your discomfort—listen carefully. Home living conditions brighten in mood.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Extend a hand to old friends, refresh family ties in few places. Experimental ventures evolve into creative prosperity.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): An optimistic outlook prevails. Family matters are calm enough to make definite plans that will work in later conditions of stress.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Prod yourself to be on time for everything. Settle old accounts. Personal affairs are easier handled despite imposed needless delays.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Move quickly and quietly to get things and people together early in the day. It's a fine time for presenting promotions.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): For once your friends have some accurate estimates, well-structured ideas, albeo they may be difficult to incorporate into your own established program.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Make clear declaration on confused issues. Gaiety consultants a phalanx of planning.

Capricorn (Dec. 23-Jan. 19): Come out of your habitual ruts and hang-outs and find new surroundings, interesting people. Be open for cooperate into your yourself.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The usual end-of-the-month settlement has a special meaning this time. Be sure your obligations are completed or definite terms established.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Opportunity is near at hand. Spread yourself to become a more comfortable participant in family and business life.

Woman Eats Box Of Starch Daily

By O.C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Doctor: I am a woman 22 years old with three children. I eat an eight-ounce box of laundry starch each day.

I have always eaten it off and on, but for the last four months it's gotten to a box a day and it's like I'm on dope!

If I don't have any at home I get very nervous until I get to the store and open the box for a taste even before I get back home.

My weight has jumped from 136 to 162 in the last two months.

What is the matter with me? — L.P.S.

Pica.

Any abnormal appetite such as yours comes under that heading.

Not too strangely, the condition is often associated with anemia, and no wonder.

The eating of starch at the expense of other foods such as proteins, fruits and vegetables is bound sooner or later to have its effects.

Treatment of anemia usually ends the craving, although in your case, from your description of it, a lot of will power will be required also.

Starch contains about 1,600 calories to the pound, so do I have to say more about your weight gain? You may also have a low blood sugar which also would produce a desire for carbohydrates. This could account for the escalation of your starch hunger.

It too could be corrected by more protein and a better balanced diet.

You should not feel the least bit hesitant about seeing your doctor.

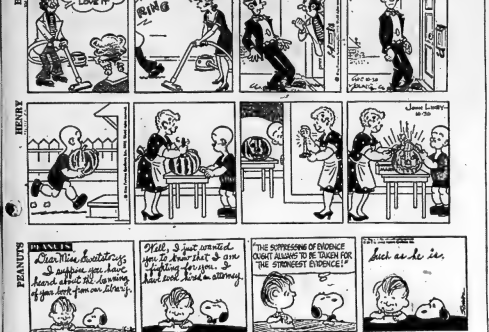
Tell him all about your starch habit and he will help you onto a better diet. You will also be able to get a reading on your blood situation, which ought to be investigated.

Dear Dr. Thostoson: A friend once told me if you shave, your hair will grow back like a man's. Is it true? — J.L.

No. Not unless you are a man.

Dear Dr. Thostoson: Do you recommend surgery or stripping varicose veins? What are the results? Are there any side effects? About pregnancy? Will this cause new ones to break out? — Mrs. E.S.

There are a couple of your suggestions that aren't quite clear to me. Surgery or "stripping" are the same thing. The "stripping" is accomplished by inserting a wire small enough to go above the varicose vein, one below, and then drawing the "stripping" the vein out length-wise, so only two small scars remain afterward.



There are no particular after effects. But getting rid of the varicose veins cannot, of course, guarantee that other veins may not become varicose later on. Pregnancy, because it often partially obstructs the flow of blood through the leg veins, can contribute to formation of more varicose veins. Best precautions are not to gain too much weight, and to avoid tight garments, (girdles, pants, garters) that impede circulation.

It's best to rely on your doctor's judgment as to whether varicose veins are bad enough to warrant stripping. If varicose veins get that bad, there is no other effective treatment.

Court Error

WINNIPEG (CP) — A 43 year-old man who pleaded guilty in city magistrate's court to theft of a meal valued at $1.00 was given a one month suspended sentence and ordered to pay restitution—$1.00. Crown counsel, quickly noticing the discrepancy, asked the magistrate: "Is that a five-cent tip, your worship?"

In a speedy money-saving gesture, the sentence was amended.

Opening lead — nine of hearts.

The Italians are exceptionally fine slam bidders, but in their match against Chile in the 1968 Olympiad, Pabia Ticci and D'Alelio voluntarily undertook a slam in diamonds without revealing what their opponents had three aces!

This extraordinary occurrence came about in perfectly logical fashion. Pabia Ticci's 2 club bid showed 11 to 15 points and a balanced hand. D'Alelio's jump to three diamonds announced a solid or semi-solid suit requiring little or no support.

Three sextumps was a stop-off, but D'Alelio, anticipating a slam if his partner, had either two or three aces, bid four notrump.

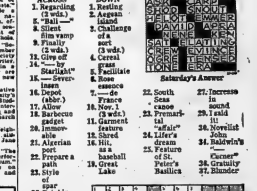
The Italians were playing Roman Blackwood and — in accordance with this convention — the five club response showed either three aces or none. D'Alelio naturally assumed his partner had three and continued with five notrump, asking for kings.

Six clubs similarly showed three kings or none, and D'Alelio concluded that it included none, for on North's bidding he could not possibly have three aces and three kings.

So D'Alelio bid six diamonds, and, for the first and only time in his life, discovered he had misgauged partner's holding by three aces.

West led a heart, dummy's queen losing to the ace, but when East failed to return a spade, A'Alelio went down only one.

At the other table, the Chilean North-South pair got to five diamonds (instead of three notrump) and lost all three aces in the course of the play — so the outcome of all the high-level gymnastics was that the hand was a washout.



Tomorrow: Fancy footwork.

CP News Roundup

Teen-agers Favor Increase In Sex-education Classes

GUELPH, Ont. (CP) — The majority of teen-agers polled during a family life education survey were strongly in favor of more high school sex-education classes, given earlier and in a co-educational format.

Results were released this weekend of the University of Guelph survey in which 16-year students, between the ages of 16 and 19, were questioned in Guelph and Fergus, Ont., high schools.

The students confirmed results of an earlier study which showed girls get more family life education than boys. In the dating category, 71 per cent of boys had low amounts of education compared with 25 per cent of girls. Seventy-four per cent of girls and 37 per cent of boys had studied going steady.

Grade 10 boys had studied more sex education than their elders, possibly because of a new Wellington County program, but girls at all levels had studied more than boys.

The topic least discussed by either sex was homosexuality. Forty-one per cent of the girls and 37 per cent of the boys had studied at least some aspects of homosexuality.

All aspects of sex education were studied later than students wished. By the end of Grad 10, over 70 per cent wanted to learn about attitudes to premarital sex, unmarried parenthood, abortion and homosexuality.

Three-quarters of the students favored mixed classes, 10 per cent were opposed and the rest were undecided.

An overwhelming majority felt teen-agers should know about contraception and disagreed that information leads to experimentation.

Twenty-four per cent of boys and 35 per cent of girls favored trial marriage. Forty-seven per cent of boys and 37 per cent of girls opposed it and the rest were undecided.

The students were questioned last March by Dr. Edward Herold, assistant professor in the university's family services department, Dr. Kathryn Kopf, project consultant, and Maria D e Carlo, graduate research assistant.

Upholds Grants

CHATHAM, Ont. (CP) — The granting of church funds to black liberation groups in Africa was defended Sunday by the Most Rev. E. W. Scott, Anglican primate of Canada.

Speaking to about 350 people at a service of witness, Archbishop Scott said the money was never used for military purposes.

He said grants from the World Council of Churches were used for food, clothing, health care and education.

Smell 'Vile'

NIAGARA-ON-THE-LAKE, Ont. (CP) — The Ontario Municipal Board is expected to set a date soon for a public hearing concerning a by-law passed recently by this municipality to control expansion of existing livestock operations and establishment of new ones.

The by-law was spurred by a confrontation over odors in the fruitbelt area.

On one side of the controversy are livestock producers, the majority of whom are pork producers with high-volume operations.

On the other side are fruit growers and urban residents living in areas that they say at times are dominated by the smells associated with pig and poultry farms. They have complained of the "vile and rank smell—particularly when its of pig manure."

Advice Asked

NEW YORK (AP) — Time magazine says presidential adviser John Ehrlichman asked the FBI for "expert advice to help Republican campaigners" on law and order issues last month and that FBI acting director L. Patrick Gray forwarded the request as an order to 21 FBI field offices in 14 states.

Five Die

MONTREAL (CP) — Five persons were killed and at least 19 injured, one seriously, when fire swept through a rooming house in the city's downtown area late Saturday night.

Only one of the victims, Louise St. Hilaire-Gourgons, 51, of Quebec City, had been identified Sunday night. Mrs. St. Hilaire—Gourgues was visiting her son who lived in the four-storey brick building.

Work to Rule

TORONTO (CP) — A mass meeting of teachers employed by Metropolitan Toronto separate school board Sunday rejected the board's salary offer and agreed to start working to rule next Monday.

Arctic Ditcher

The largest and most powerful pipeline ditching machine in operation, which digs a ditch five feet wide and eight feet deep, was used during construction of Arctic test facility at Sans Sault, N.W.T. Even larger machines will have to be developed for construction of proposed natural gas pipeline to the Mackenzie d e l t a and Alaska. (CP Photo)

Polls Agree

Liberals Lead, Many Undecided

TORONTO (CP) — Canada's two major broadcasting organizations, the CBC and the independent CTV Television network, have carried results of voter-sampling polls for today's election showing the Liberals with a substantial lead among those polled.

The CBC's random sampling shows the Liberals ahead of the Conservatives by 12 percentage points while the CTV canvass done by a research organization indicates a Liberal lead of nine points.

In each case, there is a large proportion of uncommitted voters.

With 31 per cent of those sampled saying they had not made up their minds, the CBC's figures showed 31 per cent favoring the Liberals, 19 for the Conservatives, 13 for the New Democratic Party and three for Social Credit.

Atlantic: Conservative 32, Liberal 23, NDP six (38).

Quebec: Liberal 35, Conservative eight, Social Credit, NDP three (44).

Ontario—Liberal 28, Conservative 24, NDP 17 (3).

Prairies: Conservative 30, Liberal 22, NDP 13, Social Credit four (20).

British Columbia: Liberal 31, Conservative 19, NDP 21, Social Credit one (38).

Winners Get Good Jobs

OTTAWA (CP) — Motives of candidates seeking election to Parliament today doubtless are primarily political, but the 264 lucky winners also step into high-paying jobs.

As in some other industries right now, competition for the jobs is tough: There is a queue of 1,117 applicants for the 264 positions.

The rewards, apart from political influence, include a paycezle and other perquisites that put the MP up there in the top echelon of income-earners.

Straight salary is $18,000 a year and there is an additional $8,000 for expenses that is untaxed—making the whole bundle equivalent to a fully-taxable annual income of about $32,000.

Among the other material benefits, MPs receive free train passes and a quota of free air-line trips between their constituencies and Ot.awa.

Other items: An office on Parliament Hill and a secretary without charge, free cooking privileges and cut-rate meals in three parliamentary restaurants.

If the upcoming MP also is a member of the winning party that forms the government, it stands a chance of landing even higher-paying jobs.

Being picked for cabinet can add $15,000 a year to the taxable income, $2,000 to the tax-free expense fund, for a total of $33,000 plus $10,000. Ministers of state get slightly less, the prime minister $42,000 in taxable income plus $10,000 tax free.

More than two dozen MPs also are in line for jobs as parliamentary secretaries to cabinet ministers. Those chosen for such jobs by the prime minister receive a $4,000 boost in taxable pay.

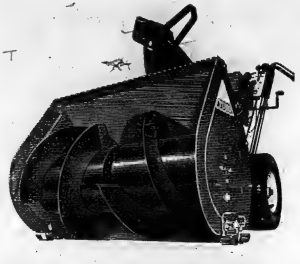
So not every snowmobile owner can rate high as a mechanic.

But then, his aptitude need necessarily never be tested.

The secret: Regular maintenance.

Yet, there are some useful tricks every operator should know to assure top performance and maybe save inconvenience.

This applies specifically to practising a regular spark plug test.



Small as it is, the spark plug is the engine's life source. No engine will run better than its spark plug will allow.

Checking a spark plug is a simple operation. Simply remove the insulated high tension lead from the contact of the plug, then remove the plug with the spark plug wrench supplied in the tool kit.

The first health check of the plug is to see that it is clean and dry. A piece of emery paper can be used to remove carbon deposits, and blown air or a dry rag will remove excess moisture. Be sure to remove any dust left by the emery paper as this is metallic, and would cause the plug to short. The electrode must be precisely the right distance apart, as specified in the manual, and the gap can be checked with a relatively inexpensive spark plug feeler gauge.

As a final check, replace the high tension lead socket on the plug and place the plug so that its metal threads touch the block of the engine. A pull of the starter cord or just a touch of the electric starter should produce one or two strong sparks. If the spark is not visible or appears weak, replace the plug.

When installing the plug, be sure the metal gasket is in place, and again make absolutely certain that the gap is precisely that recommended by the manufacturer. As added insurance, always carry one or two spare plugs on your machine.

For a clean shave, every time.

When you plunk down good money for a snow thrower, you don't want to follow it around with a shovel. That's why Toro developed the pivoting scraper blade that has made our two-stage units so popular. Only Toro has it.

You can choose from three models, with 5, 7 or 8 horses. All have the exclusive drum-type auger for better performance, especially in heavy wet snow. All offer easy steering with special clutches or wheel lock-outs. All have friction disc transmissions — three speeds forward, with reverse spring-loaded to neutral.

The 5 and 7 horse units are 26 inches wide; the 8 takes a 32 inch cut. Controls are between the handles for safety and convenience.

Hastings Is Snowmobilers' Heaven

With scarcely fanfare enough to be heard over the next snowbank, one of the largest organized snowmobiling areas in southern Ontario has evolved in Hastings County.

And it's growing every year.

This winter, snowmobilers can take to a network of carefully-marked, well-tended trails meandering through the central townships of the county and stretching south to Deseronto.

It's a major accomplishment of the tourism-promoting Highlands of Hastings Tourist Region and the Centre Hastings Winter Sports, an association of mid-county municipalities north of Highway 7.

For the snowmobiler it means being able to take to trails that are well-defined, posted to show where he's at, where the closest communities are, and knowing there's an organized first-aid system on call in case of emergency.

Trails are cleared and maintained regularly — all across land on which permission to snowmobile has been obtained from private owners, government and railroads.

It all started four years ago when the Highlands of Hastings group got together with the townships to lay out the project.

The network of trails has been spreading steadily ever since. Last year, it received a big boost with a $7,000 Local Incentives Program grant.

Right now it's probably "the largest area of its kind for snowmobiling, certainly in southern Ontario," says Gordon Bennett, Marmora Insurance, who is both president of the tourist group and secretary of the sports area association.

"I can't think of another place where you can snowmobile such a stretch as from Deseronto to Coe Hill." (The distance by highway is about 90 miles.)

Prince Edward Hotbed of Snow mobilers

PICTON (Staff) — First trail marker this year for Prince Edward snowmobilers on a hike through snow country was a trade show sponsored by the Picton Racing committee at the County Centre.

Because of the wide local interest in this winter sport, the county has a number of dealers who participate annually in this display of snow machines, all-terrain vehicles, snowmobiling jogs and equipment.

The trade show was highly successful and John Silbcherpe, a spokesman for the racing committee said this week plans will be made soon for snowmobile race meets here.

The first snowmobile races in Prince Edward were organized by the chamber of commerce. The popularity of the meets was evident as crowds filled the grandstand at Picton fairgrounds to watch competitors vying for trophies and cash prizes.

The Picton Racing Committee now has assumed sponsorship of the snowmobile race meets and has held several. A variety of classes is open to race enthusiasts and participation in the events each winter is a

Awareness of snowmobile trail rides have been recognized as highlights of Prince Edward County's winter carnival for the past two years and spark festivities with excitement.

When snowmobiles first appeared in Prince Edward County, problems followed in some areas where residents protested the noise of the machines, and possible dangers for skiers, tri considered as [illegible] snowmobiles on town streets, but each time large delegations of concerned enthusiasts of the sport attended council to protest.

A snowmobiler's code of ethics was drawn up and clubs began to form in an effort to control enjoyment of the sport by eliminating "mavericks".

One of the clubs to evolve, was the Picton Bay Snow Riders, winners of a Successful Farming Magazine award recognizing their outstanding public service to the sport and to the public.

Secretary Brian York said the group formed in 1970 and now has 35 members who meet monthly. President is Neil Shaw of Picton and vice-president is Orval Robinson, Picton. Treasurer is Barbara Robinson.

The club features a family membership at $5 and a single membership at $2.50.

Frequently 20 machines group for a trail ride on a sparkling winter's night.

Last year when old man winter begrudged the Snow Riders a single snowflake for several weeks, they trailered their machines north to continue enjoyment of the sport.

The Snow Riders also launched a drive to promote co-operation with all land owners to avoid complaints. Safe snowmobiling and a sound code of ethics were urged and achieved among members.

Club members are unofficially affiliated with the Picton detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police, by volunteering their services for rescue work and assistance in emergencies.

This week a constable from the local detachment will address snowmobilers in the group concerning safety patrol, rescue work and protection of land owners.

The Picton Bay Snow Riders hope to have four members trained in patrol work. These snowmobilers could learn the identity of offending snow machine operators and inform police.

In its drive to achieve safe snowmobiling, the Picton club has forwarded a brief to a select committee of the government now studying snowmobiling and ATV. Possibly bylaws will be formulated for examination following a review of all briefs submitted to the committee.

Mr. York said the Snow Riders this year will continue with trail rides, social events, and strong support of snowmobile safety.

He explained one of the questions asked by the legislature deals with serious or possibly fatal accidents within clubs. The Picton Bay Snow Riders have recorded no mishaps while enjoying their sport.

A second snowmobile club is active in the Wellington area and several other small organized groups ride together in the county each winter.

Spares Helpful On Trail

Extra parts and equipment.

Those are essentials for enjoyable — and safe — snowmobile trips, say safety officials.

To be on the sure side, an extra drive-belt should be carried. Its importance is something as basic as a spare tire with an automobile — and, should be on hand even for casual snowmobiling.

So should spark plugs, with the necessary installation tools.

For more distant safaris the suggested safety list is longer.

For instance:

Snowshoes or skis for each passenger can be just as necessary as lifejackets in a boat, if stranded in the wilderness.

An emergency fuel supply can also avert problems.

A lightweight block - and-tackle with about 50 feet of nylon rope can sometimes mean the difference between abandoning a machine that's badly stuck or continuing the safari.

Smaller items should include a map of the area to be travelled, compass, hand axe, hunting knife, waterproof container with matches, a small pan or kettle, compact first aid kit, small, waterproofed tarpaulin and survival blanket.

For food, dehydrated emergency rations are suggested, along with tea bags. Black tea is said to be more energizing than coffee for most people.

Code Proposed

A code for snowmobilers was proposed by safety officials in North America last year.

Designed to encourage safe use of snowmobiles, the code says:

I will be a good sportsman. I recognize that people judge all snowmobile owners by my actions. I will use my influence with other snowmobile owners to promote sportsmanlike conduct.

I will not litter trails or camping areas. I will not pollute streams or lakes.

I will not damage living trees, shrubs or other natural features.

I will respect other people's property and rights.

I will lend a helping hand when I see someone in distress. I will make myself and my vehicle available to assist search and rescue parties.

I will not interfere with or harass hikers, skiers, snowshoers, ice fishermen, or other winter sportsmen. I will respect their rights to enjoy our recreation facilities.

I will know and obey all federal, state and local rules regulating the operation of snowmobiles in areas where I use my vehicle. I will inform public officials when using public lands.

I will not harass wildlife. I will avoid areas posted for the protection or feeding of wildlife.

I will stay on marked trails or marked roads open to snowmobiles. I will avoid country travel unless specifically authorized.

More Snowmobile Clubs Are Needed

There may be safety in numbers.

But the fewer the numbers the greater the safety as far as Belleville's organized snowmobilers are concerned.

As a result, the city's only two snowmobile clubs keep memberships down to around 40 families.

The reasons are obvious, say Bill Belch, immediate past president of the Bay of Quinte Snowmobile Club and Ray Lucas, president of the Lonesome Riders Club.

Fewer machines means less complications with supervision and a heightened safety factor when club members take to the open spaces.

Safety is a key reason why such clubs got started in the first place.

There was also the need to place the sport on a more organized basis for its enthusiasts. Many snowmobilers rapidly made themselves — and the sport — unpopular by bad habits. They failed to seek permission to cross farmlands; often they simply disposed of litter wherever they happened to be; slewing noisily along country roadways, seemingly regardless of safety rules or plain courtesy.

Clubs gave the recreation the organization it needed.

For instance, Bill Belch says he can spend up to six hours getting permission from landowners to cross properties before his club sets out on a safari. But it's a chore "well worth it" and as a result of ob-

Snow Is Starter

The first snowfall is when traffic starts to slow down.

It's also when snowmobile sales start to speed up.

And it's that first fall that most Belleville - area dealers seem to be waiting for this year to be certain just how big sales are going to be.

A quick survey shows a mixed outlook on prospects among area dealers.

Most seem to estimate their sales will be up over last year — although there's uncertainty on whether this winter could have boom proportions

Not that most hrd any complaints.

"For me this promises to be another banner year," said one Belleville dealer. "People are looking and buying already. I'm ahead over this time last year."

Another said he had already sold "quite a few" more machines than this time last year — though not as many as expected.

He believed a tapering - off was possible in the big boom times snowmobile sales have enjoyed in the past three years.

For one thing the novelty is wearing off snowmobiling, he believed.

A Deseronto dealer also believed higher licence fees (up five times to $10) and insurance rates factors in lowering the boom.

The owner of a Trenton outlet believed the boom would be reshaped into a steady sales climb.

Sales had picked up "tremendously" in the past week and he looked for "a good year".

This year there's a bigger variety of machines to choose from, more safety factors.

And, as they waized by their machines all the dealers agreed: It needs the right kind of weather to start people thinking seriously of snowmobiling. That first snowflake will set the scene for higher sales.

Rules for the Lonesome Riders, for instance, forbid alcohol and littering.

To emphasize their seriousness of purpose, both clubs have made various community gestures.

The Bay of Quinte group has been involved with school safety courses.

The Lonesome Riders have posted warning signs in farm fields seeded for winter and have offered the services to any farmer in Thurlow township who wants it.

There are thousands of snowmobiles operating every winter now in the Belleville area. The number is still growing.

What's needed, both club officials agree, is more clubs to get the sport more organized — to the benefit of all.

Sense Means Safety

Snowmobiling safety can be easily achieved, if all commonsense cautions are followed.

Here are some tips:

Don't tail-gate. Avoid injury to yourself, to others, and to your machine by maintaining a safe interval between you and the vehicle in front, and handling your snowmobile at a sane, "stoppable" speed.

Here's trouble: Don't cut across another's right of way. If in doubt, throttle down, or stop altogether. Carelessness pays no dividends. Watch out for the other guy.

Knowing ice conditions on any lake or river is a must. Don't attempt to cross before checking the thickness of the ice. Your life may depend on it. This problem is the biggest known cause of snowmobiling fatalities. Ask people acquainted with an area whether the ice is safe before taking your machine on it.

Never use a railroad right of way for snowmobile travel. You cannot hear trains approaching from behind and could run head on into a train on a curve. When crossing railroad tracks, the rules are similar to crossing a highway. Shut off your machine before crossing so that you can hear an approaching train. Cross at a 90 degree angle.

Never jump a snowbank before first finding out what may be on the other side. You may be jumping into the path of another snowmobile, onto a group of playing children, or into the middle of a highway.

Don't be a show off. Excessive speed threatens others, can result in an over-turned machine with accompanying risk of personal injury.

Snowmobiling brings many new winter freedoms. Damaging private property is not one of them. Don't cut fences or trample shrubs. Get permission to use private property for snowmobiling.

A snowmobile is as safe as the person operating it. The key to safe operation is your knowledge of the vehicle, good judgment, and courtesy. Many of the do's set forth are self-evident.

Do use a tow-bar when pulling a trailer. Rigid hitches prevent tailgate collisions on sudden stops, provide better control on turns, prevent risky trailer side-sway.

Nighttime snowmobiling is delightful. But, reduced visibility makes it imperative you do check your lights before starting. (Don't depend on that moon!) Avoid river and lake crossings at night and don't break new trails. Follow marked trails to keep clear of barbwire fences and guy wires. A majority of snowmobile accidents occur at night.

Come to a complete stop before crossing a rail street or highway where it is permitted. Cross only at a 90 degree angle to the roadway, and remember that traffic always has the right of way.

If you are travelling with a companion, it is always added safety insurance to have one person watch for traffic while the other person crosses with the snowmobile.

Fashions Right On For Sport

Young skiers, snowmobilers and snowman-builders can look forward to blizzardy weather with more than the usual glee this year.

Snow and ski fashions are live'v and attractive — the added plus, of course, in Downtown Belleville being lightweight warmth.

Perkas over warm-up pants or stretch ski pants are found in to-the-waist lengths as well as hip lengths.

New look is the "vest" look. This sleek pro-looking fashion is also available for every other member of the young sportster's family.

Plushy hood linings are additional chill - chasers. The same warm fleece also lines boots.

Mitts, boots and helmets can be, completely co-ordinated — an action-in-the-snow look.

The basic nylon outershell, with its warm lining, is still the coziest and most water-re-sistant style around — keeping Moms and kids happy.

There's a whole fleet of bright colors to match each individual taste. Many patterns and amusing knee-or-elbow patches help brighten the slopes.

Great knit pullovers and knit suits galore are among the fast-paced fashions for small guys and gals.

Little girls who look forward to after-dusk fondueing will find long, colorful skirts to pop over bodysuits.

Patterned knit boot socks are certain to be warming additions for all siblings.

For Snowmobiles Ice Treacherous

The Quinte bush — sporting ground for increasing hundreds of snowmobilers — is studded with lakes and waterways.

This underscores the needs for added caution every snow machine sportsman must exercise — particularly as the season opens and ends.

Freeze-up and break-up are the times when ice can take its greatest toll.

Soon winter begins. So does freeze-up — a time when, the Ontario Safety League has warned snowmobilers to avoid hazards in venturing onto freshly-laden lakes and rivers.

These cautions should include checking the thickness of the ice and obtaining information from knowledgeable, local authorities on areas which may be dangerous due to the fast currents or other causes. Remember, there is the weight of the machine as well as that of the passengers which can easily mount up to 500 or 600 pounds.

Frozen lakes and rivers often afford wide open space for snowmobiling long before the first snowfall. . . . But special skills and techniques must be learned through long experience before higher than slow throttle settings can be used. A 40 mph spin or cross-ways slide can spell disaster if you hit rough ice or even the smallest obstacle. Never "stunt" on ice covered surfaces!

Add to this the stress of a fast moving vehicle carrying this weight over an uneven surface resulting, at times in twice the weight of the machine and passengers being exerted downward — over half a ton.

Taking all this into consideration, safety officials claim that six inches of ice is the minimum for safe snowmobiling on frozen surfaces. And just because there is six inches of ice within a few feet of the shore.

Tallies In 15 Seats Queried

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

There's bound to be one recount in the aftermath of Monday's federal election and there probably will be about 15.

The election that was a cliffhanger in national seat totals had a good clutch of ultra-tight individual races as well.

Under changes made to election law in 1970, an automatic recount system is in effect for any riding where the winner had less than a 25-vote margin.

For any margin wider than that, the candidate who wants the recount has to post a $250 deposit.

The only completed vote count early today that showed an under-25 margin was in Ontario riding, where Conservative Frank McGee finished 12 votes ahead of Liberal Norman Cafik.

But there were some other real squeakers:

QUEBEC

—Chambly-Verchères—Social Credit candidate Gilles Caouette held an eight-vote lead over Liberal Jean-Guy Alain with two polls still to count.

—Drummond—Social Crediter J. M. Boisvert held a 123-vote lead over Liberal Cabinet Minister Jean-Luc Pepin with one poll to count.

—Montreal Ste. Marie—Liberal Raymond Dupont won by 30 votes over Conservative Georges Valade.

—Portneuf—Social Crediter Roland Godin won by 277 votes over Liberal Claude Bernard.

—Bellechasse—Social Crediter Adrien Lambert held a 1,017-vote lead over Liberal Pierre Sevenier with 71 polls to count.

—Compton—Social Crediter Henry Latulippe held a 93-vote lead over Liberal Claude Tessier with one poll to count.

ONTARIO

—Toronto Trinity—Conservative Paul Hellyer won by 183 votes over Liberal Aideen Nicholson.

—Sault Ste. Marie—New Democrat Cyril Symon won by 29,916 votes over Liberal C. Terrence Murphy.

—Kitchener—Liberal Keith Hymmen won by 259 votes over Conservative R. G. R. Lawrence.

MANITOBA

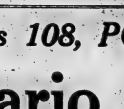
—Churchill—New Democrat Don Duff held a 135-vote lead over Conservative Keith Taylor with 27 polls to count.

SASKATCHEWAN

—Meadow Lake—New Democrat Elias Nedoly held a 16-vote lead over Conservative Albert Cadieu with seven polls to count.

—Moose Jaw—Conservative Douglas Neil won by 286 votes over New Democrat John Skoberg.

BRITISH COLUMBIA



—Okanagan-Kootenay—Liberal Douglas Stewart won by 77 votes over Conservative Howard Johnston.

'No Tokens' For NDP

TORONTO (CP) — Pleased but cautious after leading the New Democratic Party to a record number of Commons seats leader David Lewis pledged Monday to support any minority government that would adequately tackle Canada's economic problems.

He wouldn't go for tokens," the grizzled, 63-year-old party leader told a midnight news conference in his York South riding here.

But any government that would deal with unemployment, the high cost of living and the system of giving big companies tax and grant breaks, would receive support from the 30 elected members in his party.

Balance of Power Held by 30 NDPers

By STEWART MacLEOD
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The Conservatives blazed back at the Liberals Monday, forcing the federal general election into a neck-and-neck struggle that will leave the outcome in doubt for days, if not for weeks.

As the day-after-the-night-before wore on, the only certainty was that one of the two old-line parties will form a minority government. The Conservatives overtook an NDP leader in the doubtful western riding of Churchill before noon EST and left the two parties facing a potential deadlock — 108 seats each.

Social Credit was declared a winner in one of the four seats that remained in doubt when the parties bedded down Monday and led in another. New Democrats led in the remaining riding.

This was the standing of parties at 11:30 a.m. EST:

	1972	1968	1963
Lib.	108	155	133
PC	107	72	97
NDP	30	22	21
SC	14	14	14
Others	2	1	2
Distl	3	—	—

Vote counting in the doubtful Manitoba riding of Churchill resumed today, giving the Conservatives a slight edge over the NDP. Another western riding, Saskatchewan's Meadow Lake, continued to have an NDP lead.

Churchill was declared a Social Credit victory today and that party maintained its lead in the remaining doubtful Quebec seat of Bellechasse.

The Liberals, who left the last Parliament with 147 seats, lost four cabinet ministers— Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin, Labor Minister Martin O'Connell, Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson and Minister of State Pat Mahoney—as the Conservatives, along with the three other opposition parties, flexed more muscle.

It was the Conservatives who sent the Liberals reeling, despite the fact that the Liberals scored a massive victory in Quebec and picked up three additional seats in the Atlantic provinces.

In Ontario, where the Liberals elected 84 MPs in 1968, they ran into a revitalized Conservative opposition and ended up with only 32 members. The Conservatives, who elected only 17 in the last general election, came bouncing back with 41. And the NDP, which last time elected six, this time took 11.

And af er Ontario, the Conservatives blazed across the West like a prairie fire, burning up all Liberal hopes for another majority government. Alberta was the high point of the Conservative revival, as they took all 19 seats.

With 56 seats in Quebec, the Liberals will have more than half of their parliamentary strength from that province.

News Briefs

Bilingualism Issue

WINNIPEG (CP) — Defeated Liberals and victorious Conservatives agreed Monday that the Trudeau government's policy on bilingualism played a large part in the outcome of the federal election in Manitoba.

Many Votes Rejected

CHELMSFORD, Ont. (CP) — Gaston Serre, Nickel Belt member for the Liberals in the last Parliament, said Monday he would call for a recount in his loss to New Democrat John Rodriguez in the federal election. Mr. Serre lost by just under 2,000 votes, but he said that more than 10 per cent of the votes cast were rejected in the counting.

Caouette Is Willing To Back Either Party

ROUYN, Que. (CP) — Real Caouette, federal leader of the Social Credit party, said Monday night he is willing to support either the Liberals or the Conservatives as the next government.

Mr. Caouette was convincingly re-elected in his own riding of Temiscamingue by more than 8,000 votes, the biggest majority since he entered the House of Commons in 1948.

Mr. Caouette said he recognizes that the New Democratic Party and not Social Credit holds the balance of power.

Quinte Stays Staunchly Tory

Ellis, Hees, Alkenbrack Have Tory Neighbors

By HARRY MULHALL, Staff Reporter

The Quinte ridings stayed staunchly Tory last night.

Despite at least two determined challenges, the constituencies remained unshaken as citadels of Conservative political support.

More than that.

Synopsis: One of the coldest and wettest Octobers on record ends today with forecasts of chilly and damp weather over western Ontario late today and spread across the Toronto area by evening.

THE WEATHER

Easily retained by the Progressive Conservatives were their traditional political bases of Prince Edward-Hastings, Hastings and Frontenac - Lennox and Addington.

To the west, former Ontario attorney general Allan Lawrence won Northumberland-and-Durham from Liberal support.

To the east, Kingston and the Islands — only recently held by former finance minister Edgar Benson — also was swept into a now solid Conservative bloc fronting the east-central Lake Ontario shoreline.

For Quinte voters the core of attention centred in Hastings and Prince Edward - Hastings, where, despite Conservative ascendancy, Liberal candidates made a determined drive to win election.

But campaigns were frustrated as voters returned a veteran, national politician in one constituency and a newcomer to federal politics in the other: George Hees in Prince Edward-Hastings, former Belleville mayor Jack Ellis in Hastings.

Their victories quashed rerlute campaigning by Liberals George Cunningham in Prince Edward - Hastings and Frank Follwell in Hastings. Also brushed aside were New Democratic Party candidates Richard Lunn and Eldridge Brethour.

The votes:

Prince Edward - Hastings — Hees, 19,818; Cunningham, 16,273. Lenn, 3,178.

Hastings — Ellis, 16,673; Follwell, 11,495; Brethour, 3,381.

In both ridings the trend of victory was defined soon after the 7 p.m. closing of the polls.

In little more than 20 minutes Mr. Hees had built a solid lead. In two hours he was ahead 4,200 votes.

For his Liberal opponent it meant a swift end to one of the longest, most ebullient campaigns staged in the Quinte ridings.

Mr. Cunningham was the first candidate in Canada nominated to contest the election — in October, 1968. His campaigning after the election was called two months ago has been energetic and colorful as he stimulated for the second time to wrest the vibing from an opponent of national stature and a former Conservative cabinet minister.

In Hastings, campaigning by both Liberal and Conservative candidates was a determined battle for the ballot even though it outwardly displayed little fuss and furor.

Fueling interest was the fact that Mr. Follwell, a veteran politician, twice successively elected to parliament until his defeat in 1957 was challenging a newcomer to the arena of senior political affairs.

It was the first time in years, Hastings watched an election being fought without an incumbent — following the recent retirement of Conservative MP Lee Grills, first elected in 1957.

Nonetheless, in Hastings also Liberal hopes quickly dissipated with the close of polls.

About 40 minutes after balloting ended Mr. Ellis had a 1,200-vote lead. Before an hour was out it was up to 2,100; before two hours, 2,500.

The Ellis sweep extended throughout the riding — from the thinly-populated northern communities to the big Belleville urban voting bloc — representing more than half the riding's votes.

Meantime, in Frontenac-Lennox and Addington, Douglas Alkenbrack, the Conservative MP who has raised controversy over bilingualism in the civil service and allegations about administration of Millhaven penitentiary, was rolling up an easy majority in a riding that reaches from the Bay of Quinte to the Ottawa Valley.

The blunt - talking politician polled 15,633 votes against Liberal Peter MacKinnon's 8,481, and 2,862 for NDP candidate, Mrs. Mary Lloyd-Jones.

And, as the Quinte Conservatives coasted to victory, fellow party candidates were ensconcing themselves as new political neighbors.

— In Northumberland-Durham, Mr. Lawrence defeated Liberal Russell Honey by 2,794.

In Kingston and the Islands Flora MacDonald over 22,820 votes for the Conservatives against 14,096 for Liberal John Hazlett and 5,548 for Lars Thompson, NDP.

Hastings: To The Victor Goes The Cheering

Cheery party supporters, jubilant with his election night win, greet Jack Ellis as he arrives at Belleville campaign headquarters last night after his sweeping victory that retained Hastings for the Progressive Conservatives.

With the new MP-elect is his wife, Jean. Beside her in the crowd of greeters is Lee Grills, whose retirement from politics opened the way for the successful Ellis bid for the riding.

Reg Dunham, Corps of Helpers

Reg Dunham, returning officer for Hastings riding, awaits the result of another poll. Mr. Dunham handed the count to his wife, Norena, who compiled an official tally. Handling the phones are, from left, Betty Dobson, Diane Raycroft and Gloria Paisley.

A Flurry, Then Over

By BRIAN AMARON
Staff Reporter

Excitement was brief in the returning offices of Hastings and Prince Edward-Hastings ridings last night.

In Belleville and Trenton, the initial returns told the story — Conservatives all the way.

At Hastings headquarters, the first phone rang 15 minutes after the polls had closed. The count to his wife, Norena, who compiled an official tally. Handling the phones are, from left, Betty Dobson, Diane Raycroft and Gloria Paisley.

George Hees was off to a flying start, with 330 votes to one for Liberal George Cunningham and 13 for the NDP's Richard Lamb.

While the business of recording votes went on without difficulty, cars began to turn to the radio where news of a tight national contest offered more in the way of speculation.

Both offices — in Belleville, a Front Street business room, and in Trenton, a converted garage — were populated only by electoral personnel and members of the news media. A delegation from Madoc paraded into the Hastings office at 11:30 p.m. but by then, the vote was in and workers were relaxing.

Returning officers, Reg Dunham of Hastings riding and Mrs. Grace Radcliffe, in Prince Edward-Hastings both considered themselves lucky when the last returns came in shortly after 11 p.m.

For them the election began two months ago — as well candidates prominently indicated. Labelled Aide-Memoires, the calendars were issued to all returning officers to provide a day-by-day schedule. But judging by the number of additional scrawls on each calendar, it was obvious many days had stretched into the night.

Mrs. Radcliffe was philosophical about the role she played.

"Everything's tickety-boo," she said between phone calls. "We are having an election here today just like the rest of Canada. That was our aim."

Together with election clerk Joan Longworth and aide Jackie Latham, Mrs. Radcliffe took calls from 293 polls handing the results to young volunteers who printed them on a large wall-board.

This election was a sombre affair for Mrs. Radcliffe, however. The husband of one of her poll clerk's died Monday morning and Mrs. Radcliffe was feeling the loss.

"You want to go and comfort your friend and here we are cooped up," she said.

Her day began on a bad footing when she received a phone call at 6:30 a.m. informing her that a district returning officer in Athol Township was being rushed to hospital. Mrs. Radcliffe succeeded in finding additional help and the poll opened on time at 8 a.m.

In Belleville, Hastings official Reg Dunham faced only one crisis. A poll clerk slept in, but the snoozing vote-counter was quickly alerted and told to proceed to his station.

Mr. Dunham took a hand in every aspect of the returning office; answering phones, punching calculators and storing sealed ballot boxes.

He was helped by his wife, Norena, who recorded votes, and three women, Betty Dobson, Diane Raycroft and Gloria Paisley, who took results from 198 polls over the phone.

Mr. Dunham had his own explanation for the smaller turnout in yesterday's election.

"Too quiet a campaign," he said, noting almost 10,000 persons had failed to exercise their franchise in Hastings alone.

Mr. Dunham and Mrs. Radcliffe will still be busy for another two weeks. They must conduct official tabulations, and pay their employees before stepping down.

The worst flaw for Mrs. Radcliffe is filling out forms.

"You know how it is with government," she said. "Everything's in triplicate."

Except the winning candidates.

Deer Dents Driver

BRIGHTON (Staff) — Two deer caused a single-car accident at the intersection of Highway 30 and Brighton township's third concession north of here Monday.

Douglas Hunter Dorland, RR 7, Brighton, told provincial police he was driving on the concession road when the deer stabbed from nearby woods in front of his car.

He shrieked to avoid hitting the animals and lost control of his automobile, ending in a ditch.

His wife, Reita Mae, was slightly injured but not sent to hospital.

The deer fled into the woods.

Damage to the car has been estimated at $250.

CARD OF THANKS

"I would like to thank my relatives, friends and neighbors for flowers, gifts and cards while I patient in Belleville General Hospital. Special thanks to Dr. Dr. Doyle Kelly, Harris and Meadowvale, nurses and staff of 4A, Belleville General Hospital, and Nurse Smith, Queen's Park Care Centre, Belleville.
— Gladys Martin.

Orr Seeks Re-election

With the federal-election at last out of the way, interest now swings back to the local scene and the upcoming municipal vote on December 4.

In Belleville the mayoralty race apparently is to be a straight fight between incumbent Dr. J. Russell Scott and Alderman Robin Jeffrey, but the aldermanic field still remains a question.

Until this week interest in the aldermanic race has been quiet with only two would-be councillors — neither of them members of this year's body — having announced their candidacy.

Today, however, Alderman E. A. Orr, five-year veteran of the council body, announced that he would seek re-election.

Alderman Orr said that while he had been tempted to retire, the city's growth and progress in recent years had brought problems that can only be classed as "unfinished business".

"I should like very much to share in the task of bringing these solutions to a satisfactory and acceptable conclusion," he said.

Alderman Orr cites the city's inadequate official plan and its attendant zoning by-laws as one of Belleville's chronic problems.

He said the seemingly endless delays in the presentation of a new and up-to-date plan have been frustrating to a great many citizens.

Other necessities, according to the alderman, are improved traffic arteries, including a new bridge over the Moira and a Cannifton Road grade separation, continued stimulation of industrial and commercial development and provision of more attractive parks and recreational facilities.

Glad Tidings from Gerry Brennan

Jeffrey Offering Three I's

Mayoralty candidate Robin Jeffrey kicked off her local election campaign last night by presenting a four - plank platform to the public.

The alderman promised to be a full-time mayor, accessible to all. She called for more playgrounds and open-areas and a plan for city beautification and pledged to reinforce the programs of volunteers in the community.

Ald. Jeffrey started her trek down the campaign trail at a dinner meeting of Quinte Kiwanis Club Monday night.

After five years on city council she is running for mayor because it was time to "either move up or out".

"I am convinced that a community must get the ideas of dozens of different council members over a few years, instead of the limited number who now comb the back. I want to see a process — like the waves on the seashore — they rush in and break, making way for the next."

Ald. Jeffrey said that as mayor, she would be in her office daily, the same as city hall administrative staff.

"I give assurance that the government I lead will listen to the voices of anguish, the injured voices, the anxious voices, the voices that have despaired to being heard."

She told the Kiwanians that she opposes city government taking over projects when voluntary individual effort can do the job. She promised full co-operation from the city in aiding civic-minded groups of volunteers.

"I am very conscious that Belleville does not have enough parks, playgrounds or 'open spaces,' said Ald. Jeffrey. "We have not reached the point that Belleville might be getting 'over-parked' as the present mayor has stated. The eyesores that still exist in our city must be cleaned up and beautified. An intensified program of tree planting should be implemented to restore the once beautiful tree-lined streets of our city."

The central core of Belleville should be a place to relax and a place to enjoy, she maintained. If elected, Ald. Jeffrey pledged to make the core of the city a "source of pride and pleasure".

Her campaign is based on three "I's" — integrity, insight and ideas, said Ald. Jeffrey.

"I would be the first to agree it would be foolish for anyone to vote for me for mayor just because I am a woman," Ald. Jeffrey told her listeners. "This would smack of tokenism. At the same time it would be foolish to vote against me for that reason, too. We need to draw upon the entire reservoir of talent and skill found in both men and women."

Returning Offices Roomy

TRENTON (Staff) — In the fast-pace return of results from 203 polls across Prince Edward - Hastings riding, the 200 Dundas Street West returning offices here went almost unnoticed with the exception of a handful of official workers, and members of the press.

None of the three candidates, winner George Hees, Liberal George Cunningham or NDP'er Richard Lunn put in an appearance there, preferring to stay with their respective party workers.

There was more work to do for this federal election. The number of polls increased by 85 from 1968. This year, the figure was increased from 188 to 273 with addition of five nursing home polls, and finally up to 203 with a split of 22 polls plus eight advance.

Even the number of voters increased, with 8,865 more eligible, many of whom were in the 18 to 21 age bracket, voting for the first time.

Grand total for the riding in 1972 was 46,038, compared to 37,228 in 1968. A total of 33,272 voters cast their ballots this year, as compared to 29,077 in 1968.

And the job for the returning officer Mrs. Grace Radcliffe and assistants isn't over yet. Final tabulations still have to be made and then there's the official count on Nov. 3 to be made.

Hong Kong Leads Off

Winter is wanderlust season and Belleville's travel lovers get their first taste of distant shores Thursday in a film journey to Hong Kong.

Britain's oriental colony is the subject of a film by Raphael Green. The show, in Centennial Secondary School Auditorium, inaugurates the 29th season of the Belleville Kiwanis Club's Travel and Adventure series.

Photographer Green has a considerable experience with Asian locales. His job as education staff cameraman at the University of Minnesota has taken him to Manchuria, China, Japan, Afghanistan and Russia.

He was previously employed by the U.S. government to do reparations surveys in North Korea.

Mr. Green will be on hand to describe the charms of Hong Kong. The film begins at 8:15 p.m.

TRENTON (Staff) — According to a member of the Trenton Parking Authority, no person, including town employees, will be given permits to park in the proposed municipal office - parking garage complex the town hopes to construct on the site of Trenton's former post office.

This subject has remained a topic of concern for many Trenton residents, since the Ontario Municipal Board held a hearing into the matter Sept. 28. The OMB decision on the hearing has not yet been received by town officials.

Many residents believed most of the nearly 61 parking spaces would be given to town employees, thereby defeating the original idea of constructing two levels of indoor parking to improve downtown parking problems.

The parking authority spokesman said: "All three permits are issued to town officials, one of which goes to Mayor Duncan McDonald. He said it is possible two of these permits will be rescinded.

"We will not issue permits for the building," he said emphatically.

At the hearing, parking authority officials told the OMB cash charges of 10 cents an hour would be charged.

One Side David's Choice

Aldermen Enos David, an advocate on curbside parking on residential streets as an interim solution to Belleville General Hospital's parking difficulties, today asked for his position to be qualified by The Intelligencer.

The alderman says parking along residential streets should be restricted to only one side of the street, adding that such three-quarters as Dufferin and MacDonald Avenues are wide enough to sustain such use. Mr. David emphasizes he is against parking on both sides of residential streets.

What Next?

It has been a remarkable election — with descriptives ranging all the way from "a very difficult situation to "a dog's breakfast," on down to "the death rattle of the (Trudeau) government."

The question on everyone's mind now is, what next? Neither the Liberals nor the Conservatives is in a position to form a governmen... There is no mandate to determine any kind of policy — none that is, without the co-operation of either the NDP or Social Credit who hold the balance of power.

NDP leader Lewis is talking of co-operation only in terms of a Government of Liberals or Conservatives tackling such issues as greater aid to pensioners, tax equalization and an end to what he terms the "corporate rip-off" involving tax concessions to industry, and sterner policies to combat inflation and unemployment.

How this can be achieved, of course, not even the most experienced observers would dare predict.

Some are saying that a minority government will be good for the country, but surely not an administration as hamstrung as this new one, of whichever party, inevitably will be. We can only wait and see what will come of the discussions the party leaders of necessity must hold, to determine the country's immediate future. Prime Minister Trudeau, in that short, pensive statement late last night, spoke of "serious Desiderata, as he had done — somewhat flippantly — a while back when answering one of those cynical queries on the date of the election — "no doubt the universe is unfolding as it should. . ."

This may be so, but the practical difficulties of the situation are immense. It is only a question of time before another election will be held, but in the meantime Government must be maintained. There is also the question of the cost of another campaign. The one just finished is estimated to have cost some $50 million in all.

The result reflected the electorate's concern with Government policy and with the uncertainties created by its spokesmen, from the Prime Minister on down. Cabinet casualties included Jean-Luc Pepin (trade and development), who drew considerable chaff; Bud Olson (Agriculture) and Pat Mahoney (Minister of State).

Locally, Jack Ellis won handsomely for the PCs in Hastings. So did George Hees in Prince Edward-Hastings, Liberal Russell Honey lost in Northumberland-Durham to Al Lawrence who left the provincial political scene to contest the federal seat. In Kingston and the Islands Flora Macdonald beat the incumbent Liberal Dr. John Hazlitt.

For Robert Stanfield and his party it has been a moral victory. For Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau it has been a nemesis of sorts. As he spoke last night, his wife Margaret stood nearby, a haunted, distant tragic figure, a shy young woman who, in the closing days of the campaign, briefly espoused the participatory democracy her husband has always preached and who now may be close to becoming in fact the private person she for the most part wishes to be.

We're Aliens

Britain's decision to classify Commonwealth citizens as aliens, starting January 1, and to tighten work permit regulations, while at the same time facilitating entry and job prospects for Common Market citizens, is an alarming move, if realistic and understandable.

With Britain's entry into the Common Market (and the possibility at long last of a channel tunnel link with France) the old Commonwealth ties will be loosened further. How much only time will tell, but there is a note of resignation in the words of Sir Max Aitken, Chairman of the Beaverbrook newspaper group in Britain. He said in an interview in Fredericton: "I'm entirely in favor of trade between Britain and Europe. But it should not let Britain take its eyes off the old Commonwealth countries, because that is where our heritage is, and I believe that is where our trade could be."

Our times are indeed changing. Let us hope that, despite this new development, the Commonwealth ties will be maintained.

MPs Privileges Were Still Available During Campaign

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Whether he has come out the winner or one of the losers this time, the candidate who campaigned in your riding for re-election as the member of Parliament has some pretty special privileges running for him.

These privileges involved, among other advantages, exclusive services which you, as a taxpayer, provided — very probably without being aware of your generosity.

These services were exclusive to the candidate campaigning for re-election as an MP, and if his rivals for parliamentary offices had attempted to duplicate them, it would have cost them — not you — a goodly wad of money.

A big plus for the MP campaigning for re-election was free postage on party mail.

Although Parliament was dissolved the first week of September for the election — and so there was no House of Commons nor any members of it — the salary and tax-free expense allowances for what has become a non-existent job continued.

Right up to election day — all through September and October — the campaigning ex-MP drew a two months' portion of that $18,000 pay cheque plus those $8,000 in tax-free expenses.

Sort of a parliamentary unemployment insurance benefit scheme, what?

And mind you, in those two fully-salaried and expense-paid months, these parliamentarians running for re-election had no more official status or function than other candidates.

The only difference was that your money helped finance his campaign whether you missed him re-elected or not — while his political ambition, with no innocent taxpayers to pick up the tab, had to pay their own bills.

There was another nice touch for the MP campaigning for re-election in that House of Commons office with its furniture, equipment, paid local telephones and secretary that your taxes were providing.

He could use it and all its facilities, even if he no longer existed as an MP, but was just another candidate, again courtesy of your generosity.

Those Commons' offices made a very convenient second campaign headquarters even in the capital for him, linked by free phone service to his home back in the constituency.

Then there were those mailing privileges.

You, as a taxpayer, must pay for your postage, no matter how rapidly the already ghastly service deteriorates.

But your friendly local neighborhood MP running for re-election had no worry about no such expense as postage for the first 14 days of the campaign.

If he did, it would have been enormous, both as an expense and a worry.

Each MP is given four pass mailings a year, and the wise ones saved the privilege to the end.

When Parliament was dissolved — and your MP ceased to be an MP — his old free mailing privileges continued for two weeks.

In those 14 days, you should have seen the mail going out of the House of Commons' Post Office.

By the ton, literally.

Scores of the standard bundles of those folksy "Reports From Parliament Hill" in which your MP liked to tell you what a great job he was doing.

As long as the free-mailing cake, some of the more knowledgeable MPs - who - were - no-longer-MPs got their stuff run off at the Government Printing Bureau, although here in the Commons they had their own well-equipped plant.

Perhaps it was that it took two printing layouts to handle that last - minute propaganda traffic jam.

Again, whether he paid you his currency or not of wednesday-ending your generosity, at your expense.

In the great and growing profession of public service there is nothing like being an MP — even an MP who really is not an MP because he was running for office and would not be an MP unless he won — nothing quite like it, that is, unless it is being a Senator.

And that is even better.

Economics Always an Issue

By JOHN D. HARBRON

Elections come and go in both Canada and the U.S., but our economic differences and sometimes economic crises, go on forever.

The most recent one evolving around the 1965 Canada—U.S. auto pact, which is largely working in our favor, has been brought to light again by U.S. Senator Vance Hartke who is worried about all the American auto jobs transferred to Canada thanks to the auto pact.

Or, as he put it to a Canadian interviewer "I'm not trying to harm the Canadian economy, only help the American one."

This kind of see-saw has been a basic element in Canadian—American relations since before Confederation and will continue to be so as long as Canada and the U.S. remain sovereign states and neighbor neighbors.

Hartke is singing a new version of the blues which resulted in earlier years and almost always from Republican administrations, in high tariff walls against Canadian exports to the United States. The current Burke-Hartke Bill has clear overtones of the Republican Smoot-Hurley Tariffs of the 1920s, also an instrument of restriction on Canadian imports.

On the Canadian side, the unforgettable 1911 federal election campaign fought on free trade, brought disastrous defeat to Liberal Sir Wilfrid Laurier. "No truck or barter with the Yankees," was the Conservative opposition slogan which defeated our Trudeau-like, French-Canadian prime minister of 60 years ago.

It appears we are less emotional today about our economic differences with the U.S. After all, 1911 will be forty year after the last secret military alliance was prepared by the British Army on the Plains of Abraham overlooking Quebec City.

Shades of misguided imperialism and the silly War of 1812!

But that 1911 election of talks against Canadian goods is contrasted today by other economic trends—the chief being the ability of the multi-national corporations to ignore national boundaries and dominate national markets.

A good deal of this has taken place in Canada since the booms of the early 1950s largely because the national policy of the last century encourages it. If you can't crack the Canadian tariff wall, you leap over it, build a branch plant somewhere in Canada, go into business as a legally-constituted Canadian company.

It's some of these self-same firms, funded by U.S. dollars, managed for a long time by non-resident U.S. executives who also export to the United States. Mr. Hartke's approach is to repatriate jobs lost to Americans now held by Canadians, by terminating the auto pact.

President Nixon's approach is more subtle, potentially more damaging. Set up a domestic incentives agency (DISC) giving tax concessions to multi-national companies who will manufacture in the United States and not abroad—chiefly not in Canada.

That's much more destructive for Canadian secondary manufacturing than hiking up tariff walls as McKinley tried to do in 1890. Coolidge did in the 1920s and Hartke presumably wants to do more.

President Nixon's way means yet only do Canadian exports to the U.S. dry up, but so can Canadian branch plants of U.S. parent corporations which will use the DISC scheme to their advantage.

Artist's Delight

Ottawa Journal

Sometimes he seems to paint with tinted ice cream, in curving lines and colors that taught us to see our native sky and landscapes with his particularly Canadian vision. We speak of Lawren Harris, founder of the Group of Seven, who turned 90 recently.

Fittingly, he was honored by Governor General Roland Michener and Premier William Davis. The National Gallery of Canada has opened an exhibition of 50 of his paintings, a rare opportunity to see his work.

The secret of the longevity of "A. Y." may be his rugged life: hiking, canoeing and adventure traveling Canada's farmlands, mountains, mining camps and waterways, from Atlantic to Pacific and Arctic shores; and always packing sketch pad, easel and paints. He was ever a rambler. He left his native Montreal in 1907 to study art in Paris; returned to France with the army in the First World War; was wounded, and became a war artist. He has been roaming ever since.

He was (and doubtless still is) also a painter but rarely scraper. Influenced by Impressionism in Europe, he found Canada in the early 1900s shocked by the Group of Seven's technique: "Bad mark scored" was one of the politer epithets hurled at him and Lawren Harris, Fred Varley, Arthur Lismer and his other members. Undaunted, they persisted in painting in a style that would reflect Canadian vistas.

Their art was not revolutionary by European standards, as they knew. But Canadian artistic taste was ready to put it kindly, limited. Hence the uproar over their work. In the intervening years our appreciations, have broadened, and for this A. Y. Jackson with his colleagues a large measure of credit. Their integrity, their breezy faith with their own visions opened our eyes.

Committee Report on OMB Is Awaited

By DON O'HEARN
From The Intelligencer's Queen's Park Bureau

TORONTO — The select committee which has been studying the Ontario Municipal Board is now writing its report.

At the core of its deliberations we should expect will be the central question: How strong should local autonomy be?

Evidence before the committee has made it clear that no matter what other objections or claims may have been made the key area of public concern about the Board has been that it infringes on local autonomy.

The committee undoubtedly will find as it considers this that there aren't any simplistic answers.

But a likely course of its thinking is that first of all it will decide there should be as much local autonomy as possible.

This is a premise, of course, with which everybody agrees. Autonomy is the life-stream of our system.

But then in its further thought it is almost inevitable it will decide that at the local level there can't be the unlimited autonomy which is the ideal.

There are three main reasons for this, none probably too well appreciated.

The first is that municipalities today are not at all autonomous in their fund-raising.

A giant share of their revenues come from the province.

And a provincial agency, or agencies, must have some controls over the budgetinz.

Can you imagine what would happen if some local boards of education were given unlimited freedom to do what they wanted?

Then there is the fact that in the burgeoning province of today the actions of one municipality can have a strong impact on the character of others.

A fair current example if a municipality builds a super-road to the border of another it is going to affect the commercial and residential character of the second, and along with this the accompanying problems of schools and waste disposal which accompany development.

Finally there is the factor, and this, of course, is the most controversial of all, but local politicians can be just too close for comfort to commercial interests, particularly developers. In fact, too close to all pressure groups.

And unfortunate though it may be, they are probably at close, particularly in the large and growing centres, that good autonomy makes for bad government.

Ballot A Delicate Flower In Some Parts of World

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

I heard a commentator on CBC radio the other day bitterly criticize all party leaders and their backers with the conclusion he wouldn't vote this time. He could be forgiven since he is a sportswriter.

But on every account I can think of, none of us in Canada in a world of many nations are very few democracies, is entitled not to vote. In some countries which have temporarily abandoned the electoral process like Argentina, or cling to it rigidly like India, not voting is an offence punishable by fines or imprisonment.

In nations like these, where citizens perpetually free elections often cling by a hair, citizens should be fined—and perhaps even imprisoned—as a reminder these kinds of fates are all too prevalent when the individual vote is taken away by the supreme leader who knows best.

In the years since 1945 and the end of the Second World War, more new countries have emerged, mainly from ex-colonial empires, than at anytime in history. Perhaps 80 countries now exist in the world, if I recall, to take a count of member-nations of the United Nations.

A few weeks ago during the UN. General Assembly meetings, 136 foreign ministers were in New York all at once, meaning 104 nations were about to present their views on issues confronting that world body. Many of these same ministers were elected and how many expressed views shared by an electorate, the people who could sweep them out when they voted next? Very few indeed.

Certainly not the foreign ministers from any of the Communist bloc countries, few from the Latin American nations, fewer even from the African ones.

In the current negotiations to end the war Vietnam war through some kind of a truce, a good deal of the discussion centres on a coalition government for South Vietnam. The present South Vietnamese ruling party, the Communist North Vietnamese, the Viet Cong as well as South Vietnamese opposition groups to both President Thieu and the Communists, would have votes.

Really? Can you mix non-elected Marxists with more or less elected South Vietnamese congressmen?

Remember the short-lived coalition governments of Poland in 1946, Hungary in 1956, or to go further back, the disastrously short life of the 1917 Kerensky regime in Russia? It was genuinely social democrat —determined to somehow rule with or without a Czar—but on a truly representative basis.

Ask any Polish Socialist still left in exile: "What happened to the postwar promise of Poland's new Communist bosses to support a mixed Polish Socialist-Communist regime?" All of them were betrayed from the start—or overthrown by Russian intervention.

We know our governments in Canada are not perfect. Too often we expect our national leaders to work miracles for us. It is all too easy for Canadians to shrug off the importance of elections since we have been handed to us. We neither fought for it, nor endured great personal sacrifice to win it.

Even most of the world's dictatorial regimes came to power after its leaders suffered earlier imprisonment and torture. So have many of the world's elected rulers.

As this column pointed out the other day, presently respectable Commonwealth leaders like Rhodia's late Nehru, Ghana's late Nkrumah, Kenya's living Kenyatta, went into British prisons early in their careers.

Power is as precious as our freedoms.

No Problem for Hees

By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — Veteran Progressive Conservative parliamentarian George Hees stood, cigar in hand, calmly observing proceedings. "We're very hopeful of getting a big win here," he told reporters.

When his final win by 9,545 was announced, he switched to a more subdued approach. "This is a heartwarming result and we're tremendously pleased," he said following concession by Liberal candidate George Cunningham.

"It's been a lot of hard work over the past 4½ years. I'm so pleased that I can repay the confidences placed in me," he said.

The veteran campaigner then invited all constituents to continue calling upon him, day or night, for help.

Final standings: Hees, 19,818; Cunningham, 10,275; and NDP standard bearer Richard Lunn, 3,179 votes. In all, Hees took 194 polls to Cunningham's five, tied four of a total of 203.

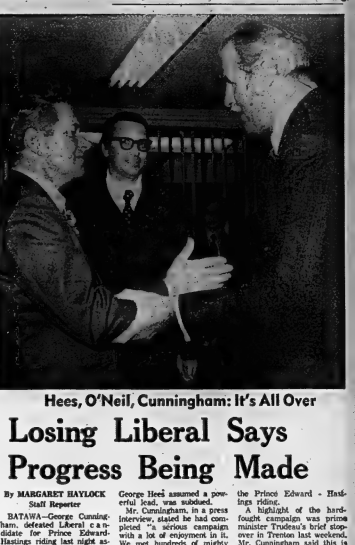
With the hard-fighting campaign of George Cunningham a viable entity from the outset of this federal election, many observers were surprised at the rather low-key battle put forward by Hees.

Cunningham far outstripped Hees for attention-getting campaign appearances. The Trenton High School teacher rode in antique cars, tried on boots at Bata Shoe, appeared in parades and rode beside Pierre Elliott Trudeau in his mainstreet stroll through Trenton just four days ago.

Hees' wife, Mabel, may have provided the key to her husband's participation. "He doesn't work especially at reelection time. He works all year."

To many people in the riding, George Hees is a familiar figure. Small and large gatherings are often attended by the former army officer who began his career while still recuperating from World War1 wounds.

From the outset, the polls were returning almost solid Conservative wins. At 7.25 p.m., Hees had a 50 per cent majority; by 8.35 p.m., Mrs. Hees was predicting a minority Conservative government.



And by 9 p.m. Hees had leading by 8,200 votes with 191 polls phoned in by Conservative party workers.

Fifteen minutes later it was all over. Cunningham, accompanied by his campaign manager Hugh Bell, arrived at Conservative headquarters to concede the election. They were welcomed by applause from those who crowded the campaign headquarters.

But the Hees win does not bode well for the party to represent the highest majority ever recorded by supporters the big sweep of 1958 saw him leading by 10,002 votes. In 1963 he won a narrow riding lead of 8,500 votes.

Before leaving his Trenton headquarters, Mr. Hees was asked to comment on prospective cabinet positions that may be open to him. But in light of the still-unfolding federal returns, the veteran Conservative and former trade minister said he would defer to John Diefenbaker decision: "I leave that all until later".

Upon his return to Trenton, Hees and Mrs. Hees joined Conservative supporters at a victory rally at the Trenton Golf and Country Club.

Hees, O'Neil, Cunningham: It's All Over

Liberals Lose Trenton Tally

By KENNETH SMITH
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — If ever Trenton was to be the key to swinging an election for Liberals, it was this time in Prince Edward-Hastings.

They were confident Trenton was in their pockets. Liberals had won 16 of 29 Trenton polls in '68 when candidate George Cunningham was less well-known and Trenton high-schoolers did not have the 18-years-and-over franchise.

In last night's returns support here just did 'not materialize. Even with a perfectly-timed Prime Ministers visit only one poll here went for Cunningham who four years earlier only trailed PC George Hees by 182 votes in the town.

Progressive Conservative organizers Doug Whitley and Ted Parker have been able to hold the Trenton constituency into a substantial PC power base for the incumbent MP.

This only enhances the victory. Results across the riding show Hees received a commanding total of 19,818 votes to 10,275 for Cunningham and 3,179 for New Democrat Richard Lunn.

Aside from two advance polls and one each in Trenton, Brighton and Sidney taken by Cunningham, the best Cunningham could do was register ties in four polls. Lunn made good poll in Seymour township. (In 1968 the NDP took none of the polls.)

Support for the NDP increased measurably over the last federal election, making a climb from 2,505 votes cast in '68 for Dr. Peter Miedema to 3,179 for Lunn yesterday. Four years ago 29,027 votes were cast against a total of 33,272 this time.

From a margin over Cunningham in 1968 of only 2,200 votes, Hees had built his majority to 9,500 votes.

Prince Edward - Hastings had its surprises last night—a sharp decline in voter turnout, a ponderous gain in PC strength with its corollary of sharp Liberal loss.

Better organized than ever before, by their own admission before figured, the Liberals face the irony of dropping in strength. And this with the added factors of youth voting and an infusion of Trudeaumania last Friday night.

Conservatives credit their handsome victory to the active involvement of George Hees in his riding over the last four years together with extra efforts by campaign workers.

But the Liberals and the NDP were giving that extra effort, too.

"We Did Our Best"

School Support Errors Lead to RC Complaints

Despite reports of "hundreds" of errors in the municipal enumeration lists in the Quinte district, particularly in relation to school support, G. Leighton Thompson, regional assessment commissioner at Trenton, said that enumerators did their job "reasonably well".

Mr. Thompson's comment was in answer to complaints that there were up to 2,000 errors in the municipal electors' lists as they applied to the Hastings and Prince Edward Separate School district.

The complaint that hundreds of Roman Catholic property owners in the district, and even some priests and church-owned properties are listed as public school supporters.

Brian Casey, assessment officer with the separate school board, places the blame on the Provincial assessment department, and the enumerators, who, he said, unfortunately brought back the wrong information.

"They (the enumerators) were given a day's training and were expected to perform miracles," he said.

"It happened all across Ontario," Mr. Casey went on, claiming that enumerators weren't given sufficient time for the job.

As a result of the errors, separate school board's stand to lose considerable tax revenue, some to the extent that several boards in the province are asking for reimbursement.

Mr. Casey said he had received "hundreds" of calls from Catholic school supporters in his district complaining of errors.

Some of the errors, according to Mr. Casey, were blamed by provincial assessment authorities on computer problems.

"But you can't blame the computers — it's people who feed them," he maintained.

In Belleville, City Clerk Adam Stalker, through news releases and advertisements, has tried to make it clear that where errors in the enumeration lists are found, they should be brought to the attention of the municipal clerk who will make the necessary corrections.

Complaints with respect to school support should be made in writing to the clerk not later than Nov. 2.

But Mr. Casey says most people are working so it is inconvenient to go to the clerk's office during business hours.

In such cases, separate school supporters seeking corrections may go to the school board and authorize Mr. Casey to act as their agent.

For his part, regional assessment commissioner Thompson contends that the municipal enumerators did reasonably well considering the time they had to do their job.

He notes that all property owners had the opportunity to check their forms with the enumerators to see if the information was correct.

Many property owners signed the form without reading what information had been entered, he said.

Also, it was suggested that because separate school taxes have been higher than public school rates, some county Catholics listed public school support when in fact their children were attending separate schools.

For his part, Mr. Thompson says he always has taken the stand that school taxes should go to the school system where the children actually attend classes.

Loser No Quitter

Richard Lunn, New Democratic Party candidate for Prince Edward - Hastings, epitomized local party expectations when he entered committee rooms last night saying he didn't expect to win.

Mr. Lunn personally chose to be more realistic in his outlook on the election, facing incumbent George Hees. "I'm saying it is important to have a candidate to foster the growth of the party ranks.

"Mr. Hees cannot stay in office forever at his age and by the time a new election comes around the people will be looking for a good alternative," he said. "The NDP is that good alternative and we can win.

"I have a very strong sense that the party has a real future here," said Mr. Lunn.

Everything is getting very sophisticated, the farmers, businessmen, everyone, he said.

"They can't be fooled and their votes cannot be bought anymore," he said.

While Mr. Lunn fell short of his prediction of 5,000 NDP votes in his riding, he did manage more than 600 votes more than the last NDP candidate in his riding.

"It would take an overnight national disaster to get my party," said Mr. Lunn.

"This is not going to happen and so we are building brick by brick until we are strong," he said.

Mr. Lunn, while regretting the present weakness of the NDP, chastised both Liberals and Progressive Conservatives for their financial practices.

"The money that they are spending is coming from the pockets of big business not just nationally, but locally," he said.

"Once in office these candidates will have to dance to the music the corporations play.

"We ran both of our campaigns with about $1,500," he said. "Which I might add, is far cry from the others' expense accounts."

Losing Liberal Says Progress Being Made

By MARGARET HAYLOCK

BATAWA—George Cunningham, defeated Liberal candidate for Prince Edward-Hastings riding last night asserted he would consider running a third time for his party.

"I am definitely not going to quit the political scene," stressed the 4-year-old lawyer, who obtained a leave of absence to seek election. Mr. Cunningham previously ran for his party in 1968.

He said he has made many "important contacts" in Ottawa and will not abandon the prospect he has made in this direction.

Mr. Cunningham arrived at Batawa Community Centre shortly after 8.30 p.m. and acknowledged defeat to Conservative candidate George Hees before a small and subdued group of Liberal party supporters.

Enthusiasm at the community centre, where election results were televised in the early part of the evening as George Hees assumed a powerful lead, was subdued.

Mr. Cunningham, in a press interview, stated he had committed "a serious campaign with a lot of enjoyment in it. We met hundreds of mighty good people, regardless of party political persuasions," he recalled.

He said that he and co-workers had entered the election with a natural hope for victory but agreed the Prince Edward - Hastings riding is "a tough area" because it has long been a Tory stronghold.

The defeated candidate felt that this fall's strong Liberal campaign in the riding will be an asset to the next man from the Liberal party to make a bid for election in Prince Edward - Hastings.

Changes earmarked the Liberal campaign in the riding this year, among them the candidate's move to the Trenton area on election night.

Mr. Cunningham said this, combined with a party plan-ned in Batawa last night, was done to recognize the efforts of supporters in this area of the Prince Edward - Hastings riding.

A highlight of the hard-fought campaign was prime minister Trudeau's brief stop-over in Trenton last weekend. Mr. Cunningham said this is the second time in little more than a year that he has visited the riding and noted no other Liberal candidate has achieved this type of communication.

Mr. Cunningham said he would change nothing in the way he had conducted it's a campaign and would like the same supporters to work with him again.

Asked when he thought the next election would be called should the Liberals win with a minority, he replied that it would be "too expensive" for the candidate and for the taxpayer to hold another election before three to four years had elapsed.

Mr. Cunningham arrived at Progressive Conservative campaign headquarters at approximately 9:15 to concede the election to opponent, George Hees.

Tense Moment in Early Going

Alkenbrack Sweeps In As Tories Cruise Along

Rolling up a clear majority over his Liberal and New Democratic Party opponents, outspoken Progressive Conservative candidate for Lennox and Addington-Frontenac riding, A. Douglas Alkenbrack easily retained his seat for the Conservatives in yesterday's federal election.

By doing so he added to the Tory sweep of Central Ontario which saw the Conservatives regain Kingston and the Islands and Northumberland - Durham ridings from the Liberals.

With only a few polls still to report in the traditional Tory riding, which stretches from the Bay of Quinte to the Ottawa Valley, Mr. Alkenbrack had polled 14,651 votes to 8,481 for Liberal Peter MacKinnon, and 2,861 for NDP candidate Mrs. Mary Lloyd-Jones.

"I am very humble and feel very thankful and proud," Mr. Alkenbrack told The Intelligencer following his victory.

He said his victory vindicated his stand on the election issues, particularly in respect to penal administration.

The national swing back to the Conservatives "tells the story," he said.

As was the case in Prince Edward - Hastings and Hastings ridings to the west, the issue in the Frontenac-Lennox and Addington riding was never in doubt.

Mr. Alkenbrack, a veteran of 16 years in the House of Commons, jumped into the lead with the return of the first poll and rapidly added to his lead.

It was a much different story than in the 1968 election when the PC candidate won out by a slender 800 votes.

Mr. MacKinnon early conceded defeat and less than two hours after the polls had closed admitted that the election was obviously lost for him.

He noted that the strong Conservative riding was "tough nut to crack".

Mrs. Lloyd-Jones, the NDP candidate from Sydenham conceded almost the same time and although expressing regret at defeat said she was still able to smile.

Passing the Word

Richard Lunn NDP for Prince Edward - Hastings, his wife Janet and Elridge Brethour NDP candidate for Hastings, watch intently as election results are shown on television. Neither candidate anticipated a win in his riding but are satisfied that the NDP are gaining ground. Both men increased their popularity at the polls this time. More than 900 "new" votes were cast for the NDP this election.

OK, George Your Move

BATAWA (Staff) — In a brief and subdued speech to supporters gathered at Batawa Community Centre last night defeated Liberal candidate George Cunningham declared, "They haven't chosen well."

He remarked, "We will be bypassed again as we have been bypassed for half a century."

The Trenton secondary school teacher added if Mr. Hees' election reflected the will of the electorate "we can't quarrel with it" and added that is their democracy.

He then drove to Trenton to have he congratulated his opponent and said, "Now let's see you do some of those things you promised."

Lawrence Upsets Honey

By DON CURRY
From The
Peterborough Examiner

PORT HOPE — Where does Allen Lawrence go from here?

That question is still up in the air today as Mr. Lawrence told the media here last night he had "made no deals" with Progressive Conservative party leader Robert Stanfield in the case his party forms the next government.

Mr. Lawrence said he was particularly happy to serve Mr. Stanfield in any capacity the party leader sees fit, even as backbencher, a role he played for a number of years in the Ontario legislature, before cracking cabinet ranks.

At the time Mr. Lawrence spoke to the media, 10 p.m., it was obvious he won his seat, as Russell Honey, the incumbent Liberal for Northumberland-Durham riding informally conceded the seat at 8.30 p.m. as Conservative lead quarters here. But Lawrence didn't know whether his party or the Liberals would be forming a minority government.

With the uncertain cabinet still hanging in the air, Mr. Lawrence was naturally hesitant about discussing the possibility of him taking a cabinet post in the next government.

Confining his comments to his own riding, Mr. Lawrence praised the man he defeated by 2,794 votes — Mr. Honey — but was a little caustic when asked about a remark made by NDP candidate Wilmer Hill during the 2 a.m. paign.

Speaking over the telephone en a live interview with an Oshawa radio station Mr. Lawrence said Mr. Hill's charge that he had spent over $50,000 on his campaign was ridiculous, "It's a good thing he's not an arithmetic teacher."

Mr. Hill is head of the history department at Donovan Collegiate, Oshawa.

Mr. Lawrence said he makes it a policy in election campaigns to have nothing to do with party finances, "so no one can point the fickle finger at me after the election is over."

But he estimated his party spent in the neighborhood of $20,000 in Northumberland - Durham.

He said very recently he thought Northumberland - Durham would be a real cliff-hanger, some election day.

"But, when I heard the Liberals were going to bring Pierre Elliott Trudeau in last Friday night I knew we had it."

Liberals Retain Quebec Fortress

MONTREAL (CP) — The Liberal party retained its Quebec stronghold in the federal election Monday despite attempts by the Parti Quebecois early in the campaign to discredit he Trudeau government. The Liberals maintained all their seats on the east end of Montreal Island where the Parti Quebecois is strong provincially. In home oases the Liberals increased their majority.

There was little indication Monday night that PQ supporters and members followed a party recommendation to abstain from voting or to spoil their ballots.

The Parti Quebecois, which advocates Quebec's separation by peaceful means, waged what was called an anti-campaign during September and part of October.

Quebec Government Opposed Federal View

MONTREAL (CP) — The light outcome of Monday's federal election leaves the future course of federal-Quebec relations in as much suspense as the future course of government in Canada.

Paradoxically, while the Quebec government condemned the federal Liberal government for what it called a rigid position on constitutional questions, it was Quebec which was the bastion of federal Liberal strength in the election.

The Conservatives, who offered a "flexible" approach to Quebec, saw their Quebec seats in the Commons cut to two from four on Monday.

Major bone of contention between the federal and Quebec governments is family allowances, over which Quebec wants effective control.

BC Cantankerous
Last Poll in Last Riding Gave Liberals Seat Edge

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia's cantankerous electoral pushed Robert Stanfield's Progressive Conservatives into a tie with Prime Minister Trudeau's Liberals in national party standings Monday night—then gave the Grits a one-seat edge at the last possible moment.

In an unbelievable finish to the federal election, the count went down to 11:31 p.m. PST and the little-known Okanagan-Kootenay riding where Liberal backbencher Douglas Stewart fought for his political life against Tory Howard Johnston, a recent director from Social Credit.

Going into Okanagan-Kootenay—the last of the province's 23 ridings to elect a member—the Liberals and Conservatives each held 107 seats nationally. Only when the last of 273 polls had reported was Mr. Stewart, a 34-year-old lawyer from Kimberley, B.C., declared the winner by 77 votes.

The final count gave him 12,431 to 12,354 for Mr. Johnston, a 46-year-old school teacher.

It was one of only a few bright spots during the night for the Liberals, as the New Democratic Party and Progressive Conservatives ganged up to flatten them.

Final standings in B.C.:

At dissolution at Parliament Sept. 1, the Liberals held 16 B.C. seats, the New Democrats eight. The Grits lost Comox-Alberni to the NDP in a 1969 by-election and Esquimalt-Saanich, which elected Liberal David Anderson four years ago, was vacant following his July 25 resignation to enter provincial politics.

The Liberals had been expected to drop a few seats in B.C., but nothing in the magnitude of the NDP and Tory gains was predicted by political observers and pollsters.

The New Democrats checked in with their finest showing in B.C. ever. The Conservatives rebounded from no seats at all in 1968 to finish with their best showing since 1958, when John Diefenbaker carried 18 ridings here and shut out the Liberals.

Let's talk.

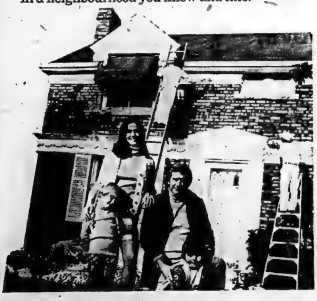
Our name is the Bank of Montreal.

And we'd like to talk with you.

Because, if you're ever going to take advantage of what a bank can do for you, we've got to talk.

About budgets.

We can start with our free Money Guide. A little wheel that gives you some idea of how much rent your income will stand and interesting things like that.



We can show you all kinds of accounts and services to help you plan your spending and saving. And we know which ones are realistic for you and which ones aren't. Simply because we use them ourselves.

About homes and home improvements.

We've got every kind of financing imaginable from small personal loans to large mortgages.

And we've got an attitude that makes our lending more flexible than most.

We'll mortgage where there aren't even paved roads yet. Or we'll lend you enough to improve a solid old house that may not look so good right now. Or we'll help you improve or extend your present house so you can stay in a neighbourhood you know and like.

About investments.

We can lend you money to invest in the stock market. Which is a good way for you to invest in Canadian companies and in Canada's future.

You can borrow as much as $10,000 and, depending on the amount, you can pay us as little as $20 a month.

We'll even throw in a subscription to the Financial Post or Financial Times and a little folder that explains Bulls and Bears. Just so you'll know what to call yourself.

Let's talk.

About travel.

We can arrange a travel loan so maybe you can take advantage of a charter, without taking a big chunk out of your savings. We'll give you our free Foreign Currency guide. We'll get you safe, secure traveller's cheques for only one cent on the dollar. We'll let you know if we have branches where you're going, to give you a little feeling of home. And, while you're gone, we can pay your more important bills for you and send you your earnings as they come in.

About business.

A lot of people got their starts with us. Which means that we know the ins and outs of running a small company or store.

And because we deal with big corporations, we know a lot about international banking, corporate financing and services, and export development.

Enough that maybe we can help your big corporation. Or help your little corporation to become a big one.

About car-buying.

We know what a problem an old car can be and we know what an expense a new car can be. So we're doing a lot to get you out from under. We've even got a special loan that gives you the full purchase price of the car. You don't need a down payment and you can make your payments on a schedule we'll tailor specially for you. At the same rates that our regular loans offer.

About a lot of other things.

Anything that you think might be of interest to us probably is. Because it's in our best interest to have you get more out of life.

If we don't have the answers you want, we'll try to get them for you. And that's a promise.

Now, what would you like to talk about.

Victory Kiss for Mother

Their Man's Number One!

"Dad will be home only Wednesday nights and the weekend while family has apartment in Ottawa — two homes now." said Faye Ellis, 20-year-old daughter of successful Conservative MP for Hastings Riding, Jack Ellis. "Aside from that, there won't be any other changes for our family."

Last evening at the Progressive Conservative Committee Room on Front St., Faye, her sister Connie, 18 and Ray, 12, enthusiastically watched the tallies climb and at the same time watched the door wafting for their parents to arrive. Mr. and Mrs. Ellis were at Bancroft thanking supporters in that area before returning to Centre Hall.

"We've always been a close family," said Faye and Connie Ellis while Ray, though the only boy, remarked, "I don't mind it."

When Jack and Jean Ellis arrived in the committee room, shaking hands and being congratulated by well-wishers, friends and relatives, Jean, tired yet happy said her first chore today would be a rest and, thanks to Ray's suggestion, do some baking.

The past four weeks for the Ellis children have been exceptionally busy. While each has attended school, the evenings have been occupied at the campaign headquarters or travelling with their Father touring plants and attending rallies.

Sleep was seldom yet each member gave faithfully and followed their favorite candidate.

This new MP's family have enjoyed the political roles they've played, meeting all the people and actively participating in this campaign.

Faye, is a 1st year student at Queen's University, Connie a Social Science student at Loyalist College and Ray, a Grade 7 student at Sir John A. Macdonald School.

Campaign Mascot?

Peppie, if she were able, would have voted NDP all the way yesterday but as it turned out she wasn't tall enough to reach the ballot. She spent a good part of her time last night visiting with NDP Hastings candidate Eldridge Brethour and his wife Barbara in NDP headquarters while election results came in. "There will be another time," said Mr. Brethour after his defeat was obvious.

Women Not Mentioned In This Children's Book

WATERLOO, Ont. (CP) — Sociologist Margrit Eichler says she avoided sex stereotyping in the children's book she wrote for her three-year-old son by avoiding mention of women.

Her book, Martin's Father, describes a day in the life of a small boy as he and his father have breakfast, go to the park and do the washing at the laundromat.

"And there is no mention of mother—it's showing the things that fathers do," the author said in an interview.

The sociologist, who lectures at the University of Waterloo, wrote the book for children aged two to four as an example of the kind of story that avoids stereotyping.

She and Linda Fitcher, also a sociologist at the university, were among the founding members of Lollipop Power, a liberation group formed in North Carolina about three years ago in a community chiefly made up of students attending Duke University.

Another is about a little girl who dreams up giri giants. Yet another deals with a girl who likes to fly everything from balloons to jets to spaceships.

Both women are giving courses at Waterloo on the sociology of women. The 90 students in the current class include both men and women.

Linda Fischer has two sons. She's also writing children's stories. One is about Martha Werry, the wife of Santa Claus, who starts out as a toy inventor.

Mrs. Hees Shares Her Husband's Political Life

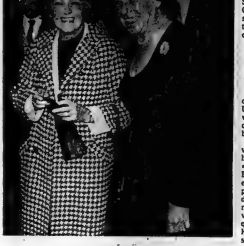
TRENTON (Staff) — It was a night of extreme pride and complete confidence for Mabel Hees, as she watched her husband of 38 years win another session in the House of Commons.

She has been right beside him for much of his political career, actually dailing her involvement several years previous to that of George.

Mrs. Hees is looking forward to her return to Ottawa and the life she leads there. But both look upon his family home at Cobourg as their true permanent residence.

Mabel Hees supports the theory that a wife can actually do little towards the success of a politician husband, but agrees involvement in his party and linked interests certainly does no harm.

"I come from a very political family," she said in an interview at Trenton PC headquarters last night. "My grandfather and father were both elected federally, and my brother, Edward Dunlop, served briefly as cabinet minister under Premier Bill Davis before his retirement."



"I help him as much as I can," she said of her husband's political career, but readily admitted he stands on his own. And not only does she take part in campaigning, appearing at his side or on his behalf when other duties take his time, but she has also pitched in to sweep floors in committee rooms, and any odd job that needs doing.

Asked if George has considered a more retiring future, Mrs. Hees chuckled, replying, "I'm rather dubious, but if my husband should retire, we would make this area our permanent home."

"But I have a feeling his retirement is a long way off. Besides," she added, "I'm not really sure I could keep up with him even then."

Neighbors of the Hees family in Cobourg Monday morning spoke of his many activities, which they say includes a regular dip into the heated pool he has at the family homestead outside the Northumberland-Durham town.

When the final results were in, and the outcome a victory for her husband, Mabel Hees was right beside her husband, caught up in the glow of pleasure and success.

Church Week Held at Roslin

Church Week was recently celebrated in Trinity Roslin United Church in co-operation with Thomasburg UC Pastoral charges of Rev. Lucester Bigby, BA, BD.

For the Sunday morning service which began the week, held in Roslin Church, the guest long-piper was Don McBride from Kingston. In the evening, a sacred concert was performed by the Ambassadors from Belleville. Other musical selections were provided by the Bailey Family quartet and soloists, Miss Kathy Burnside and Mr. Bronson from Madoc, as well as local talent.

The closing of the week was denoted by the Thomasburg anniversary service conducted by Rev. Dr. H. M. Davis, immediate past minister of Bridge Street United Church, Belleville.

'Bird Watching' Is Topic At Women's Study Guild

Members of the Women's Study Guild met at the home of Mrs. J. R. Reynolds for their October meeting. The topic was "Bird Watching."

Mrs. P. J. Orr, in her introduction to the topic gave a resume of the life of John James Audubon from whom the Audubon Society received its name. Though this man had poor school habits, he maintained a keen interest in birds and flowers. Mr. Audubon later published his own book on ornithology which included life-size engravings.

The Canadian organization affiliated with the Audubon Society is now called the Canadian Nature Federation. The Quinte Field Naturalist is a local group affiliated with bird watchers.

Mrs. R. Settle showed bird pictures with emphasis on the markings, physical features, behavior, feeding, songs, flight patterns, habitats, areas and seasons observed in this locality and different habitats. Mrs. Settle, through her own observations and research, stimulated the interest of all concerned in an awareness of the pleasures found through this relaxing hobby of nature. Many suggestions were given of ways to attract birds, even for apartment dwellers.

Mrs. Orr displayed bird-feeders which she had made and several homemade foods to tempt winter birds. Birds become dependent on feedings and it should be continued once begun.

Mrs. R. Ellis' devotional was in harmony with the program. She explained an eagle's care for its young to that of God's care for his followers.

In the absence of the president, Mrs. H. Wren, the vice-president, had charge of the meeting.

Lunch was provided and served by Mrs. H. R. Gibson, Miss J. Tickell and Mrs. W. Thomson.

Elegance, Conservatism In Men's Fall Fashions

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Elegance and conservatism are the terms men's fashion experts are using to describe this season's clothes.

But a Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press indicates they may not mean exactly what they've meant in other seasons, as fashion experts predict the popularity of such materials, bright, floppy-legged pants and velvet suits.

A Toronto fashion writer is one of several who reports the British look is in. There are suits, jackets and topcoats in restrained tweeds, houndstooth checks and plaids.

A Halifax expert says there is a return in flannels, an old cloth brought back in a new style.

But in Saint John, N.B., the worsted men are buying in a stretch version, worn when the weather is too cold for their summer double knits. In Vancouver, the double knits that were considered an innovation a year or two ago, are good for year-round use.

Suits are also being made and sold in corduroy and velvet.

A Vancouver buyer says the classic silhouette is a slim, long-line one but adds that it ends in flared trousers, some of them with two-inch cuffs.

Shirt colors are said to be toned down, but an Edmonton fashion co-ordinator says the popular ones are rich, dark colors such as brown, and white-on-white. Shirts are knit and flat.

Ties continue to be wide and worn with big knots.

Wrap coats, trench coats and coats in wide cuts and with fur trim are fashionable.

The unisex influence shows most strongly in sports clothes for young men, and in shoes.

Plaid, high-rise bags with extra wide flared legs and cuffs are worn by the young with layers of sweaters or short sweaters over shirts.

Ann Landers

'Whitest Wash in Town' Disputed

Dear Ann Landers: As a former resident of Eau Claire, Wisconsin, I was fascinated by your statement that when you lived there, more than 20 years ago, you had the whitest wash on Valmont Avenue.

That statement also intrigued a reporter for The University of Wisconsin campus paper who decided to do some checking on her own. This is what she wrote:

'Dear Ann Landers: It wasn't very nice of you to publicly insult your former neighbors in a column that circulates all over the world. I contacted several women who lived near you in those days and this is what they had to say about your claiming the whitest wash on Valmont Avenue:

'Mrs. Emma Weiss of 1619 Valmont Avenue commented: "Ann was a wonderful neighbor but I don't recall that her wash was any cleaner than anyone else's."

'Mrs. Paul Marg of 1610 Valmont said: "I never paid much attention to my neighbor's wash. I couldn't tell you if Ann's was the cleanest or the dirtiest. But I do remember her as a very sweet and interesting person.

'Mrs. G. W. Brend of 1618 Valmont said: "Mrs. Lederer (Ann now) was a nice neighbor. She minded her own business."

A few others had similar comments but they preferred to remain anonymous. So it seems, Ann, that no one in Eau Claire remembers your wash as well as you do. Borrowing one of your nuggets of advice, I say, 'Count your blessings — but make sure they're yours.'" Maggie Mreant Of The Spectator

Dear Maggie: I remember every one of those women. They were all good neighbors and they minded their own business, too. I apologize if I insulted their laundry. Will you please go back and give them all my warm regards?

Dear Ann Landers: Now that the great American home wrecker (football) is being glorified on all the networks, will you please relay a message to my husband? There is no chance that I can get his attention until January, but he might listen to you.

Dear Husband: I am fast slipping into a state of depression as I watch another season of watching you watch the idiot box as if it were the only thing in life that matters. But then I guess it is. I find it quite remarkable that you chat so easily with the players, whom you don't even know (and who never answer you, of course), while I sit there, the woman who has been married to you for 15 years, bore you three healthy, beautiful children, and I could drop dead in front of your eyes and you wouldn't even notice.

I find it fascinating that you can call each and every player by name. You know where they were born and how much they weigh. I am certain you do not know how much your own children weight and at this point I wouldn't bet that you could call them by name.

For the last three Thanksgivings you have not come to the table to eat with us. Christmas and New Year's was the same story. When your children grow up they will remember that you ignored them. Nature has a strange way of paying people back. When you want their love and affection, they will tell you to get lost.—Not A Girl In Your Wedding Picture, Remember Me?

Dear Girl: I'm printing this in October in the hope that things will brighten up around your house before the holidays. Thanks for writing.

Mirror of Your Mind
by JOHN CONWELL

Does love come to all who want it?

NO; that is one ironic aspect in the modern search for love. A person may be urged by encounter groups, seminars and other sensitivity meetings to free himself and his emotions so that love "can happen" to him. But it doesn't always turn out that way, and the individual will become frustrated, disappointed and often depressed. After all the time and effort he has expended, he often finds himself still looking for the "miracle of love."

Should a child hear he's an imp?

NO; if parents get a boot out of telling how impish their child is, they had best do it when the youngster is out of earshot. Once the child hears it, he might think that is the approved way to act. Of course, everyone enjoys a boy or girl who shows some impish tendencies, but a steady diet of it makes it hard for a person to take to such a child. In europost, impishness provides lively conversation; living it can be torture for both parents and child.

Is pool the wrong game for woman?

ONLY because of the reputation pool has. Nobody has yet dared suggest that, to be equal, young girls should "hang around a pool hall," although there isn't anything "invidious" about a billiard parlor. By the time they are old enough—and rich enough—to have their own pool table, women have a lot of catching up to do before they can beat anyone at "Chicago," or one of the other games of pool.

Bicycle Paths Recommended

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: Many times when you are helping someone through your column you also help me.

My son belongs to a fine bicycle club here. They race early in the morning on a not-too-busy highway. On occasion my husband and I have been stationed to flag down motorists and ask them to exercise caution when they (cyclists) are racing. Some do; others leave the air blue with their language.

All bike riders are judged by the careless. This club has strict regulations; bikes are safety inspected and if any rider is caught riding carelessly he is reprimanded.

We have submitted briefs to our provincial government to install bicycle paths, such as they have in Europe, but to no avail. Yet cycling is getting more popular every year. — Mother of a Cyclist.

Dear Mother: Bicycle paths? The very thing. Certainly a club which trains the cyclists to take care is a tremendous help; but the riders on overloaded speedways, well — I fear for them.

Sometimes that blue air is caused more by a car driver's sudden anxiety over a cyclist he has barely missed hitting, than by sheer rudeness.

Dear Doris: I was 20 when I became involved with a married man, three years ago. He promised to marry me.

I was greatly hurt that he was not concerned when his wife found out about us. I decided to forget him.

But Doris, this man is crying all over me; he is acting worse than a child. He cannot stand the thought that I am leaving him for good. He begs me to give him some time and he will get a divorce whether she agrees or not.

When I try to break off he becomes like a skeleton, he doesn't shave nor get a haircut, and he takes to drink. — Frightened.

Dear Frightened: To marry a man because he "cries all over you" is a poor start. To marry a man who hasn't grown up is just plain foolhardy.

Stiffen your backbone; return any letters unanswered; and hang up the telephone when he calls. You are not responsible for his sanity or otherwise.

Bomb Scare at Cornwall

Police Denied Right To Open Ballot Boxes

CORNWALL (CP) — Police changed their minds Monday night and ordered evacuation of the district returning officer's headquarters here, five minutes after a bomb was scheduled to explode.

A bomb threat was telephoned to both the headquarters and a local radio station at about 8:30 p.m. EST. The caller said a bomb, supposedly hidden in a ballot box, would explode at 9 p.m.

Police searched the building and supervised the arrival of ballot boxes from outlying polls. The district returning officer refused to allow them to open the boxes.

At 9:06 persons in the building were ordered to leave, and then allowed to return at their own risk 10 minutes later.

DRO Fired

OTTAWA (CP) — One deputy returning officer had a sharp let-down Monday after a Sunday night celebration.

He was fired by the chief electoral officer, Jean-Marc Hamel, when it was found he had no ballots at the start of voting.

The RCMP was asked to investigate and telephoned later that the missing ballots were found under the deputy returning officer's mattress.

"Apparently he had too much to drink Sunday night," Mr. Hamel said. Afraid the ballots would be stolen, he had stashed them under his mattress.

Monday morning, the unfortunate officer couldn't remember where he put the ballots.

NDP Protests

MONTREAL (CP) — The New Democratic Party's Quebec branch said Monday it has laid a formal complaint with the chief electoral officer, Jean-Marc Hamel, in Ottawa charging infractions of the Canada Elections Act during the general election.

Kari Levitt, NDP candidate in Montcr-l-Dollard riding said that a polling station in her riding openly displayed a piece of campaign literature for Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer, the Liberal candidate, beside the ballot box.

Power Fails

SHEDIAC, N.B. (CP) — A power failure Monday afternoon left 40 polling booths in New Brunswick's Westmorland-Kent riding without electricity, but did not interfere with voting. The New Brunswick Electric Power Commission said it had a plane flying over power lines in an attempt to locate the trouble.

Bridges Jammed

HALIFAX (CP) — Police reported traffic jams here and in neighboring Dartmouth Monday afternoon as residents left work early to vote in the federal election. Police said vehicles started backing up at cross-harbor-bridges by 3 p.m.

First Woman

MONTREAL (CP) — Monique Begin, Liberal candidate in Montreal St. Michel, became the first woman to be elected to the House of Commons from Quebec province, when she beat four other contestants despite grumblings that she had been parachuted into the riding.

Switcher Loses

MONTREAL (CP) — Rod Blaker, Montreal broadcaster and commentator, retained Montreal Lachine for the Liberals, defeating Progressive Conservative candidate Raymond Rock who carried the riding for the Liberals in 1968. Mr. Rock later crossed the floor protesting the Trudeau government's economic policies.

Metro Jam

TORONTO (CP) — A malfunction in the computer that controls Metro Toronto's traffic lights combined with a rush of about 100,000 motorists leaving work early Monday to vote in the federal election to cause jams in downtown streets and main routes to the suburbs. The rush hour started 1½ hours early as offices and industries released their employees to vote.

CLAUDE WAGNER
- - - Wins In Quebec

Wagner Wins

ST. HYACINTH, Que. (CP) — Martha Adams, an independent who campaigned on a platform of legalized prostitution, lost St. Hyacinth riding to Claude Wagner, former provincial Liberal justice minister, who ran federally under the Progressive Conservative banner.

PC Happy

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — A minority Liberal administration should mean changes in government that will benefit the country, Donald Matthews, national president of the Progressive Conservative party, said Monday night.

"A minority government will mean a lot of the things we didn't like about the government will change—they'll have to—and that will be a good thing for Canada," he said.

A minority government will mean that "without too much time going by we'll probably be back at it in another election and we'll go harder than ever," Mr. Matthews said in an interview.

He was defeated in London East by Liberal Charles Turner, who held the seat in the last Parliament.

Mayor Explains

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP) — Mayor William Dennison of Toronto said Monday night that the federal government's lax immigration policies played a decisive role in the results of Monday's federal election.

He said people could just walk into the country and then apply for landed-immigrant status. Mr. Dennison noted that even an escaped prisoner could get into the country.

"People don't speak out about these things but they feel it," he said.

Return to PCs

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister John Turner, re-elected in his Ottawa-Carleton seat Monday, said the abrupt

Clock Wrong

OSHAWA, Ont. (CP) — A number of people were prevented from voting in Oshawa-Whitby constituency because a poll closed one hour early. The poll at Coronation School closed at 6 p.m. EST because the school clock had not been turned back when daylight time ended Sunday.

Rhinos Win

MONTREAL (CP) — Robert Bernier, chief organizer of the Rhinoceros party, said Monday night he is delighted with the election results because the Canadian people have once again elected 264 rhinoceros to Parliament.

"I say that because all members of Parliament are rhinoceros whether they are conscious of it or not," Mr. Bernier said.

The party, founded in 1964 and dedicated to ridiculing traditional parties, fielded 12 candidates in the election and managed to win a total of about 5,000 votes

Asks Recount

TORONTO (CP) — Aideen Nicholson, the Liberals' only woman candidate in Ontario said Monday night she would ask for a recount in Toronto Spadina, where the election night count gave the seat to Conservative Paul Hellyer.

Mr. Hellyer, who left the Liberals to join the Conservatives was ahead by 182 votes with the count completed. Mr. Hellyer won the riding as a Liberal in 1968 by about 7,000 votes.

reversal of standings in the Ottawa area, in which the Conservatives picked up four seats more than their 1968 total of two, might be due to a return to traditional voting patterns.

He said there have been Conservative members from the area in the past, and the returns would give a more varied representation in the House of Commons.

Liberals Gain Three in East

HALIFAX (CP) — Voters in the Atlantic provinces sent Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield back to Ottawa with another one-sided regional majority in Monday's federal election, despite slight gains by the Liberals in Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island.

The Conservatives won 22 of the 32 seats in the four provinces while the Liberals picked up the remaining 10. In the last election, the PCs held a 25-7 edge in the region. The New Democratic and Social Credit parties were blanked once again.

In New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, the results were an exact re-run of 1968 when the Conservatives won 10 of the 11 Nova Scotia ridings and split New Brunswick five-five with the Liberals. The lone Liberal elected in Nova Scotia was Privy Council President Allan MacEachen, who has represented Cape Breton Highlands-Canso since 1953.

Mr. Stanfield, premier of Nova Scotia for 11 years, easily won personal re-election in Halifax riding.

The Conservative leader entered local party offices amid cheering PC workers to watch the election results.

He said in a statement that his party in the Atlantic provinces had enjoyed a "tremendous sweep in the 1968 election," and "that support seems to be standing up."

One of the few surprises in the East was Newfoundland, where the Liberals regained some of the strength they held prior to the 1968 federal election. This time, they won three seats with the other four going to the PCs.

In 1968, the Conservatives won six of the seven seats.

The Liberal victories were even more surprising in view of an overwhelming Conservative win in a provincial election in March.

The third Liberal gain was in Prince Edward Island, where Dan MacDonald, a 54-year-old former provincial agriculture minister, won Cardigan. The Conservatives had held all four seats in the province.

Two other Liberal cabinet ministers were re-elected—Transport Minister Don Jamieson in Burin-Burgeo and Public Works Minister Jean-Pierre Dube in New Brunswick's Restigouche riding.

Six women candidates in the East all were defeated.

Half Comeback Squad Win

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Five of the 10 former MPs trying for politics' comebacks made it in Monday's federal election.

All the successes were by those running for the Progressive Conservatives.

Successful comebacks were made by Heward Grafftey in Quebec's Brome - Missisquoi riding, Frank McGee in Ontario's Peel-Dufferin-Simcoe, Alvin Hamilton in Saskatchewan's Qu'Appelle-Moose Mountain and Alex Patterson in British Columbia's Fraser Valley East.

Mr. Patterson is a former Social Credit MP. All the others previously sat as Conservatives.

Only one Conservative attempting a comeback failed to make it—Michael Starr in Ontario's Oshawa-Whitby. A minister in the cabinet of former Conservative prime minister John Diefenbaker, Mr. Starr lost again in New Democrat Ed Broadbent, who had knocked him out of the House by a 15-vote margin in 1968.

Two other former Diefenbaker ministers got back—Mr. Hamilton who was agriculture minister, and Mr. McGee, who was a minister without portfolio.

Other comeback efforts that didn't click: Wilfrid Dufresne, former Conservative who ran in Quebec's Langelier riding as a Social Credit candidate this time; Pauline Jewett, former Liberal who ran for the NDP in Ottawa West; Murdo Martin, New Democrat who sat for the Northern Ontario riding of Timmins previously and was trying to get it back, and Merv Johnson, NDP candidate in Saskatchewan's Swift Current-Maple Creek riding.

Robert Thompson, former Social Credit leader who ran as a Conservative in Alberta's Red Deer riding in 1968 and won, was defeated this time when he went against New Democrat Darry Mather in the British Columbia riding of Surrey-White Rock.

Dinner Drops In

WELLAND, Ont. (CP) — Many people have guests drop in on them for dinner, but few have a potential dinner literally drop in on them. Shortly after hearing a shotgun blast outside his home, Ron Ford heard a crash near his kitchen window. He went outside to find a duck lying beside the house. The hunter who bagged the duck in the area where hunting is illegal did not venture forth to pick up his game, so Ford was allowed to keep it.

Cool Win for Conservatives in Hastings

The Intelligencer

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, TUESDAY, OCTOBER 31, 1972 13

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

If lack of tension is a gauge of confidence, the Progressive Conservatives never doubted they would retain Hastings in a party landslide last night.

At least, that was the impression as the long day's vigil on the vote drew to a close with polls at the party's Belleville committee rooms — its election-night action centre.

For political organizers waiting that first phone call from the polls is a time of nervous strain, not easily masked.

In that respect the Conservatives in their Front St. committee rooms seemed to have nothing to hide.

One veteran of many a Belleville Conservative campaign backroom agreed the air seemed short on adrenalin. He pondered the same might exist down the street at the Liberal rooms.

"If so, I think it's because we thought we were going to win and they thought they were going to win."

The first phone call from the polls set what was to be the night's pattern.

It came at 7.20 p.m. — 20 minutes after the polls shut down — and the single knock Road voting station in north Hastings County. The result: Conservative candidate Jack Ellis 29 votes — 13 more than both his opponents combined.

Even then, the reaction was remarkably restrained as key campaigner, Gerry Brennan fed the statistics into a microphone and fellow organizers quietly watched the first win of the night go on the totals board.

From then, the flow of returns gained momentum — an almost steady stream of victories at poll after poll.

By 7.30 p.m., someone looked up from an adding machine and called: "We've got 10 polls in — and we haven't lost one."

But the Conservative workers still took it calmly. Jubilation was a time reading in the committee rooms.

Some more polls, and more victories.

By 7.40 p.m. the first substantials, with 43 polls reported, showed Ellis with 1,217 over Liberal opponent Frank Pollwell. The announcement brought the first smattering of applause.

From then on, with results streaming in and each substantial broadening the Ellis lead the committee rooms suddenly became more animated.

Just 35 minutes later, with 125 polls in victory seemed certain. The substantials boosted out that the Ellis-plurality was still mounting — running 3,761 ahead of Liberal returns.

By this time the committee rooms started to fill: Poll workers, car drivers, the supporters who were the grassroots mechanism of party machinery and those who just plain scented a victory in the air were arriving on the scene.

With the influx came the louder sounds of success.

Embraces, handshakes, cries of congratulations filled the committee room with exhilirance.

In its midst, Mr. Brennan stepped to the microphone again.

"Here's a little bit of news for you. We've lost 14 polls of 164 so far."

"I'd like to rephrase that," called back another organizer, now warmed to the spirit of a victory occasion. "We've won 130 out of 164."

At 8.45 p.m., with 158 polls showing Ellis with a plurality of 4,322 there were more cheers — but the situation had now become academic for the Conservatives.

Campaign worker Joe Cox, picked up the phone and sent a telegram to Halifax and Party Leader Robert Stanfield whose personal victory earlier had been announced over the committee room's color television.

"Congratulations," it said. "We're on the Stanfield team now."

Shortly after, there was a round of applause as Lee Grills — Mr. Ellis' predecessor who held the seat for 19 years — walked on the scene.

But the big hand came five minutes later as, the earlier cool of the evening dissolved for good, the campaign's central figure strode through the door and the crowd, from key organizers to car drivers erupted in cheers. Jack Ellis had arrived at the committee rooms — in Hastings and in national politics.

How Sweet It Is!

Shock Stuns Follwell HQ

By KENNETH SMITH
Staff Reporter

There was a real sadness among Liberal ranks in Hastings last night. They were surprised, almost stupefied by the depth of PC support as election results poured in.

Candidate Frank Follwell told supporters at his Belleville committee rooms "we did everything we could do," as he thanked them for their campaign efforts.

"I wouldn't have run things differently, if I had it all to do over again," commented Follwell's campaign manager, Norman Cairns.

Liberals had entered the race with confidence, worked hard but were trounced thoroughly. As returns came into the Front Street committee rooms, polls going Liberal were so few no excitement could be generated.

Melancholy was only reinforced by rapid computer predictions of the television networks that forecast a Jack Ellis victory before 8 p.m.

Further radio prognostications followed with the same message.

The shock of Conservative success was so profound it took the fun out of election night at Liberal headquarters.

"I would have thought we would have done better," said Cairns. All Liberals felt that way.

Former MP Robert Temple had some words of consolation for the committee room crowd, telling them the measure of PC victory in Hastings did not appear as great as in some adjacent ridings.

Liberals had believed they had substantial chances of doing well in Belleville, hoping to carry the city by such a margin that strength there may carry them through. Cairns had expected substantial gains in Tweed and Bancroft.

They were wrong and it hurt.

The closest thing to a Liberal explanation was the occasional comment about traditional Toryism in the region. Follwell quoted the late Sen. William Fraser as saying this area is "a Sahara" for the Liberals.

Cairns contended that Trudeaumania may have been the missing ingredient.

A hopeful Follwell told his workers "one of these days this riding will be returned to the reform party . . . we were bucking the tide . . . there is always a next time".

There was no win-or-lose party for the Liberals because arrangements could not be made in time, said one party organizer. And the Liberals were not in a party mood.

Cairns said he still feels Liberals were fielding the best candidate. "You know," he said, "with Follwell, you have a man with integrity and honesty from the word go."

Follwell had been on the go from early morning, visiting polls from Bancroft on down to Deseronto in the course of the day. The candidate had watched returns coming in on the television at his Belleville home until his appearance at party headquarters about 9:30 p.m. He went from there to congratulate the new Hastings MP.

The shock had set in but there was still substantial pride in the contest they had waged.

Hastings Voters Give Ellis Birthday Gift

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Today Jack Ellis celebrates his birthday.

Last night, the voters of Hastings riding gave him the gift of a lifetime — a membership in parliament.

And his first reaction might have easily been mistaken for that of someone describing his first taste of birthday cake:

"How sweet it is."

It was his initial response to exultation of Progressive Conservative party supporters as he walked into his Belleville election headquarters last night, winner of a three-way battle for the riding.

But Jack Ellis, today 43 and Hastings MP, wasn't talking cake; he was something more serious and significant.

It was the personal-reaction to an electoral victory for a newcomer to national politics who did more than retain the Hastings seat integral to the traditional Conservative political bloc.

There was also the fact of a resounding victory: Some 16,671 votes — more than 5,100 more than his Liberal opponent Frank Follwell, nearly 1,800 better than the combined tallies of the Liberal challenger and the New Democratic Party's Elridge Brethour.

There was also the fact he had increased the number of votes gleaned by Conservatives over the last (1968) federal election.

He scooped about 52 per cent of the total vote cast — compared to 48 per cent given the Hastings Conservatives in 1968.

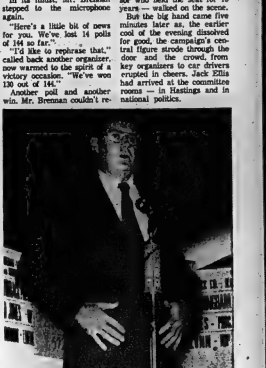
And for Jack Ellis the win meant a comeback to public life in a bigger, broader, more dramatic arena. He worked his way through the ranks of local government to become Mayor of Belleville in 1964. He failed to win re-election in 1967 and has been absent from public affairs since then.

Until last night, when, with his wife Jean, he walked through the Front St. committee rooms door — after a day-long, 11th-hour tour of the riding to remind voters and party workers of his presence.

By that time he had been confirmed as a national parliamentarian.

But, he indicated to the victory - flushed assembly crowding campaign headquarters, he was still aware he was a newcomer in his new phase of public life.

"The next campaign starts tomorrow morning," he said. This time you elected me on faith to see what I could do, and what the party had done."



"When I come to you again it'll be exactly on what I have done for you."

On his way to the customary victory party — at Club Cedars in Thurlow — the new MP explained what will immediately busy him.

He'll "consolidate" his private affairs where he will be primarily ready for the next by-riding; get settled in Ottawa.

Then he plans on a series of consultations with representative local groups — councils, community organizations — to discuss needs of various areas, to "get the feel of all the people in the constituency" to determine what priorities must be met.

He also looked to discussions with local provincial government members with an aim to co-operating with them to the area's benefit.

Brethour Not Bleak

Elridge Brethour, New Democratic Party candidate for Hastings riding, unlike many of the 30 party workers gathered about him all evening never gave up the hope of a winning team while results poured into committee rooms last night.

Regardless of how bleak the picture was and how despondent the workers seemed to be, Mr. Brethour weathered the evening saying the last vote was not counted.

Before arriving at committee rooms on Dundas Street, Mr. Brethour, like all other candidates, had toured the county visiting many of the polling stations, making his last official campaign appearance.

Mr. Brethour's only concern was that it was not longer as he visited the workers.

"My big problem was that for large audiences, he (I was too nervous to talk he said.

"It has only been in the last week or so that I felt comfortable in the public environment," he said.

"Obvious questions that I should have been able to answer left me speechless in cases because I was so nervous about myself in the earlier portion of the campaign."

Mr. Brethour spent his time pacing the floor and watching television coverage of the national election, gave little indication on his future in the political arena but would remain a devoted party worker in provincial politics.

"I'm not going to give up until the final wire," he said. "There are a lot of people dissatisfied and a change is coming for sure, I feel."

"If not this time, the next."

Unofficial votes were counted Mr. Brethour was in third place, a long way back, receiving 2,381 votes, some 8,000 behind the second-place Liberal candidate and 11,000 off the Progressive Conservative pace.

Though a long way back, Mr. Brethour in his political life has received more votes than the last NDP federal candidate in the riding.

Jack Ellis — Early Victor

Quiet Keynote Of Election Night

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

The "quiet election" fizzled out about 10 last night with all the impact of a rained-out fireworks display.

No crowds, no excitement, not even much air of suspense hung over committee rooms. CJBQ's election control at the Quinte Mall or Belleville bars and pubs after the polls closed at 7 p.m.

That's the way it's been, a quiet election," said Gerald Brennan, campaign manager for PC victor Jack Ellis as he watched a small group at Quinte Mall set up to watch the winner in stoney silence.

No press of people surrounded the candidates with congratulations or condolences as they appeared at the Mall to quickly thank their supporters.

Only a handful of let-down Liberals watched the results come in at Liberal headquarters. Family and friends could be felt at the PC headquarters but the first few minutes after returns began to come in, as poll after poll reported a victory, the silence by whiters visibly relaxed and turned to the serious job of tabulating figures.

"It would up too fast," was one opinion on the dearth of election interest in the city.

TV network and Toronto gave Ellis the win in Hastings before 8 p.m. leaving no answer to comment that "the computer put the damper on it."

Voting was light in Hastings riding.

"People just don't care; there's no interest," said UIC public relations man and some-time social commentator Fred Stockton.

But Hastings Conservatives were far from smug as polls closed.

They felt they had carried the county, but the city was a question mark that had them worried until the first polls reported Ellis triumphs.

We have always worried about the city," said one longtime campaign worker. "Even Lee (Grills) sweated over the city."

But when five of the most Conservative Belleville polls early reported in with Ellis majorities, the keyed up campaigners just sat back and let the victory wave roll over them.

Exhausted and satisfied, some Tory workers admitted they couldn't win the country with Stanfield as leader.

"He's a fine man," said one "but he just hasn't got the image."

Several Liberal pundits noted a consistent three to one majority of votes for Conservative candidates in Ontario. They attributed it to anti-Trudeau feeling in the province. The high totals racked up by Conservative winners in eastern Ontario ridings they regarded as votes against one personality.

A worried Liberal worker predicted early in the evening that his party was on the way out of the federal scene. He forecast a minority Liberal government and another election at an early date. And he didn't expect Trudeau to be party leader the next time his party went to the country.

Frustrated Liberal candidate Frank Follwell said as he conceded the election to Jack Ellis: "We were bucking a national trend."

Other Hastings Liberal stalwarts had the spirit left to cheer as their candidate appeared for his radio speech at Quinte Mall.

New member of parliament for Hastings, Jack Ellis frankly admitted he was overwhelmed by his big majority at the polls.

"The big job starts tomorrow," he promised the citizens of his riding.

W.S. Lane Is Named To Board

TRENTON (Staff) — Trenton Police Commission chairman Hubert Campbell has announced appointment of a new, third member to the commission.

Judge Wilfred S. Lane of Picton has been appointed to succeed former Hastings County Judge J. C. Anderson.

Judge Anderson resigned his position as county judge late this summer, but still acts as Surrogate Court judge for Hastings. No appointment has been made to succeed Judge Anderson as county judge.

Third member of the Trenton Police Commission is Mayor Duncan McDonald.

The order was put into effect by order of the Ontario Lieutenant - Governor, Ross Macdonald, acting in council.

Wait Until Next Time

Liberal candidate in Hastings Frank Follwell made his way through Belleville campaign headquarters last night thanking workers individually for their efforts. It was a disappointing time for Liberals but Follwell consoled them with words of praise for a hard fought campaign as it predicted their day will come. Shown behind the candidate are his campaign manager Norman Cairns, and former MP Robert Temple.

Resignation Theme of NDP Supporters

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

An eerie feeling of acceptance, uncommon in other election night committee rooms filled New Democratic Party Headquarters Monday as a small handful of party stalwarts watched and listened to both local and national returns.

Hastings candidate Elridge Brethour and Prince Edward-Hastings hopeful Richard Lunn, surrounded by some 30 party workers, huddled around the television and radio listening to the reports of their party gaining ground in the west but losing locally.

The occasional cheer came from the group as results were broadcast showing the party collecting some 30 national seats but acceptance of defeat continued as many candidates fell far short of the pace.

What was more important to the NDP's than winning the seats was the increase in support for the party.

"We didn't expect to win this election," said a party spokesman. "We were out to build and grow and mature as a viable alternative to the other two parties."

Both Mr. Brethour and Mr. Lunn chatted calmly with workers as results poured in, showing them far back in the race.

"What we are doing is establishing the party in the area, nurturing it, making it grow," said Ian Reilly, former Provincial and Federal candidate.

"We can't do it overnight, and we are willing to work until we have the strength to go against and we have done our best to grow a little more."

When final results came in for Hastings riding, the NDP were shown to have won only one polling station in Faraday of 106 contested, and taking 3,381 of a possible 41,000 riding votes.

Of a possible 40,000 Prince Edward-Hastings voters, Mr. Lunn received 3,179.

Though far from the pace, both candidates surpassed totals set by NDP campaigners in the last federal election by 661 in Prince Edward and 278 in Hastings.

There were few disappointments for the NDP party in either of the ridings, sharing the same committee room.

Most of the workers circulating from one candidate to the other admitted they could not get a win but were satisfied with growth which they feel is coming.

"With each election we grow and that is more important than anything else," one worker said.

"We knew what we were in for when we entered election by election; we knew the odds were even against and we have done

Soviet Breeders Miffed

LAUREL, Md. (AP) — Droll Role was added to the field for the $150,000 Washington, D.C., International today, giving the United States two entries in the 1½-mile turf classic to be run at Laurel Race Course Nov. 11.

The addition of John M. Schiff's four-year-old colt restores the prospective line-up to nine, making up for Monday's withdrawal of the Russian entry, Herold.

The Soviets withdrew the three-year-old, winner of Soc Russian Derby, after Laurel officials refused their request to also enter Skala, the fifth-place finisher in the Grand Prix von Europa at Cologne.

"We already had turned down the winner of that race, a German horse, Prince Ippi, who lacked an outstanding record," said John D. Schapiro, the Laurel president who originated the invitation-only International.

"It was a case of allowing the Russians to enter a horse which we felt was not of championship calibre or holding out ground," Schapiro said. "We could not make them understand that the International was designed for classic horses, not ordinary runners."

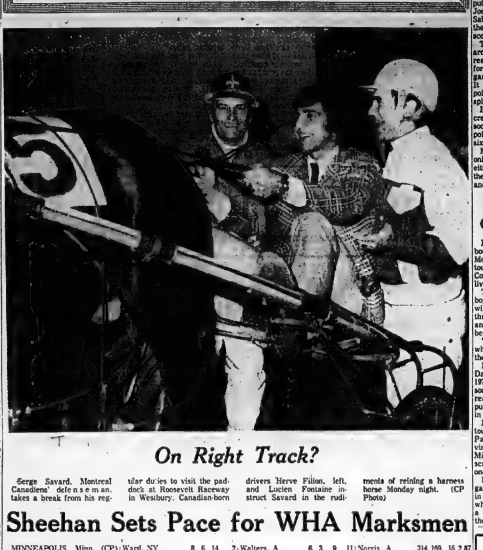
Droll Role, a four-year-old son of Tom Rolfe who sired the 1971 International winner, Run The Gauntlet, has been one of the most reliable U.S. handicap performers this year.

He won the Grey Lag and Tidal handicaps at Aqueduct, the Massachusetts Handicap at Suffolk Downs, the Hawthorne Gold Cup, and recently took the Canadian International Championship.

Droll Role was chosen by the American Selection Board to join Kentucky Derby winner Riva Ridge as the U.S. representatives, and to replace the injured six-year-old mare Typecast.

Gotta Back?

OTTAWA (CP) — It appears Jack Gotta and Company will be around to lead Ottawa Rough Riders next season, despite rumors to the contrary.



"I have no intention at the moment of leaving the Ottawa club and hope there'll be no difficulty in agreeing on new contract terms," Gotta said Monday. He winds up a three-year contract this year.

The rumors that Gotta would seek new business followed interpretations of a television interview after Riders' last-minute victory in Hamilton Saturday.

Rough Riders owner David Loeb said the plan right now is to rehire Gotta and both his assistants, Jay Fry and George Brancato.

"I don't like to talk contract with games left in the schedule," said Loeb. "A coach has enough on his mind without worrying about such matters." ence with Hamilton.

Riders are in first place in the Eastern Football Conference with Hamilton.

Sheehan Sets Pace for WHA Marksmen

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (CP) — Three defectors from the National Hockey League are showing the way today in the World Hockey Association statistics.

New York Raiders' centerman Bobby Sheehan has taken over the scoring lead with nine goals and nine assists in 10 games. Tied for second is Wayne Carleton of Ottawa Nationals with eight goals and seven assists for 15 points and leading in the goaltending department is Gerry Cheevers of Cleveland Crusaders with an average of 1.33.

Joe Shows Deft Touch In NHL Line Assembly

MONTREAL (CP) — A line put together late last season by Joe Crozier, coach of Buffalo Sabres, continues to dominate the National Hockey League's scoring statistics today.

But his production has increased considerably this season—24 goals, 34 assists and 58 points in 19 games, including six victories and four ties.

Montreal Canadiens are the only other undefeated club in either NHL division today as the strength of seven victories and four ties. The Canadiens remain two points ahead of the Sabres with 18.

Tonight's only scheduled game has Vancouver Canucks at Los Angeles against the Kings. The Kings are in a second-place tie in the West Division with 10 points, the same number as Pittsburgh Penguins and Philadelphia Flyers, three fewer than Chicago Black Hawks.

Perreault leads all point-getters with 21, one more than right winger Robert, who shares the assist lead with Perreault, each with 13.

The other member of the trio, Martin, is the goal-scoring leader with 13 and his 17 points places him in a tie for fifth place with Jacques Lemaire of Montreal and Fred Stanfield of Boston Bruins.

Left winger John Bucyk of Boston, who scored his 490th NHL regular-season goal Sunday, is third with 10 points, one more than Rod Gilbert of New York Rangers.

Two teams have goals-against average of less than 2.00—the undefeated Canadiens and Sabres.

Montreal's Ken Dryden, who leads in shutouts with three, and rookie Michel Plasse have combined for a 1.64 average. Veteran Roger Crozier and Dave Dryden of Buffalo have an average of 1.80, one of the reasons the Sabres' 10-game undefeated streak is the best by a post-1967 team since St. Louis Blues went 13 games without a loss in the 1968-69 season on five wins and seven ties.

Morton Soon Changes Tune

DALLAS (AP) — "Let 'em box," said a satisfied Craig Morton. "When I'm throwing touchdowns and the Dallas Cowboys are winning, I can live without the cheers."

The longtime No. 1 whipping boy when pro football fortunes willed here, Morton passed for three touchdowns Monday night and set up a fourth in a 28-24 beating of Detroit Lions.

"Sure, I heard them boo when I was introduced," said the 29-year-old Morton.

Roger Staubach, engineer of Dallas's world championship of 1971, is healed from his pre-season shoulder separation. He's ready to play but Morton is putting up a strong fight to stay in the job.

Morton heaved a 38-yard touchdown bomb to Billy Parks, one of 33 yards to Calvin Hill and a 15-yarder to Mike Montgomery. His 37-yard screen to Montgomery set up a one-yard touchdown smash.

Dallas, 5-2, pulled within a game of Washington Redskins in the National Conference East, while Detroit plunged back into a tie at 4-3 with Green Bay in the NFC Central.

DISC BRAKES ARE SPECIAL
Got disc brakes? Congratulations.
You've got the best stopping going.
But if you've got disc brakes, you should remember just one thing.
They're very, very different from drum brakes. Instead of a drum, the disc brake has a rotating disc (or rotor). And a caliper equipped with two disc pad assemblies and hydraulic pistons. When you need to stop, the caliper assembly grips the rotor.
And incidentally, there are five basic types of disc brakes on North American cars.
Maybe you're not all that concerned about how your disc brakes work. As long as they do.
And that's why you should be concerned about who works on your disc brakes. You need help from people who are thoroughly familiar with the disc brake difference.
so you need the Firestone disc brake specialists
Our disc brake technicians have taken special training courses on disc brake operation and service. They're familiar with all the different types found on all makes of cars. And they have the right equipment to do the job right. And do it efficiently, with no waste motions. That's why you get the best in disc brake service at a pretty remarkable price.
Here's what we do for only $29.88.
We install 4 new front disc pads. Inspect calipers, rotors, rear brakes, brake fluid level, and parking brake. As a little extra at no extra cost, we also clean, inspect and repack your front wheel outer bearings. Then we road test your car to make sure it measures up to your needs. To our standards. And to our guarantee: 24,000 miles or 24 months, whichever comes first.

New Flavor In Steel City

by

Eric Emerson

Sports Editor

Hamilton is a beautiful city; a city where you rise early in the morning to watch the smog descend in grey blanket lines from the Niagara Escarpment.

It's a city where lush green golf courses border upon the Greater Hamilton Port Erie and Buffalo railway yards; hard-batted steelworkers fry themselves beside blast furnaces and beer outstrips champagne by a considerable fluid margin in King Street drinking establishments. It's been called the Pittsburgh of Canada.

Hamilton could also be called the "great Canadian melting pot"; the pot content to boil roughly seven times a year when Polish steelworkers, Italian dockworkers and Lithuanian lawyers descend upon Ivor Wynne Stadium for a common Canadian cause—to hear the sound of breaking bones.

"Oskee-wee wee, Oskee wah wah, Tiger-Cats, rah rah rawl" has always reached its most frenzied peak in the Hamilton bleachers as the Ti-Cats defence does its thing. Hugh Oldam's flip flops could never compare with the sight of John Barrow levelling Russ Jackson or Angelo Mosca bouncing joyfully on top of an out-of-bounds ball carrier.

* * *

It must have been a little disconcerting to the Hamilton faithful then, to show up this season for the 1972 mash session and discover, of all things, an offence.

Not that offensive football has been entirely disdained in the Steel City. After all, anyone between Burlington and Brantford could tell you that Bernie Faloney was the best dam' quarterback in Canada, or that Hal Patterson and Paul Dekker could catch even Tobin Rote's errant offerings, but somehow they just never reached the esteem granted defensive bulwarks like Simmons, Szoo Kazs or Garnie Henley.

Henley was a case in point for Hamilton's football philosophy. A will - of - the - wisp receiver and runner, number 36 was seldom wasted on anything as superfluous as first string duties. But when he was in the defensive unit, where any super star belongs, and given occasional exile to offence when points were badly needed.

* * *

Then along came Jerry Williams, whose Pete Liske-Terry Evanshen pitch and catch chemistry had been taken in the 1970 Grey Cup by a retiring Russ Jackson and a sound Ottawa defence. His heresy of relying on this new and dangerous invention called the forward pass, was fittingly punished by a "demotion" to the hapless Philadelphia Eagles of the NFL.

Yet somehow, this season, what man Williams wound up as the new Tiger-Cat bench chief. It was like Tiny Tim leading the U.S. marines.

Williams quickly showed that he didn't belong in Hamilton. For one thing, he managed to sack the renowned Wally Cabler for a new rookie quarterback. The smog must have badly affected Jerry's eyesight because in addition to being a rookie the new Ti - Cat pivot was b-l-a-c-k.

Now any good professional football coach knows that these people can play football. They have a great natural rhythm which makes them outstanding cornerbacks, halfbacks and soog - and - dance men, but they just don't have the innate intelligence to play pro quarterback. After all, look at Sandy Stephens and . . . well, no one else had ever been really tried.

Chuck Ealey quickly proved that he didn't have the mental equipment for the job. He didn't know first - year quarterbacks don't become starters. He just couldn't fathom that poterious scramblers can't become pocket passers or that rookies should throw interceptions, not completions.

Faloney showed that he could be not only a quarterback, but THE quarterback of the Canadian Football League by making the transition from an undefined college scrambler who wasn't even drafted into an exciting professional who stays in the pocket and runs only when he has to. How dumb can you get?

* * *

Williams didn't stop there, however. He switched Henley to fulltime offensive service with the result that the skinny, he-specialist Henley leads the Eastern Conference in touchdowns and yards - per - catch. The move has also made an outstanding receiver out of tight end Tony Gabriel, since the defences must key on Henley, and pushed Garnie into strong position for a longoverdue Schenley award.

* * *

Somehow, the new Hamilton coach has produced an offensive football team, whose 304 points rank third in Canada, but that will never replace a Hudson pelvis in the hearts of true Ti-Cats' supporters.

* * *

The only true compensation for this sickening switch in tactics would be a Grey Cup parade, and with the Tabbies currently tied for first in the Big Four that is a distinct possibility.

* * *

This year's Grey Cup is being played in Hamilton and should the 'Cats reach the national finals, Vancouver's riots in 1969 might seem pretty tame by comparison. The fans would have a chance to show the nation how a steel town celebrates Grey Cup week. They might even forgive Jerry Williams.

Goalie Not Enough

Randy Smith of the Quinte Mall bantams sees his scoring chance go down the drain as Duncan Boyce of the Belleville Broadmoor team makes a key save in their house league hockey meeting Monday night (top). Boyce's efforts weren't quite good enough, however, as Quinte Mall recorded a 3-3 win, thanks to defensive plays such as the one made by defenceman Steve Graham (left) who attempts to clear traffic from in front of his own goal.

Winter Races

PETERBOROUGH (Special) — Ray Richards, general manager of Kawartha Downs, announced today that the Fraserville Raceway will start its winter race season this Saturday, post time 7:30 p.m. Richards has every hope that the improvements in the north end of the grand stand, and the other facilities for winter racing will be very successful.

The first half of the winter program will close for the holidays on Dec. 16 ,but reopen for the second half on Saturday, Jan. 13.

With the cutback of racing to once weekly races, it is felt the calibre of Kawartha Downs racing should considerably improve.

Crestwood, Quinte Stage Two Team COSSA Battle

NAPANEE (Special) — The Kawartha and Bay of Quinte district winners made Monday's COSSA cross country championships a two-team race despite the fact that 27 schools were entered.

Crestwood Secondary School from Peterborough carried their district's colors by winning two girls' championships and placing second in four other events, while Quinte Secondary of Belleville took two boys' titles and finished among the top four in three other sections.

A total of 237 high school athletes took part in the Central Ontario championships held at the Napanee Golf and Country Club.

Sheila Ward of Crestwood won individual honors in the midget girls' event, helping her school to the team title. Norwood finished second in that group while Quinte was third. Centennial's Judy Meeks won the junior girls section. Cobourg East was top team while Crestwood edged Bayside for the runners-up spot.

In senior girls, Crestwood nipped Quinte for the team title as E. Boyles gave her school the individual win as well. Cindy Ross and Heather Melbourne of Quinte placed third and fourth respectively.

Brighton won the midget boys' event as Dave Peckham came first. Cliff Wibey third and Robin Piester fourth to give their school the team winning margin of the day. Quinte picked up their first team title of the afternoon in junior boys' competition, edging Crestwood by 13 points for low score. It was the fourth consecutive win in that section for Quinte, an unprecedented accomplishment. Members of the winning school team included: Barry Ray (fourth); John Sheppard. (13th), Peter Kenneily (16th), Steve Isacco (20th) and Ken Ryan (30th). Individual honors went to Mike Fitzgerald of Bancroft.

Jim Thompson of Centennial won the senior boys' section by covering the four-mile distance in 20 minutes, 42 seconds but couldn't prevent Quinte from winning their second consecutive senior title.

Gerrard Farrell (third), Roger Ray (fourth), Ian Hayman (seventh), Ivan Robinson (eighth), Justin Farrell (tenth) and Joe Carrel (11th) made up the Quinte champions.

The top two schools in each event, as well as the best three individuals, are eligible for the all - Ontario championships this Saturday at the Boyd Conservation Area in Woodbridge.

Dillons Best At Barcovan

Country Club Industrial League held its award presentation dinner at the Trenton Legion Hall on Friday the twentieth of this month.

Of the 16 teams which competed for top honors, the first team was won by Dillen's Grocery, a Trenton team consisting of Bill Dilion, Vic Burtt, Bob Mills, Glen Fenske and Bob Cassidy.

The second place trophy went to Brighton's Tom Webster, Charles Pinnell, Stan Greenham, Jack McFadden, Bob Bonnett, and Jim Reeve.

Things are all set in the Western Conference — Winnipeg Blue Bombers finished first and have gained the bye into the final and now await the winner of an Ottawa Ions to Winnipeg on Saturday would decide the first two positions.

Montreal holds third, but Toronto Argonauts could take it by defeating Hamilton.

Either way, Montreal or Toronto will make the EFC playoffs with a 4-10 record, the lowest record for a playoff con-

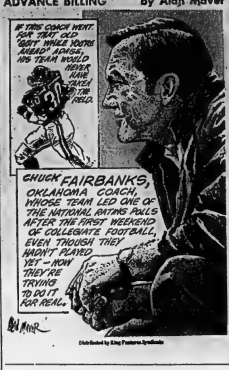
Hamilton needs only to win against Toronto on Sunday to nail down first place, although

Hawley Boots Home Two Winners

TORONTO (CP) — Jockeys Jimmy Kelly and Sandy Hawley were the big guns at Greenwood Raceway Monday, with Kelly registering three victories and Hawley two.

Kelly won the first race aboard Shirley's Princess, covering the mile-long muddy track in 1:41 3-5 to return $4.80, $3 and $2.60. Chestnut Time, with Hawley aboard, returned $3.90 and $2.70 and Arctic Jay paid $3.



Hawley took the second race, taking Rechtub over the mile in 1:40 4-5 for a payoff of $6.60, $3.40 and $2.30. Winrallah was good for $3.20 and $2.40 while Kelly's mount, Belle of Caledon, paid $2.60.

Kelly was the victor again in the fourth, bringing Two Rings home over seven furlongs in 1:26 3-5 for a payout of $5.50, $2.80 and $2.20. Cluny Race was second for $2.40 and $2.10 and Hawley on Restless Mood paid $2.20.

The seventh race was Hovey's aboard Bold and Gay. The three-year-old covered the seven furlongs in 1:28 3-5 and returned $4, $2.90 and $2.10.

Kelly took the eighth and final race on Tanaka. The four-year-old filly covered the mile in 1:40 1-5 for $13, $6.30 and $5.60.

Burning Rectal Itch Relieved In Minutes

This Special Hemorrhoid Remedy Contains 5 Unique Healing Substance That Relieves Pain As It Shrinks Hemorrhoids

One of the most common afflictions is a condition known as "Itching Piles". It is most embarrassing for the sufferer during the day and especially aggravating at night.

If you want satisfactory relief — here's good news. A renowned research laboratory has found a unique healing substance with the ability to promptly relieve the burning itch and pain. It actually shrinks hemorrhoids. This substance has been shown to produce a most effective rate of healing. Its germ-killing properties also help prevent infection.

In one hemorrhoid case after another "very striking improvement" was reported. This improvement was maintained over a period of months! Among these sufferers were a wide variety of hemorrhoid conditions — even cases of long standing.

This was accomplished by a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) — discovered by a world-renowned research institution. This substance is now obtainable in ointment or suppository form known as Preparation H. Ask for Preparation H Suppositories (convenient to carry if away from home) or Preparation H Ointment with special applicator. Available at all drug counters. Satisfaction or your money refunded.

Liberals Drop 24 Seats

Heavyweight Ontario Gave Knockout Punch

TORONTO (CP) — Heavyweight Ontario provided the big Conservative punch that knocked the Liberals out of a majority position in Monday's federal general election.

In the pivotal province the Conservatives ripped through previously solid blocks of Liberals their gains heavily in the Metropolitan Toronto area and a horseshoe ringing the Lake Ontario shore on both sides of Toronto, while they also cracked the Liberal stranglehold on ridings around Ottawa and reached into southwestern Ontario for seats.

Shut out of the big 22-seat group of ridings in Toronto and the Yorks in 1968, they picked up seven there this time, including the Scarborough East riding of Labor Minister Martin O'Connell who fell to teacher Reginald Stackhouse.

They also knocked off Robert Kaplan, chairman of the Commons finance committee in the last Parliament, in Don Valley. He lost to James Gillies, an economist and business administrator, regarded as a virtual cabinet certainty in a Conservative government.

David Lewis, national leader of the NDP, retained his York South seat and the party also added Toronto-Lakeshore and Toronto-Scarborough West to the three Metro seats it held in the last Parliament.

A major breakthrough for the Conservatives came in Kingston and the Islands where Flora MacDonald, 46, a strong party cabinet possibility, took the seat held by the Liberals before the resignation of E. J. Benson, former finance and defence minister.

The Conservatives also crashed through for three seats in the Ottawa area, toppling in Ottawa West Lloyd Francis, chief Liberal whip, and Gordon Blair, a prominent back-bencher who is a former Ontario president of the party. They also took Lanark-Renfrew-Carleton adjacent to Mr. Blair's old seat along the Ottawa River.

While the Conservatives remained shut out of the strongly-Liberal northern part of Ontario, the NDP took Nickel Belt and Sault Ste. Marie. Outside of the north and in Toronto, the New Democrats did not make any gains but they held Brant and adjoining Waterloo in the southwest and Oshawa-Whitby near Toronto.

In the southwest, the Tories won Middlesex and Elgin from the Liberals, giving them a block of connecting seats running from Lake Erie to Georgian Bay.

Also on Lake Erie, they cracked the long-held Liberal territory of Niagara Falls, held by former cabinet minister Joe Greene, and also took adjacent Lincoln and St. Catharines on the Lake Ontario side of the Niagara Peninsula.

In the nearby Hamilton area, they broke through for three seats to add to Hamilton West held for them by Lincoln Alexander, only black in Parliament.

On the other side of Toronto a former Conservative front-bencher—Frank McGee—made an apparent comeback in Ontario riding by squeaking through the election-night count 12 votes ahead of Norman Cafik, Liberal member in the last Commons. Mr. McGee was a minister without portfolio in John Diefenbaker's last government.

A cabinet colleague of that era—former labor minister Michael Starr—failed to get back against the NDP's Ed Broadbent in next-door Oshawa-Whitby.

However, the Conservatives picked up a bonus in Northumberland-Durham to give them an unbroken string of ridings from Speaker Lamoureux's eastern Ontario territory of Stormont-Dundas all the way down the Lakeshore to Toronto except for the NDP enclave of Oshawa-Whitby. Allan Lawrence, who left the job of Ontario justice minister for federal politics, put out Russell Honey, deputy speaker in the last Parliament.

In several areas to improve on their 1968showing by 24 while the New Democrats picked up four in Toronto and the north for a total of 13.

From a near all-time low since Confederation, the Conservatives bounced up to 41 as the Liberals fell off to 35 on the basis of the election-night counts.

At dissolution of Parliament, the Liberals had 59 Ontario seats, the Conservatives 19 and the NDP seven. There was one Independent—Lucien Lamoureux, Speaker of the last Parliament, who was re-elected in Stormont-Dundas. There were two vacancies at dissolution.

The Liberals swept through the province in 1968 with 64 seats to 17 for the Conservatives and six for the NDP.

Return of PC Western Tide Sweeps Regime to Defeat

The Liberals, still haunted in the West by the ghosts of the 1958 Diefenbaker sweep, dropped 20 western seats, most to the Conservatives.

	1972	1968
PC	41	25
NDP	18	16
LIB	7	27
SC	—	—
Peuhful	3	—
Totals	68	68

New Democratic Party candidates held slim leads over Progressive Conservatives in the two doubtful ridings—Churchill in Manitoba and Saskatchewan's Meadow Lake.

The Conservatives were the only ones to reap gains in all four western provinces. They took all 19 Alberta seats, upsetting Agriculture Minister Otto Lang and Minister of State Pat Mahoney.

The two other Liberal losers in Alberta were Allen Sulatycky, parliamentary secretary to Northern Affairs Minister Jean Chretien, and Edmonton Strathcona's Hu Harries.

Manitoba elected seven Conservatives, two Liberals, including James Richardson, minister of supply and services, and three New Democrats. In 1968, the Liberals and Conservatives each took five Manitoba seats and the NDP three.

The only Liberal elected in Saskatchewan was Otto Lang, justice minister and minister responsible for the Canadian Wheat Board. The Conservatives won seven and the NDP four in the province that gave birth to socialism.

Four years ago, Saskatchewan sent two Liberals, five Conservatives and six New Democrats to Ottawa.

The only seat in the Northwest Territories was stolen from the Liberals by the NDP's Wally Firth, a 37-year-old Indian who camped out in a pup tent during the campaign. He is the second Indian elected to Parliament.

The Yukon returned Erik Nielsen, a Conservative first elected in 1957

Other prominents returned in the West:

Former Conservative prime minister John Diefenbaker in Prince Albert. NDP House leader Stanley Knowles in Winnipeg North Centre, and Conservative House leader Gerald Baldwin in Peace River.

The newly-formed Western Canada Party, established to give the West a greater voice in Ottawa, also didn't elect anyone.

Authority's Anniversary Marked by Brochure

Accomplishments during 25 years of conservation with a crystal ball peek at what might transpire in the next quarter of a century are included in a Moira River Conservation Authority color brochure just off the press.

The brochure, compiled by the authority's education and information advisory committee, was published to commemorate the organization's 25th birthday.

The 32-page brochure is profusely illustrated with color pictures of the authority's many reforestation plantations, conservation areas and water control projects, along with outdoor activities and wild life scenes.

It includes an introduction by committee chairman Robert Jeffrey and lists 1972 authority members" as well as members and officers of the authority since its inception back in 1947.

First chairman of the authority and the prime local mover of the organization was the late Col. Roscoe Vanderwater of Sidney township. This year's chairman is Jame's Spry of Rawdon township.

The authority is made up of 17 member municipalities within the Moira watershed most of which are in Hastings county, but includes small parts of Lennox and Addington and Frontenac counties.

The watershed drains an area of 1,000 square miles and is 34 miles wide at its broadest, point and stretches from the Bay of Quinte 55 miles north into Casbel township.

Approximately one half of the watershed is drained by the main branch of the Moira with the remainder being drained by three main tributaries the Skootamatta, and the Black and Clare Rivers.

The work of the authority's six advisory boards — Information and Education; Forestry, Conservation Areas, Fish and Wildlife, Water Control and Pollution Control — act out in the brochure.

The role of the Information and Education board is to educa e and inform residents about conservation and conservation practices.

Toward this end an educational program has been instituted taking in news releases to the newspapers, radio broadcasts, and displays at fairs and exhibitions.

The board also uses the community service approach through a program of outdoor education through the schools.

The Forestry Advisory Board has acquired more than 16,00 0 acres of reforestation property — mostly in Hungerford and Elzevir township. Since 1951 more than 2.5 million trees have been planted.

In addition, the Conservation Areas Advisory Board set up several areas, the largest of which is the 623-acre Col. Vandergwater area at Plainfield, named in honor of the authority's first president Other popular conservation areas are the O'Hara Mill northwest of Madoc and the Price area at Actinolite, which along with the Vandervater area, are popular recreation spots.

This year a special outdoor education area east of Plainfield was officially opened and named in honor of H. E. Frink, former Belleville public school principal who initiated the idea of outdoor education in the Quinte area.

A 475-acre fish and wildlife area has been set up in the 6th concession east of Foxboro along the Moira River and Chrysal Creek.

The Water Control Advisory Board was one of the first advisory bodies set up by the authority.

The authority has built or acquired 10 dams in the watershed, the major one being the Deloro and Lingham Lake reservoir dams and the recently opened Deerock dam on Patridge Creek, northeast of Flinton.

A pollution control advisory board was set up last year, the purpose of which is to study, report on and recommend to the authority programs for pollution control of water, air and soil.

Looking ahead to the next 25 years, the board has noted trends of rapidly increasing urban population and the increase in leisure time for most individuals.

The board feels that with its 17,000 acres of reforestation and conservation areas properly sufficient multiple-use areas will be available for a wide range of year-round outdoor activities.

Quinte Campers Down

There were fewer campers in provincial parks in and around the Quinte district this year.

The reason?

Some 88,500 campers spent time in the district's provincial parks — a drop of more than six per cent from 1971.

Total number of visitors was also down to 854,000 — a three per cent drop.

The parks are at Lake St. Peter in northwest Hastings County, Black Lake, near Arden, Bon Echo, Outlet Beach, North Beach and the Sandbanks.

The parks officially closed Sept. 17 although most parks will remain open until snow conditions make motor-vehicle travel impossible. Bon Echo and Outlet Beach will be open and maintained throughout the winter for winter sports enthusiasts.

Profits Up

PICTON (Staff) — Lake Ontario Cement Company Ltd. has recorded a profit in consolidated earnings in the first nine months of 1972 in comparison with the same figures reported last year.

An unaudited report this year shows for the nine months ending September 30 a net profit after -provision for income taxes of $907,175. In 1971 the figure for the same time period was $796,309.

Sales in the first nine months of 1972 totalled $20,035,554 while in 1971 the comparable figure was $19,781,592.

Dysrhythmia You're Out of Step With Time

By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

TRENTON —Dysrhythmia? Even the word itself sounds confusing, but the definition boils down to the mental and physical dizziness travellers experience as the 24-hour metabolic clock is thrown out of whack moving across time zones at jet speed.

Captain Donald Whiteman, base flight surgeon at CFB Trenton, said it takes the average person between 14 and 15 days to recover from a west - to - east flight to Europe, 11 to 12 days for an east - west flight. Normal south trips do not result in dysrhythmia because the time zone remains constant, he says.

Because Trenton flight crews make regular trips to Lahr, Germany, the situation is explained this way: Flight time from Trenton to Lahr is about 7½ hours. But the clock in Lahr gets five hours ahead. If the plane touches down at Lahr at 8.30 in the morning, German time, it's only 3.30 p.m. in Trenton. Because the Trenton traveller's metabolic clock is adjusted to Trenton time, he or she is both mentally and physically tired.

But the traveller's mind acknowledges Lahr time . . . breakfast, time. Confusing!

Captain Whiteman says it usually takes about three days before the average person can begin functioning at a regular pace, although he can get but and about sooner than this.

Businessmen who occan-hop often find themselves making poor decisions, because of this temporary affliction. Captain Whiteman says on such flights, early morning should be avoided for decision-making, and late afternoon for decisions after western flights, until the body has time to adjust.

Several tips are offered to jet travellers. They won't stop dysrhythmia, but should be aids to a speedier recovery.

Before anticipated trips, the traveller is well advised to begin adjusting to waking and sleeping hours to those of the country to be visited. Not all at once, but gradually. On the flight, mild sedatives such as sleeping pills can help cut down on the physical fatigue as well as mental. Even regular travellers find it difficult to doze off while distracted by jabbering passengers, squalling infants, food, drink and pretty stewardesses.

Also, food and drink consumption en route should be kept to a minimum.

East-west flights are easier to take because hours are gained, not lost as in west-east routes. When flying east, morning flights are easier on the system.

In the case of supersonic flight, metabolic clocks are rarely affected. Dr. Whiteman points out that in the future, trips to London, business meetings, and return flights, can be accomplished in the same day by supersonic flight, and without adjustment of time.

Because air crews make regular trips across longitude barriers, they have learned to adjust to the dysrhthmic condition to some extent. Pre - flight time adaptation and taking it as much rest as possible during flights, are a regular method employed.

Both military and commercial personnel are given time to adjust before flying again.

But of all the flights that can cause this affliction, Dr. Whiteman cited a charter to Australia hop as the worst. Not only do the jets cross 12 time zones, but those who land in a different season to the one they left.

And one final note in the case of dysrhythmia, the temporary state that it really all a question of time: not only are jet travellers affected, but dysrhythmia occurs in police forces, nursing wards and fire departments.

In fact, any job that calls for continuous changes in shifts, can result in this malady.

What the Stars Say

By JEANE DIXON

Wednesday, Nov. 1

Your birthday today: Latent talents surface and demand expression—the challenge is to find a point of proper application. Established relationships are strengthened; recent contacts become very close or fade quickly.

Aries (March 21-April 19): You first about details cluttering your mind when you want to finish grandiose plans. Pay attention to your health and its preservation.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Forget about finances as you can do little for the moment. Gather good companions around you for a pleasant social evening.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Speak up! Any effort to get into the public spotlight succeeds more easily than you expect.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): You get little for yourself until you have first done for others—and generously.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): While you may buy putting on a bold front you must keep in mind the financial underpinnings. It is a good day for decisive, firm action.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be helpful where you are asked, but until this comes to you, reticline in your own best interests.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Avoid haste and snap decisions. Your own affairs are important enough for full time action.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Money you advance now is unlikely to come back in the same form, if ever. Give or endow, but don't lend.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): There are natural complements on any move you overdo today. Use the natural considerate action to strongly favored over any whimsical diversion.

Pisces (Feb. 19 March 20): Other people and their needs seem pressing. Count your blessings, see how much better off you are than you might be.

To Your Good Health

Diabetics Drugs React to Alcohol

By G.C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 58, a widower, and have been a diabetic for nine years. I have been taking two Diabinese tablets and one D.B.I. daily to control my blood sugar.

I joined a widows and widowers club which has get-together dinners and parties. Several times I have taken an alcoholic beverage, just one, and then gotten a reaction. My face gets flushed and my ears get intensely red. My eyes get bloodshot and I have to labor to get my breath and I get sick.

I have been told that I am sensitive to alcohol and to taking oral drugs. Which one drug am I sensitive to? Or does that mean I am sensitive to all drugs taken by mouth?—J.J.

You've been told correctly. Some individuals are sensitive to certain diabetes drugs and get a reaction like yours from even one drink.

This doesn't mean you are sensitive to all drugs taken by mouth. These reactions occur with diabetes drugs of the sulfonylurea family—often happens to mean three of the ones that are commonly used for diabetes.

I am not familiar with any such trouble with D.B.I., but the point is that changing from the Diabinese to any of the others wouldn't do you any good.

Sorry, but you'll have to drink to the ladies with sugar-free soda pop, tea, coffee or something.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: A pediatrician told a friend of mine to put two or three drops of alcohol into each ear of her children before and after they go swimming.

Another doctor told me not to do it but I have forgotten the reason he gave. What is your opinion?—Mrs. J.M.

The advice evidently was offered to prevent "swimmer's ear" or "swimmer's itch," which is infection of the ear canal caused by various bacteria and fungus organism. It's more prevalent in natural ponds and streams than in properly chlorinated swimming pools.

If such an individual reacts, 70 per cent alcohol as well as more specific ear drops are used for treatment.

I would question the value of using alcohol before swimming, as it would soon wash out, and in some cases might be irritating. Its use after swimming would be more reasonable if the individual had such an infection or was susceptible to it.

One recommended precaution is a simple one: Learn to shake your head, from side to side in drain excess water out of the ear. If you get your ears full while swimming.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have a low count of platelets in the blood and would like information.—Mrs. C.C.S.

Platelets are tiny particles in the blood which are important in the process of the clotting process to stop bleeding.

Normally they number 150,000 to 400,000 per cubic millimeter. If the number falls below 80,000, there is a tendency toward bruising or bleeding.

A low count calls for a thorough blood study, as well as a search for infection or allergy or drug toxicity, as a variety of causes may be involved.

Flora MacDonald, Kingston One of 5 Women Elected

By SCOTT BUTTON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Women once again will be far outnumbered by men when the next session of Parliament settles down to business.

Only five women—three Liberals, a New Democrat and a Progressive Conservative—will be seated in the 264-member House of Commons.

The five were the only winners among 71 women candidates competing in Monday night's general election.

Elected from Quebec, a province which will send a woman to the House of Commons for the first time, were three Liberals—Albanie Morin in the riding of Louis-Herbert, Jeanne Sauve in Montreal Abuntsic and Monique Begin in Montreal St. Michel.

The other women elected were Progressive Conservative Flora MacDonald, a landslide winner in the Outside riding of Kingston and the Islands, and New Democrat Grace MacInnis in Vancouver Kingsway, the only woman to sit in the last Commons.

Miss MacDonald, 45, gave Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau and former Liberal finance minister Edgar Benson some tongue-in-cheek credit for her victory.

"Mr. Trudeau did me a great favor by procrastinating so long about the date of the election," she said in an interview. "It gave me more time to put my organization together. It was a big asset."

She said that Mr. Benson, who decided against seeking re-election in the Kingston and the Islands riding, helped her cause because his "unhandling" of the economy while finance minister swung many voters over to the Conservatives.

Miss MacDonald is former executive secretary of the National Progressive Conservatives, an executive director of the Committee for an Independent Canada and a political science instructor at Queen's University.

Among prominent women defeated was Dr. Pauline Jewett, a former Liberal MP, who lost to Ottawa West under the NDP banner.

Off-beat women candidates defeated Monday included Barbara Biley, no party affiliation, who lost in Halifax-East Hants. She is serving a nine-month jail sentence for obstructing police in connection with a raid on a Toronto Marxist-Leninist bookstore.

Four Out of Five Tradeau Aides Win

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

For former aides to Prime Minister Trudeau, venturing into the electoral fray Monday was fine in the East, tough in the West.

Four onetime members of Mr. Trudeau's personal staff were elected and one was defeated. Three of the victories

Davis Pleased

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP) — Ontario Premier William Davis avoided Monday night talking credit for heavy Progressive Conservative gains in his province in the federal election.

"I am really very pleased with the results in the province," he said in an interview, but added: "Tonight is not the night for taking credits."

years, in Quebec, which held them for the Liberals, and one was in New Brunswick.

The last was by Gordon Gibson in Vancouver South, where former Liberal cabinet minister Arthur Laing had an edge of more than 20,000 votes in the 1968 election — to Conservative candidate Bill Clarke. Mr. Gibson was a personal assistant to Mr. Trudeau and ran after Mr. Laing was appointed to the Senate.

In New Brunswick, Romeo LeBlanc, former press secretary in the prime minister's office, captured Westmorland-Kent, a seat held by the Liberals since 1908.

Marc Lalonde, former principal secretary on the Trudeau staff and a close adviser of the prime minister, won in Montreal Outremont. Former assistant Francis Fox took Argenteuil-Deux-Montagnes and Jacques Olivier, a former adviser on labor matters, won in Longueuil.

Switchers Break Even

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Two party switchers went down to defeat in Monday's federal election but two others made it back to the Commons under their new labels.

Paul Hellyer, who switched to the Conservatives after being a Liberal cabinet minister, was re-elected in Toronto Trinity-Rosedale, who left the Conservatives to sit as an independent, was re-elected in Quebec's Joliette riding.

The victims were Perry Ryan, who ran as a Conservative this time in Toronto Spadina where he was elected in 1968 as a Liberal, and Raymond Rock, who made the same kind of move in his Montreal Lachine riding. Both went down to Liberals.

Claude Wagner, the one-time Liberal minister in Quebec who headed the Conservative campaign there this time, won election in St. Hyacinthe.
